ELLEN'S DIARY

Old Tales Hold Mystery Of Ghosts And Witches

So once more in the turn of time, November is pleased to give us a pleasant spell of weather with sun-filled days and starry nights over all... We watched the dusk fall this evening, dropping in a gentle flow into our cup of valley, dimming the mill where it sits by the stream, and the hilltops westward where the amber and rose of the pretty sunset was fading onto the sky's silver - blue. Already the groves and woodlands stood out darkly, as the deepening shadows spread quietly over the fields. A star shone... and another. And the moon. And the night was here.

There was a decided sheen of frost on the car which drew away from our door a few minutes ago, bearing off to their home at a distance, folks who had joined us this evening about our hearthfire... You choose for it from the woodbox, a stick that when burning crackle: a bit of old spruce it may be or the "var" with its balsamy fragrance; or the creamy barked birch, which catches quickly and tunes in pleasantly with night at the window, Tabby's purr on the couch, and the tea - kettle's song. Or perhaps a length of applewood, which only you know is to burn there, to add a certain witchery to the old tales that sometimes come up in the chatting stories of times gone of hitherto silent clocks in some ghostly yarn suddenly striking in a strange omen; of a windless turning, and the sound of a bucket dropping, though there was no one to be seen at the well's curb, to be another "forerunner"; of lights following a course, along which presently and by lanternlight, a procession bearing one who had been the victim of an accident was carried; of sudden and undetermined knockings, "exactly like those which came later", made by the bearer of sad news

And, being neither a believer nor yet an actual unbeliever in the like, yet happy that, in this day and age, wherein many a mystery has been made plain, this is an area as yet pretty well unexpored, and in consequence, still can occasion its thrills. We chuckle inwardly knowing it is this "witches" wood" which is working not unpleasantly its charm! And you remember that even though today you "sang before seven" because the morning was breaking so lovely, it had been all in all, an enjoyable day.

"Safe home!" James called to the visiting car, as it eased down the driveway.

"Safe home" we echoed.

And now the week turns away: another November week. What, think we, do we most remember of it now? We find that our thoughts go out gratefully to that company of folks, including our kin, who are, on our behalf, and most kindly among,

"The Doers Of Little Things."

"The great of the earth have their meed of praise—
Heroes and bards and kings,
But the ones whom the world loves best always
Are the doers of little things.
The ones who with loyal word and deed,
Make home - coming always sweet;
The ones who answer our call of need
With willing, swift - coming feet.
Their names are not of fame's scroll, a part,
Their glory no poet sings,
But the ones who are near to the world's great heart
Are the doers of little things."

Corned Beef Platter Is New England Tradition

"CORNED beef is a tasty, handsome dish as served today in many plush restaurants," observed the Chef.

"In the earlier part of this century, Chef, a corned beef and vegetable dinner was a 'must' in most homes. So much so that a very large and handsome platter was kept solely for corned beef service. Accompanying this were homemade pickles and golden squares of cornmeal bread."

Measurement level; recipes for 6

Corned beef platter
5 lb. brisket corned beef
1 lb. fresh beets, peeled and sliced
12 small whole potatoes, peeled
12 small whole carrots, peeled
1 medium cabbage cut in 6 wedges
2 tsp. caraway seed (optional)
3 tbsp. butter or margarine
Parsley sprigs
Mustard sauce (recipe follows)

Rinse coned beef with cold water. Place in 2-qt kettle. Cover with cold water; bring to boil Remove any froth. Cover. Simmer 3½ to 4 hrs. or until fork - tender. During last hr., remove 2 c. of liquid and cook beets 30 min. in it.

Add potatoes and carrots to cooking corned beef. Dust cabbage with salt and caraway seeds, if desired. Place in colander over the cooking corned beef, cover and let cabbage steam while other vegetables are boiling.

Serve with importance: Slice corned beef across grain; arrange overlapping down center of heated large platter. Arrange vegetables around. Spoon butter over them. Garnish: parsley. Pass hot mustard sauce.

MUSTARD SAUCE: Melt 2 tbsp butter or margarine in saucepan. Add ⅛ tsp. garlic powder (optional). Stir in 1¼ tbsp. flour then gradually 1 c. beef bouillon or water and 1 tsp. broth powder. Stir in 6 tsp. hot table mustard and 1 tsp. each minced chives and parsley.

