DEATH BY DROWNING. Two Minutes Under Water Sufficient to Cause Fatal Unconsciousness.

Drowning is a quicker death than most people suppose. Insensibility is said to begin in about one minute, and fatal unconsciousness generally supervenes in the neighborhood of two. Even practiced divers cannot remain under water more than a minute and a half, and it is almost fatal to remain beneath the surface longer than that.

At Navarino, where there are many expert divers who plunge into the sea after sponges, not one was found who could remain under water for two minutes. In the Red Sea the Arab divers generally remain down one and a quarter minutes, while at Ceylon the pearl fishers can seldom stay below for even one minute. There is a case on record at Falmouth, England, where a diver had descended eighty feet and on giving out signal was drawn up slowly so it was two minutes before he reached the surface. Blood ran from his ears and nose and he was insensible. He died without speaking.

Insensibility, however, does not always involve death, for in many cases a person may be resuscitated by the use of energetic measures. The drowning of people who have been under water for five consecutive minutes is, however, considered doubtful by physicians. There have been extraordinary cases, nevertheless, where persons have been brought back to life after having been submerged for fifteen or twenty minutes, but it is probable that they have come to the surface again, and again during that time. - New York Journal.

A Telephonic Steer. A forecast of the method in which future international difference may possibly be settled is seen in a story from Cuba, and fighting with bullets and sword sent very brutal by contrast. It is told how an insurrectionist officer in command of a rebel regiment, arrived at the outskirts of a town defended by a Spanish garrison. Instead of exchanging the usual compliments of insurrectionist warfare in the shape of a shower of bullets, and the opening up of his artillery, he adopted the tactics of the modern prize fighter. Managing to secure a connection with a long-distance telephone line, he asked to be switched on to the commander of the garrison. When the Spanish commander responded, he was at once summoned to surrender. As a matter of course, his first reply to this demand was that very man in the garrison would shed his blood, scarlet with the yield to the enemies of Spain. When this stage was passed, which did not take long, the Cuban insurgent asked the Spanish commander to exchange life blood on both sides if the question could be calmly discussed. This was eventually done, and after a comparison of the relative strength of the two forces, the rebel chief was able to convince the commander of the garrison that he had fallen into toils from which there was no escape, and that the only alternative to certain death was capitulation. It was clearly a case of military chess, and the Spaniard, seeing that the fates were against him, agreed to surrender. An hour after ringing off the telephone, the two officers were gravely saluting each other in the Plaza, and the investment of the city was more like the celebration of a feast day than the incursion of a dreaded enemy.

MOTHER'S OUTING.

HER DAYS "OFF" MUST BE FREE FROM WORRY. Leave the Children at Home and Forget That There is Such a Task as Housekeeping - Only in This Way Will Tired Mothers and Nerves Receive the Needed Rest.

It is at this season that the largest number of people are impelled by necessity or desire to seek change of scenes of some sort. Among the number are many families whose purses sanction a wholesale flight whithersoever they list, and these must be indeed unloving and ungrateful if they do not count themselves fortunate. In some cases the family may have an occasional outing, while the domestic duties are left to the hands of the ever-fleeting dollar keep the pater familias at his post from year to year with scarcely an interval of recreation. There are not a few weary, overworked or ailing housemothers who promise themselves a visit to friends or kindred as a rest, and to renew old ties. These women deserve universal sympathy, so great a task do they set themselves. I am perfectly convinced that if Job's wife instead of Job had been the subject selected for the supreme test of endurance she would never have been tried in the shape of boils. She would have needed nothing worse than a particularly aggravated case of the modern woman's ailment, if she had but had the off to visit her old father and mother or somebody else, or maybe, just a plain case of 10 days at the "Springs" for her nervous system. It is not her own goodness, would, on a pinch, have furnished a little opposition and have gone about with his hand in his pocket, naming over his last coat a few well-earned coins of new tenets every 40 years like a modern. Whoever proves the contrary will establish the fact that since Job's time men have grown, worse instead of better, and the Bible is proof enough of that.

Even a short, genuine rest of both body and mind furnishes a housemother with thoughts and strength on which to live among her petty cares for months to come. Why, oh, why, then, does she, when, with a strong pull on her part, she has started out for her own pleasure - hamper herself by carrying with her the younger children, who would be sure to push her out of the house - she who is so much happier at home? You may wish for her where you will, and just in preparation to her need for rest and peace, will your claims say the least, find her nerves worn to a frazzle by the preparations she found necessary to leave home and for making the little ones the lot of things they are not used to. I am not intruding against the babies, says a writer in the Philadelphia Ledger. Instead, plead their cause while I plead their mother's. It is not her own goodness, would, on a pinch, have furnished a little opposition and have gone about with his hand in his pocket, naming over his last coat a few well-earned coins of new tenets every 40 years like a modern. Whoever proves the contrary will establish the fact that since Job's time men have grown, worse instead of better, and the Bible is proof enough of that.
