RIPANS ONE GIVES RELIEF. The manager of a New York clipping bureau, in speaking of the peculiarities of his business, said yesterday: "Many of our customers are folks with fads and hobbies. A man sent us an order recently for all items about two-headed calves, three-legged chickens and dogs monstrosities. A leading politician ordered 100 Memorial Day addresses, from which he could compile a Fourth of July oration which he had engaged to make serap books of their newspaper notices, and the custom will doubtless be repeated in the future. The wives of public men are among the best patrons of the clipping bureau. About the strangest order we have is that of a dealer in tomatoes and mushrooms. He takes all the death notices,"—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Featherbone Skirt Bone. A light, pliable, elastic bone made from quills. It is soft and yet yielding, conforming readily to folds, yet giving proper shape to Skirt or Dress. LEPAGE'S OLD STAND

Purified Blood. Saved an operation in the following case. Hood's Sarsaparilla cures when all others fail. It makes pure blood. "A year ago my father, William Thompson, was taken suddenly ill with inflammation of the bladder. He suffered a great deal and was very low for some time. At last the doctor said he would not get well unless an operation was performed. At this time we read about Hood's Sarsaparilla and decided to try it. Before he used half a bottle his appetite had come back to him, whereas before he could eat but little. When he had taken three bottles of the medicine he was as well as ever." FRANCIS J. THOMPSON, Peninsula Lake, Ontario. Remember

DECAY OF BOHEMIANISM. Practically Dead, Though Some People Make a Thing of It. Bohemianism is dead, and those who call it meliorism bohemians in the present day wear their rue with a difference. Some of them still take tea at 10 o'clock in the morning, but they do not drink themselves into a stupor on the first of the month, which was their wont with that ready aptitude for all kinds of work, and that discipline through some of the fiercest of the world's men.

FURNISH NEWSPAPER CLIPPINGS. The Business Has Grown to Great Proportions in New York. There is a peculiar industry in Gotham which has grown to astonishing proportions. This is the business of furnishing newspaper clippings to individuals, firms and corporations.

Having several years' experience in bicycle work, I am now prepared to attend to all repairs, and to make up for me, and to sell the new famous "Common Sense" bicycle, which is, in my opinion, one of the best manufactured. Second-hand Bicycle for sale cheap. NELSON RAMSAY. June 6.

MERRY MOMENTS. Miss Cross—What would you do if you were in my shoes? Miss Sharpe—Turn my toes out.—Yonke, a Statesman. Criticisms—I wonder how it is that so few women stutter when they talk? Witticisms—They haven't time.—Tammany Times. "Aw—why do you make your own cigarettes?" "My—aw—doctor ordered me to take some light exercise."—Pall Mall Budget.

First Sojourner—Do you always get your meals on time here? Second Sojourner—Yes, I have to till some of my friends show up. I'm deceivingly glad to see you.—Boston Courier. Summer Resorter—And is everything on your farm nice and fresh? Farmer—Nice and fresh? I guess you'd think so if you'd see some of our city boarders.—Boston Transcript.

Miss Oldgirl—You must promise not to kiss me while I am unconscious. Dentist—I shall do nothing of the kind. Miss Oldgirl (with a happy sigh)—Turn on the gas.—Leslie's Weekly. Stranger—Don't you find it lonely making a trip out here every day? Commuter—Not at all. I bring home a new cook or maid of all-work with me almost every evening.—Truth.

He—I hear you attend the Handel and Haydn performances. Were you present at the "Creation"? Student—No, I'm sorry I suppose you will next want to know if I sailed in Noah's ark.—Boston Beacon. Jester—Of course, you've heard the latest about Loosman; he isn't drinking any more. Question—Don't say "Loosman" to his mother. Jester—No, it's to his lack of credit.—Richmond Dispatch.