TOMORROW'S DINNER
Clam - Tomato Bouillon
Seeded Crackers
Corned Beef
and Vegetable Platter
Mustard Sauce Pickles
Cornmeal Bread
Cinnamon Applesauce with
Dropped English Pound Cakes
Coffee or Tea, Milk

DROPPED ENGLISH POUND CAKES

4½ c. sifted flour
3 tsp. double - acting baking powder
1-3 tsp. salt
1½ tsp. ground nutmeg
1½ c sifted powdered sugar
1 c. margarine or any shortening
3 eggs
1 tsp. vanilla
1 c. milk
¼ c. sifted powdered sugar (additional)
½ c. whole nutmeats
½ c. whole raisins

Sift together flour, baking powder, salt, nutmeg and powdered sugar. Chop in margarine with pastry - blender until flaky.

Best eggs until frothy. Add vanilla and milk; beat into first mixture. Stir until smooth.

Drop by generous half-tablespoonfuls onto oiled cooky sheet. Keep 1" apart to allow for spreading. Dust with additional powdered sugar; top each cake with nutmeat or raisin.

Bake 12 min in mod. oven, 375 degrees F. Makes about 60 cakes, which will keep at least a month in close - covered container.

Veterans' Open House On Remembrance Day

Plans for the Remembrance Day dinner at the New Legion Home were completed at the regular meeting of the Montague Ladies Auxiliary held on Thursday, Nov. 4th. The dinner which is open to all veterans and their families will be served after the Remembrance service at the Kings County Memorial Hospital. The business session opened with the president, Mrs. Athol Robertson, in the chair and the minutes were read by the secretary, Mrs. Basil MacKinnon. The treasurer's report was given by Mrs. Faye Fraser. The report showed substantial sums realized from supper and card game projects. It was decided that bridge would be included in future card parties on a trial basis.

It was reported that 16 Ladies Auxiliary Branches had sent donations to the Fraser family of Kinross who were the victims of a recent fire and suffered the loss of all their furniture and household effects.

It was also decided to purchase a wreath to be placed at the Memorial Hospital on Remembrance Day. The president reported progress made on plans for the official opening of the new home on Nov. 25th. Mrs. Anna McKeeman gave a report on the recent Hallowe'en party given by the Montague Auxiliary for the patients at Riverside Hospital and stated that it was very successful. A new lunch committee was appointed consisting of Anna McKeeman, Evelyn Kennedy and Mary Giddings.

A nominating committee composed of Mrs. Flossie Dewar, Mrs. Mary Giddings and Mrs. Ethel Butler was appointed to bring in a new slate of officers for the coming year at the annual meeting next month.

Seven Mile Bay Parish Holds Fall Conference

St. Peter's parish council of the Catholic Women's League were hostesses at the newly renovated parish hall in Seven Mile Bay on Sunday afternoon and evening, November 1st to some 136 representatives from CWL parish councils in the Prince County area.

Mrs. A. P. Mulligan of Kinkora, first vice - president of the provincial council, CWL, and convener of organization, presided at this, the first of three regional Conferences held each fall at a centre in each of the three counties.

Rev. Reginald Macdonald, and Mrs. Robert Carmichael of Seven Mile Bay parish council extended a warm welcome to the delegates

Reports on the National CWL Convention held in Charlottetown in August were given by Iphegenie Arsenault, of Charlottetown — the past president —and Very Rev. George MacCormack of Mt. Stewart, the provincial director.

Mrs. Fred L. Macmillan, the provincial president, gave a detailed job analysis of all the members of the Convention Committee in the preparation for and the carrying out of various functions in connection with this national event. This was followed by the financial statements of the receipts and expenditures given by the convention treasurer, Mrs. Allan J. MacDonald of Charlottetown.

Highlights of the Regional Conference were the talks given by Rev. W. O. Simpson, rector of St Dunstan's Basilica in Charlottetown, and Rev. Faber MacDonald, diocesan vice - chancellor, who dealt with the liturgical renewal.

Questions formulated by those in attendance while in discussion groups were later answered by the special speakers.

On display at the conference were the beautiful chalice and ciborium, presented to the Sisters of St. Martha for the new Motherhouse in Charlottetown by the provincial council of the CWL.

The thanks of the gathering were expressed to the pastor and members of the Seven Mile Bay Catholic Women's League, as well as to the speakers, by Mrs. Austin Roberts, president of the Kinkora parish council.

Following supper which was provided by the hostess parish council, delegates attended Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament celebrated by Father MacDonald in the parish church before the evening session reconvened.

BRISTOL

John R. O'Brien, veteran of the sea lanes, has entered the Charlottetown Hospital for treatment. A veteran of World War I, Mr. O'Brien also served on the staff of Camphill Hospital for 25 years and this is the first time he has been in a hospital as a patient.

John McInnis, fisheries officer here for a number of years, has been a patient in Charlottetown Hospital for several months. Latest reports say he is improving.

J.B. Jay, post master, who has suffered two heart attacks, has sprung back to his good health again and back in the saddle as auctioneer at farm sales in this vicinity.

