ATTLEE CHARGES

In Washington, the State Department acknowledged Britain had not been told about the attack in advance, and informed officials said they understood the Defence Department had not consulted Britain either. A state department spokesman said the decision to bomb the power plants was considered "entirely a military decision within the framework of the existing policy." Earlier State Department officials told reporters that Britain had been informed in advance.

Attlee said he would not like to estimate whether the action had lessened the chances of an armistice, adding, "If this bombing is intolerable to the Communists they really have the remedy in their own hands. An armistice can be concluded tomorrow on terms which satisfy the honor and interests of both sides if the Communists want it."

Attlee said the power plants supplied not only North Korea but part of Manchuria in Red China and Siberia in Russia, and there seemed to be "no overwhelming reason for the attack upon them at the present time."

Armistice talks had narrowed down to the question of Red prisoners to be repatriated, he said, and "there is nothing to suggest that there is an attack on these power stations."

"There may be some particular military reasons but the actual fact is this is going to cause misery and distress to hundreds of thousands of civilians who are not in the fighting at all."

Step Nearer General War
"I think it will exacerbate (irritate) feelings and lessen the chances of an armistice and may lead us dangerously nearer to a general conflagration in the East, and if that happens no one knows where it might stop."

Attlee said that "it may be that the Americans are saying, 'We are tired of these long drawn-out negotiations. We think it is time we should strike hard in the hope of coming to some decision.'"

If that were the case, he declared, it represented a change in policy and "the British Government were entitled to have the fullest information to enable them to have their own views expressed on an opinion as to whether this was warranted."

Eden said the power stations were "perfectly legitimate military targets—I do not think there should be any challenge whatever."

trajectory bombs fired at fairly close range. Ordinarily the "cough" of their departure from the mortars might have been heard but probably it was drowned in the noise of the R.C.H.A. fire.

At first the explosions were thought to have been caused by mines, perhaps electrically controlled from an observation post, but the type of wounds inflicted by the fragments, contradicted that theory.

Bull was among the wounded—hit relatively lightly in five places. Two men had been wounded by mortar fire on the way out, and the new casualties so reduced Bull's fighting strength that he decided to collect his wounded and organize a withdrawal.

He ignored his own injuries, gathered his men together, shepherded them out—not bothered by the enemy—and three hours and 45 minutes later it had a group of 100 men.

The last casualties were brought in with the rear-guard detail commanded by Cpl. Ray G. Reading of Innisfail, Alta. Three more men had been wounded on the way back by mortar shrapnel. Those mortars were silenced by counter-battery fire from the R.C.H.A.

Only when his men were safely back in the Patricia's lines did Bull seek medical attention. He was evacuated by stretcher.

Hay meadows promise bounteous crops—as good as ever before. Early sown grain shows remarkable growth. The majority of farmers are going very light on the potato acreage. Heavy Fire Loss Early Yesterday At Tignish

A fire at Tignish early yesterday morning levelled the Canadian Legion Hall and a large boarding house owned and operated by Mrs. Frank Phee. Three small buildings in the rear of the larger buildings were also destroyed.

The outbreak was first noticed by Jerry LeClair, lobster fisherman, who arrived about 3.30 a.m. to attend to his fishing gear. He quickly spread the alarm and occupants of the house, Mrs. Phee, her three children, and Mrs. Mary A'Hearn were aroused from their sleep and rushed to safety as the upstairs portion of the two and a half storey building burst into flames. Only the furniture and other contents of the first floor were saved.

Nothing was saved from the Legion hall where the fire was thought to have started, as the interior of the building was in flames when the large crowd gathered. The hall was unoccupied, having been locked up at 12 midnight following a meeting of Legion members.

The Tignish fire equipment was on hand and prevented the flames from spreading to two nearby residences of Thaddeus Perry and Mrs. Claude LeClair.

The Legion Hall and equipment was valued at about $8,000 and the house at a similar amount, with both partially covered by insurance.

