BOB HOPE AMAZES WITH TALENTS WON IN VAUDEVILLE ERA

Bob Hope's fine dramatic performance in "The Seven Little Foys," hailed by critics and audiences everywhere, should come as no surprise to those who know his early background. In the glare of his fabulous position at the top of the entertainment world, the lean years are easily forgotten, but those years laid the solid foundation which made his many-faceted portrayal of "The Seven Little Foys" possible.

In the delightful Vista Vision, Technicolor film, now at the Capitol Theatre, Summerside, Hope sings, dances, engages in a kind of humor new for him, and in a first biographical role, plays a straight dramatic part with deep understanding and emotion. He comes honestly by all these talents.

His early show business act, which he seasoned over a period of tough years on the rugged vaudeville circuit, featured his hooping, after which he literally stumbled upon the gag routine that eventually took him to the pinnacle as the world's best known funnyman. But it was his singing in "Roberta" that gained him his foothold in Hollywood and his rendition of "Thanks For the Memory" in Paramount's "The Big Broadcast of 1938" that kept him there.

There is no doubt, however, about the origin of his deep understanding of the Eddie Foy role. Hope would be the first to lay it at the door of those lean vaudeville years.

Protestant Orphanage Choir At RCAF Station

On Sunday afternoon, October 16th, a choir from the Protestant Orphanage at Mount Herbert, P. E. I., visited R. C. A. F. Station Summerside as guests of the Protestant Ladies Chapel Guild. The choir, under direction of the orphanage matron, Mrs. Wright, numbered 26 children between six and sixteen years of age. Arriving at R. C. A. F. Station Summerside, at 10.30 a.m., the choir took part in the regular 11.00 o'clock church service conducted by F. L. Hugh Christmas, the Protestant chaplain. During the service, which was broadcast over the air by CJRW from Summerside, the children sang several hymns "God Be In My Heart," "The Lord's My Shepherd" and "Can A Little Child Like Me?" being a few of the reditions. Miss Janet Ives sang solo "I Love To Tell The Story". Upon conclusion of the morning church service the children were introduced to the members of the Chapel Guild and accompanied them to their homes for lunch. The children returned to the Protestant Chapel where they boarded an R. C. A. F. bus for a tour of the station. The outing, the first of its kind undertaken by the Chapel Guild, gave the members of the orphanage an opportunity to become better acquainted with the children. The Protestant Guild have also taken over, as one of their projects, the support of the nursery at the Mount Herbert Orphanage. Upon completion of the station farewells and departed for Mount Herbert at approximately 3.30 p.m.

Order Inquest In Highway Death Of Summerside Man

As the body of 84-year-old Thomas Bishop of Summerside lay on the main highway at Mt. Pleasant, due to reasons not yet established, a car driven by Clifford Livingstone of O'Leary area passed over it about 6.30 on Saturday evening. A coroner's jury was empanelled by Dr. W. E. Callaghan to inquire into the cause of death of the aged man and R.C.M.P. members of the Charlottetown and Alberton detachments began an inquiry into the fatality and an investigation of reasons which might have caused his body to be lying across the highway when run over by the Livingston car.

The accident occurred just west of the Mt. Pleasant rink at a point opposite the home of Cecil Stewart. Mr. Livingston, driving a 1954 sedan was proceeding westward from Summerside and was accompanied by Mr. John Moreshead of O'Leary and Russell Hardy of Montrose and approaching from the opposite direction was a vehicle driven by Murdoch Stewart of Conway. The body of the deceased, dressed in dark clothing lay across the highway and in the darkness of night was not observed by Mr. Livingston until a moment before impact.

Several yards east of the body were three sections of a broken tobacco pipe, believed to have belonged to the late Mr. Bishop. His shoes were lying on the road on each side of the body. Towards the center of the highway were two patches of blood and there were tire skid marks a few feet from the body and extending some distance eastward. Apparent injuries to the deceased included broken legs, one or both arms broken and injuries to the face and head.