The regular Friday night dances in the village hall are growing more popular and drawing bigger crowds each week.

Mrs. Eldon Drake of Bristol, won the trip to the sunny south in the Guardian contest.

At the annual meeting of the Morell Credit Union recently it was stated that this once little union which started with so few families has grown to a full-time business with a full-time manager, with more members coming in all the time. Frank Dunn and Jerome O'Brien were the the top men when the union was formed here, and many thought it was just another fad that would soon pass on. Credit for the growth of the union here must be given to some of the older class who stayed with the project all through the years.

Fred Anderson is in poor health at present. Mr. Anderson operated a retail business in the village for a number of years before going to the city to reside.

Mr. and Mrs. Freman Jay and son, were Friday visitors to the city. Mr. Jay is owner and manager of Jay's Service Station and entered the business as a boy.

M.J O'Brien, who resides alone on the farm in the Green Meadows section here says he plans to reside with his daughter, Mrs. Dan MacDonald, at St. Peters for the winter months.

Jack O'Neill, who has been in the hospital for quite some time, is much improved.

BELL IN MEMORY

BOOTLE, England (CP) — The ship's bell of the naval sloop Starling, which once sank six German U-boats in 20 days, is to be presented to this town's council, the ship's wartime port.

DOGGY COMFORT

OSTERSUND, Sweden (AP)—City council here has decided to build a dogs' room in a downtown park. It is to be a 5-by-5-foot sandbox with a central stone pillar. It will have a sign over it saying "for your friend the dog." Nine more are being considered.

MARY HAWORTH

Married For 10 Years; Still Terribly Immature

Dear Mary Haworth: Please don't tell me to see a psychiatrist. My town has only two such doctors and I am acquainted with both of them and their families. I couldn't confide in them.

The basis of my problem is fear I have no idea how to cope with it. I must be terribly immature, as I live in fear of losing my parents, not only because I love them but also because I feel I couldn't survive without their devotion and praise.

I am 30, married 10 years, and have three well adjusted children I don't know how my husband puts up with me. Compliments lift my spirits temporarily, but soon I am depressed again, feeling that the whole world scorns me.

I want so much to be liked. I do like people and long to be a part of things; but I don't know how.

Given opportunity, I can build a friendship with one person, but it soon fizzles out when we are in a group of more than two. Then I simply freeze up. can hardly speak or move, and just sit and watch others grow bored with my shy stupidity.

Most social events lead to tears for me, either in the powder room or later in my pillow. Afterward I am downcast and irritable for days...

At times I've embarked on self- improvement projects, hoping to build up confidence, but never see them through, due to my miserable fifth-wheel feelings.

Should I just stop torturing myself with this stage fright at every encounter with more than one person? Or should I give up social effort and be content with family and home life? I seriously doubt you can help me, but will you please try—P.C.

Dear P.C.: "There are none so blind as those who will not see," a proverb says. And I think it may apply to you.

For example, you mention in your letter (here condensed) that you faithfully read and enjoy this column and respect its insights.

If so, how have you failed to note and explore the recurring reference to Dr. E.M. Abrahamson and A. W. Pezet's book "Body, Mind and Sugar" (Holt, Rinehart and Winston, Inc.) as possibly helpful reading for persons afflicted with the particular pattern of nervous anxiety that you describe

As you flinch from discussing your emotional tensions with your local psychiatrist friends, my advice is to get in touch with a first-rate diagnostic specialist, for a comprehensive physical checkout, paying specific attention to the question of your customary blood sugar level.

If the check-out finds you in good health physically but with the nervous stress as irksome as ever, then ask the examining physician if pychiatric or anaytic counsel is indicated. If his answer is yes, then give it a try.

If you insist upon bypassing the local pychiatrists, take your problem to a competent therapist in another town and keep to a regular schedule (perhaps on a once-a-week basis) until you feel better.

But suppose your medical adviser discourages the idea of psychiatric therapy Or suppose you can't arrnage for out- of-town treatment What then?

In that case, you will have to take yourself in hand, and, with God's help, show your fear who is boss, by courageously doing what you long to do, no matter how frightened you feel in the process.

For moral reinforcement in that endeavor, read such books as Agnes Sanford's "The Healing Light" (Macalaster Park); or Evelyn Underhill's "Fruits of the Spirit" (Longmans, Green); or Dr. Abraham Low's "Mental Health Through Will Training" (Christopher publishers).—M.H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Guardian.

READY BY 1970?

BRIGHTON, England (CP)—The channel tunnel linking England and France could be ready by 1970, said British travel agents attending a convention here. The proposed tunnel is expected to cost £160,000,000.
