

NEWSY NOTES

By J. A. Clark, D.Sc. LA PAZ.

We had a fairly rough trip from Oruro to La Paz on September 10th. The magnificent, snow-covered Illimani was on our right, and further north the highest peak in Bolivia, Illampu, beyond Achaand that the body adjusted itself to meet them. He had resigned and left the work three times; but had been recalled by the urgent needs of La Paz. Now, however, though past 70, he would have to resign and return to North America, so that he could earn enough for retirement.

When west of Illimani, in the great gorge cut in many centuries ago in the debris from a former glacial age, we saw some farms and gardens, and a little later, the city of La Paz spread out over the valley, and in places it is built up on the sloping sides of the gorge, which drops 1500 to 2,000 feet from the edge of the altiplano.

As we approached the airport, the antennae of the two radio stations were seen near the edge of the alto. They have to be moved, as they are now considered dangerous to incoming planes. We passed near the site where the Southern Cross radio antennae will be located on a spur of the cliff.

On Saturday, September 11th, we drove south through the La Paz valley and passed many fine residences. One was built by a sea captain in the shape of a ship with bow, stern, masts and port holes; it had everything shipshape, including a life preserver on the bridge. There were a number of well kept small farms along the river; on these we could see some very good Holstein and other pure bred dairy cattle.

We called at the American Clinic, a real first class 65 bed hospital. The Superintendent was in his shirt sleeves, and when I asked if he had central heat, he just laughed. We suggested that the temperature was 60 F; he did not think it was as warm as that, and mentioned that one became accustomed to the cool conditions

Outstanding Rural Youth Program At Amherst Fair

Critics of today's teen-age set should take a look at the Rural Youth Program at the Maritime Winter Fair in Amherst this year, to note just how well prepared the youngsters already are to run their own farms.

Healthy and enthusiastic competitions keep the teen-age farmers on their toes, and a wide variety of events has been arranged to test the aptitudes and interests of the groups.

Arriving in Amherst Thursday evening in order to be ready to start their judging contests early the following morning, 150 representatives of some 900 Maritime 4-H Clubs, having a total membership of 12,000, the Rural Youth Groups are facing a busy schedule.

A public speaking contest will be held Friday evening at 6.30, co-sponsored by the Amherst Rotary Club and the Rural Youth Committee. The subjects of address will center on some aspect of agricultural life in the Maritimes.

Some 150 members will take over the arena program Saturday evening, parading into the ring to represent the various projects their club sponsor in the three Maritime provinces.

Special emphasis this year will be placed on the work of the Garment Clubs, and the clothing they have made. Twelve or 15 models will show dresses they have made during the year, and will illustrate all types of frocks worn from morning to evening, including the parade with evening dresses.

On the Rural Youth Groups' schedule are the judging contests in livestock, crops and poultry. They also will be tested in fitting and showing horses. One hour is allotted for fitting, after which they are judged on their ability in this process and on showing horses.

Mr. Charles Douglas, Truro, is chairman of the committee, assisted by Jack Bremner of Fredericton and Maurice Descon of Charlottetown.

Judging the young people on their livestock judging are: E. S. Manning, Toronto, president of the Canadian Council of 4-H Clubs; E. P. Pincus of the Federal Department of Agriculture, Ottawa; Adrian Morin of St. Hyacinthe, Que.; and L. J. Bellefleur of St. Charles de Caplan, and M. W. Chespeuk of Moncton.

Crops judges will be Thomas Chaisson of Fredericton; J. E. McIntyre of Moncton and Gustave Gaudet of East St. Josephs.

Poultry judge will be L. Wood of Fredericton.

Thoughts For Our Time

By His Eminence Cardinal McGuigan

(Copyright)

In a recent fund-raising campaign for an eminently worthy cause, there was presented to the public a rather unusual slogan. People were urged to give all they could spare — "and feel good inside."

Certainly the publicity directors of the campaign had no intention of implying that the ultimate purpose of charity is a pleasurable feeling in the pit of the stomach. Nonetheless they apparently felt, and probably correctly so, that a large number of people would be swayed by such a motive.