After examination of the body by the coroner and investigation of the accident by the R.C.M.P., the body was removed to the Bowness Funeral Home in Summerside from where it is understood that it will be transferred to Charlottetown today for an autopsy. It is understood that the deceased had been employed in sharpening saws at a Summerside construction firm for some days last week and had been given a drive home by Mr. Eddie Hutchinson of Pleasant area to a point on the main highway where a road leads to Ellerslie. From here Mr. Bishop had presumably walked westward about a half mile on the main highway to a point where his body was found. It is reported that he had relatives in the Mt. Pleasant area.

The late Mr. Bishop resided on Water Street West, in Summerside, having been predeceased by his wife. It is reported that there are no children and that his next of kin is a brother, the Rev. Robert Bishop of Portland, Oregon. Members of the coroner's jury are: Clinton MacLeod, Springhill (foreman); Cecil James Stewart, Mt. Pleasant; Francis Lloyd MacKinnon, Northam; Kenneth Leroy Inman, Northam; Erville Edward Essery, Mt. Pleasant; Orville Phillip Williams, Tyne Valley; Alvah Jelly, O'Leary.

Eskimo Children Hear Nfld. School Programs

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—While huskies howl and blizzards rage in winter, children of the north cluster around their radios in Labrador village classrooms to listen to some of the most unusual school broadcasts on the air. Newfoundland school programs started going into the northland this year, and among other things the youngsters get English composition lessons—in the jaw-breaking Eskimo tongue.

Eskimo children taught by Moravian missionaries in Labrador however are literate in English, and get the school broadcasts in both languages. Other Eskimos, and Indian children, start from scratch.

After mastering his native tongue an Eskimo child shouldn't have much trouble with any other language. Eskimo has a grammar that makes Latin look like basic English. Translating the Bible was one of the first tasks of the Moravians, who came to Labrador 150 years ago.

It's a slow, deliberate speech, and almost has to be. But it suits the passive, unemotional nature of most Eskimos. The Eskimos in Labrador are Protestants, while the Indians are Roman Catholics. The latter are taught by Oblate missionaries from Quebec, led by Father Pierson, a Belgian.

The Labrador broadcasts are translated into Eskimo by Rev. F. W. Peacock, chief of the Moravian missions with headquarters at Nain.

U.S. Fears War In Middle East

WASHINGTON (AP)—American officials said Thursday they expect Russia to move quickly in getting arms to Egypt, possibly at cut-Middle East tensions toward a crisis.

They saw an explosion of the Palestine truce into Arab-Israeli war as a definite possibility when Red Czechoslovakia starts delivery on its cannon-for-cotton deal with Egypt.

The national security council, top policy-making body of the U.S. government, took up the question at its secret session Thursday presiding in the absence of President Eisenhower.

Britain, the United States and France, it was learned, will press Russia informally at the Oct. 27 foreign ministers meeting in Geneva on the Middle East arms question. This would follow up an approach to Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov at New York two weeks ago.

Address: Dear folks, it is hard to realize that twenty-five years have passed since that memorable night when you pledged yourselves one to the other at the old homestead just south of the beautiful Wilnot River. Since that time you together have founded a true home where your family and friends are glad to come and are always assured of a warm welcome. Your interests have not all been centered in your home. Your church has ever been one of your chief concerns. You have always been deeply interested in any worthwhile projects in your home community and your good judgment and advice have been a great assistance on many occasions.

Providence has been very kind to you in keeping you both youthful not only in appearance but also in spirits, and now that you are taking life easier, we hope that you will have many happy years ahead.

We will not tire you with a lengthy address, but we want to express a small way, the esteem in which you are held. We feel our gifts to you are small. But our hearts are full of love and hope that God will fill the gap with blessings from above.

When evening comes and twilight here our greatest hope is strength in perfect wedded bliss. Please accept these gifts from your many loving relatives and friends.