The hall was a landmark of the village, having at one time being the Tignish Provincial Bank, and was located almost directly across from the Post Office.

The boarding house was bought by Mrs. Phee only two weeks ago from Mrs. Mary A'Hearn, who was still living there.

The Legion executive met yesterday morning with the president, Claude Kinch, presiding and decided to rebuild on the old site. For the time being the Legion meetings, dances and shows will be held in a warehouse belonging to Morris Bernard and Co. Ltd.

William Pickering of Summerside, who has been running shows in the Legion Hall for some time, lost a 110-volt power plant valued at approximately $800. A somewhat similar plant was also reported lost in the boarding house. However, Mr. Pickering plans to continue his shows in the leased warehouse.

The Alberton Fire Department was notified of the outbreak but was unable to respond owing to a technical failure in the fire truck, it was reported.

President Truman Vetoes U. S. Immigration Bill

By Willard H. Mobley
WASHINGTON, June 25 (AP)—President Truman today vetoed a bill revising all United States immigration and naturalization laws.

He denounced as a threat to both United States strength at home and the country's moral leadership the bill's call for adhering to these same proportions in admitting future immigrants.

"This quota system—always based upon assumptions at variance with our American ideals—long since out of date and more than ever unrealistic in the face of present world conditions," Truman said.

Truman added that the overall limit of 154,668 immigrants a year is itself too small to "keep up with the growing needs of our nation for manpower to maintain the strength and vigor of our economy."

The bill, which was the centre of one of the hottest recent fights in congress, was sponsored jointly by Senator Pat McCarran (Dem. Nev.), chairman of the senate judiciary committee, and Representative Francis Walter (Dem. Pa.).

He hit hardest at the basic theory of the bill which is maintenance of the national-origins quota system in effect since 1924. This system is based on the 1920 census which determined what proportion of the U.S. population came originally from each foreign country. The system calls for adhering to these same proportions in admitting future immigrants.

The biggest benefit he saw in the measure was its provision removing the present bar to naturalization of orientals and assigning small quotas to Far East countries.

"But now this most desirable provision comes before me embedded in a mass of legislation which would perpetuate injustice of long standing against many other nations of the world, hamper the efforts we are making to rally men of the east and west alike to the cause of freedom, and intensify the repressive and inhuman aspects of our immigration procedures," Truman said in a seven-page message to congress.

Senate Renews Plea To Escape Divorce Duties

OTTAWA, June 25 (CP)—The senate divorce committee today renewed its plea that parliament find some other way to dissolve marriages contracted in Quebec and Newfoundland than by act of parliament.

The committee's final report, tabled by Senator W. M. Aeslin (PC-Saskatchewan), said 313 divorce petitions were recommended for parliamentary approval—the second highest number recommended at one session and the second time since the war parliament has been asked to approve more than 300 divorces.

The record was set in the 1947 session when 348 marriages were dissolved for residents of the two provinces, the only provinces without divorce courts. In two sessions of parliament in 1949, 350 divorces were granted.

The report said the committee "regrets that parliament has not seen fit to solve the problem of parliamentary divorce by setting up suitable courts or tribunals before which the numerous cases from Quebec and Newfoundland could be heard. It is hoped that something will be done in that regard in the near future."

The report said that of 372 applications for divorce, two were rejected, seven withdrawn and 50 not proceeded with. Three divorces were recommended from Newfoundland and 310 from Quebec.

Fees collected totalled $63,730 about $5,000 more than in 1951 when 294 divorces were granted.

Wives outnumbered husbands in applying for divorces by 224 to 89.

A comparison between husbands and wives seeking divorce in all of Canada between 1947 and 1951 showed that wives were in the majority in all five years.

The report included figures showing that the number of divorces in Canada since 1947 declined steadily from 8,189 to 5,163 in 1951.

Ontario granted the greatest number of divorces last year at 2,002 and showed a steady decline since 1947 when 3,509 marriages were dissolved. British Columbia was second with 1,339 last year, also a decline from 1,826 in 1947.