This state of mind is another example of modern topsy-turvy thinking. No one, of course, will deny the common experience that when we perform a specific act of virtue, whether it be of patience, or justice, or fraternal charity, there occurs a kind of natural pleasure as a result. This is akin to the natural pleasure which arises from the proper exercise of bodily functions, such as eating and sleeping.

But the functions of the body are primarily intended not for the resulting pleasure, but for the well-being of the body; and likewise the practice of virtue aims at the well-being of the soul. We should practise virtue not in order to feel good, but in order to be good, and that for the sake of God.

GIVING SELF

This is especially evident in the case of the virtue of charity, which is basically a giving — a movement away from self and toward God. Pure charity, by which we love God, consists in a complete giving of self. Fraternal charity, by which we love our neighbor for the sake of God, has exactly the same ideal: "Greater love than this no man hath, that a man lay down his life for his friends." Charity and self are at opposite poles. To the measure that self-love prompts our actions, to that extent do we lack true charity.

How far has the modern concept of charity strayed from that outlined above? Charity today means only fraternal charity, and that divorced from any notion of God. Only one basic notion has been retained — that charity is a form of giving. The motive of the giving seems to have no bearing on the case.

But if the motive for our giving is not the love of God, then we are not really doing a charitable work. The man of true charity does not contribute to a slum-clearance campaign for the reason that the slums offend his eyes or his nose. He does not support hospitals or orphanages or homes for the aged merely from motives of civic pride or self-esteem, or from sheer sentimentality. These can never be the basis of Christian charity. We must love our neighbor as ourselves, not for ourselves.

FOR GOD'S SAKE

True Christian charity requires that we love our neighbor for the sake of God. The Christian gives aid to the poor, the sick and the helpless because these persons are precious in the eyes of God. They are made in God's own image, and have been redeemed by the blood of His Son. They are the very sons of God, and brothers of Christ. It is reasons such as these which motivate Christian fraternal charity, of which modern pagan charity is but a sickly shadow.

If every dollar given to the Red Feather Campaign this year were given out of motives of pure Christian charity, there might be no effect whatsoever on the quality of the services which those dollars supply. But the effect on the given would be beyond measure. The Providence of God rules all things. And it is quite conceivable that one reason for which He permits poverty and sickness and helplessness in our community, is so that we may have the opportunity to practise fraternal charity, and so to grow in the love of God.

$125 ZENITH HEARING AID BETTER BUY THAN AIDS AVERAGING $268!

SCIENTIFIC TESTS PROVE that the Zenith—priced at less than 1/2 as much—offers equivalent performance for 1/2 the average operating and upkeep cost!

United States Testing Company, Inc. Reveals Significant Facts About Hearing Aid Quality and Prices! Comparison chart showing Zenith 'Royal-T' at $125.00 and other brands at $268.00.

ZENITH has always said you can pay up to $300 or more but you can't buy a finer hearing aid than a Zenith. To support this statement, Zenith requested the United States Testing Company to purchase on the open market two Zenith Hearing Aids and two of each of America's five foremost competitive brands of transistor hearing aids, and to test them thoroughly.

Each of the instruments was subjected to a series of rigorous tests for quality, performance and economy. The results, contained in Report No. E-9158, dated September 13, 1954, tell us:

1. Despite the huge difference in price, U. S. Testing Company reported, "The Zenith 'Royal-T' was equal to the other 5 brands in design, choice of materials and components, and in workmanship."

2. Here's how Zenith compared with the average of the other five brands in bringing you a full measure of acoustic power performance:

Acoustic output ZENITH 135 db. OTHERS 132 db. Maximum acoustic gain ZENITH 64 db. OTHERS 60.8 db. Sraphone acoustic output ZENITH 131 db. OTHERS 131.1 db.

3. The 3-transistor Zenith "Royal-T" cost $18.93 less to operate per year than the average of the other aids tested.

4. The Zenith "Royal-T" registered less objectionable noise due to clothing rub than any of the other five brands.