Alberta was third with 889 last year, up 55 from 1950 compared with the five-year peak of 881 in 1947. Manitoba granted 361 divorces in 1951, an increase of 52 over 1950 but below the five-year peak of 665 in 1947.

Quebec followed with 290 in 1951, an increase of 56 over 1950 but below the five-year peak of 350 in 1949. Saskatchewan granted 225 divorces last year following a steady five-year decline from 509 in 1947.

Nova Scotia, where divorces dipped sharply to 78 in 1948 from a five-year peak of 207 in 1947, granted 187 last year, a drop of 12 compared with 1950. New Brunswick continued a steady decline to 156 last year from the amount of 207 in 1947.

It has also been officially decided that the playoffs in this Province will be held on Friday and Saturday, January 30th and 31st, 1953.

The Legion executive met yesterday morning with the president, Claude Kinch, presiding and decided to rebuild on the old site. For the time being the Legion meetings, dances and shows will be held in a warehouse belonging to Morris Bernard and Co. Ltd.

William Pickering of Summerside, who has been running shows in the Legion Hall for some time, lost a 110-volt power plant valued at approximately $800. Borden-Tryon Section Of Highway To Be Paved By Summerside Company

A decision has been made to pave the Borden-Tryon section of the Trans-Canada Highway with asphalt and a contract has been let to Curran and Briggs Ltd. of Summerside, it was learned yesterday.

Tenders for this job were called last fall but no firm contract was granted. This spring contractors were asked to tender on the job again using cement instead of asphalt, but it is understood that it was decided when the tenders were received that this would be too expensive and a contract was awarded for asphalt.

Officials of Curran and Briggs Ltd. said yesterday that they would commence the work as soon as they can get ready, likely in about 10 days. They said that before beginning work on the Borden-Tryon section, which is about 10 miles long, they will fill in two gaps left last year when the portion of the road connecting Tryon and Bonshaw was paved. These gaps are at the DeStable Bridge and Crapaud Bridge.

The Curran and Briggs plant is now located at Albany and the work will be carried on from this point.—S

Ottawa Urged To Develop Highways For Defence Purposes

OTTAWA, June 25 (CP)—The government was urged in the Commons today to share in development of highways for defence purposes.

Western members—including some Liberals—said more and better highways are needed for defence and the Federal Government should consult with the provinces on the possibility of joint projects.

Defence Minister Claxton said his department is interested in anything to improve communications but that it has neither the responsibility nor the money for building military roads. Highways were the responsibility of the provinces and the municipalities.

While the Federal Government had contributed towards the Trans-Canada Highway, that road had national significance. The Alaska Highway—a military road—was maintained because it had no civilian significance.

Other Developments
Apart from the highway-development debate, there were these developments during discussion of Mr. Claxton's estimates:
1. The Minister said Canada may contribute some minesweepers—possibly five—to the North Atlantic Treaty Allies. It would be this country's first naval contribution.

2. Lt.-Col. Douglas Harkness (PC—Calgary East) suggested more energetic recruiting of the three reserve forces, declaring they are a "weakness" in Canada's defence set-up.

3. Mr. Claxton said it is intended to open the proposed French-speaking defence college at St. John's, Que., within a year. An estimated 100 students would be enrolled at the start.

4. Mr. Claxton said the government does not intend at present to increase the air-training program beyond the 32 training stations now operating.

The Commons also took a major step towards providing pensions for members, giving first reading to a bill that would authorize them up to a maximum of $3,000 a year. The plan met general support from all parties and the only objectors were E. D. Fulton (PC—Kamloops) and Howard Green (PC—Vancouver-Quadra).

Justice Minister Garson told the House that the government will not prosecute Dr. James Endicott, head of the Leftist Peace Congress, for statements that the United Nations are using germ warfare in Korea. Mr. Garson suggested that would merely lend an aura of martyrdom to the Toronto clergyman.