What is the new boy's business? Pauline asked the cheerful lady. "He is running a bicycle school," replied the waiter girl. "Oh! Teaching the young idea how to coast, is it?"—Cincinnati Tribune. "Ma'am," began Mr. Daniel D. W. son, "you see before you a violin of great value." "Oh, I do," said the suspicious lady. "What is it, ma'am?" "Stratagemed circumstantiality."—Indianapolis Journal. Willie S.—Ma'mma, sirs, she always likes to call on you. Mrs. Twelvehim (highly gratified)—Does she, Willie? Willie—Yes'm. When she goes away she says she feels so satisfied with herself. —Brooklyn Life. "Fact is," said one man, "I married because I was so lonely as much as for any other reason. To put it tersely, I married for sympathy." "Well," said the other man, "you have mine."—Indianapolis Journal. Mrs. Fadder—What is your opinion of the new woman, Mr. Duffer? Fadder—Well, you know, she's a good deal better than the kitchen I should say that she is quite an expert at breaking crockery as the old one.—Boston Transcript. She (pouting)—Before we were married you used to bring me candy every time you came. He (shrugging)—Yes, my dear, and it cost a good deal less than the meat and potatoes I bring you now. New York Weekly. Aunt Ann—Do you mean to tell me that them Hiffies actually served claret punch at their gatherings? How wicked! Maud Edith (who sampled some of the punch)—Not wicked, aunty, merely weak.—Cincinnati Tribune. Miss Kunneth—How is it that you do not use the telephone in Russia? Mr. Potter—Well, you see, hello in Russian is "kizankikranjanjansk"—hence the telephone has not been introduced in that country.—Truth. Mistress—Jane, you had a man in the kitchen last night. Maid—Yes'm, I'd brought him into the sitting room, and introduced you, but he was so busy talking to me that I forgot all about it.—Boston Transcript. Cobwigger—You seem rather amused over the idea of your wife's wearing bloomers. Smith—You'd be amused yourself if you could see her when she tried to find something in her work basket and emptied it into her lap.—Judge. Helen—How could you give up Harry Hausman for Tom Waterman? You used to think everything of Harry. Mar ha—I know; but the truth is, he's nearly all closed now, and Tom has such a lovely yacht.—Boston Transcript. Fuddy—What is the trouble with Caudle and his wife? Dred—She's a wind him for breach of promise. Fuddy—Breach o' promise! How can it be, when they are married? Dred—Why, the married him for his money; and he declined to give up the money. Boston Transcript.

DRAGHT HORSE FAMINE IN PROSPECT. In view of the death of yearling and suckling colts throughout the country this spring, it is imperative to inquire what the geldings to horse the trucks and wagons of American towns and cities a few years hence are to be derived. The trains now in harness will not last forever, that much is certain. On our city pavements even the best wearing stouts must sooner or later succumb and in time give way to fresh stock from the farms. When that inevitable day arrives will the farmers be prepared to supply the desired grade of stock or not? At present there can be but one forecast of the situation: The end of the century will find our markets practically bare of big horses of the right stamp. Even the wayfaring man can figure this out. From every farming district in the land we get the same report: No breeding of any consequence in progress; few colts last year and practically none this year, and not only this, but a buyer connected with the export trade is our authority for the statement that 60 per cent of the current receipts of horses of all descriptions in the Chicago market are made up of stallions, sires without an occupation, and the mares going by tens of thousands into the barns of the big dealers in the great cities of the North and of Europe! For these stallions never come out, save to legitimize a cover of drudgery in the traces, which leads to but one place—the boneyard. Where are the colts to make up the requisite future supply to come from?

One surprising feature of the Chicago market at present is the great number of active, "nervy" 1,350 to 1,500 pound "chunks" being exported by French, German and English buyers at prices ranging from $100 to $150. The demand seems to have shifted from "drivers" to chunks, and at least one-half of the latter are mares going to help horse the omnibuses and lighter trucks of Old World cities. This re-opens many mares that have kept their heavy draught stallions would have given good, big geldings for the United States markets of 1900, but never a one of them will nurse another foal. Query: Why this demand for class of stock which Europe was supposed to produce a sufficient number to satisfy its own markets? Have the foreigners been abandoning horse breeding of late years, as well as the farmers of this country? And if so, what extent will this effect the future of market values here?

It is pleasant to note that a few men who have not lost their heads have retained a few good ones, and have kept them stabled to stallions of a proper sort. These are the men who will not be found without choice "draughters" to sell when the day of reckoning arrives. Evidence is accumulating to show that by another spring many farmers will want to patronize the stallion keeper again, but the colt crops of 1894, 1895 and 1896 will be found light beyond all repair. Those who begin next spring will be in time for the markets of 1902. The fact is we have now to practically begin draught-horse breeding anew. We have lost substantially all that was gained at such great cost in points of weight and quality by the free pasturage of pure-bred horses during the twenty years ending with 1893, and the coming year will witness the beginning of the work of reconstruction. That will proceed in a better line than that before cannot be doubted. Farmers have learned by bitter experience the difference between mere bulk and quantity, and will never again be possible to impose upon them so serious a loss with ill-bred, post-legged bulks that never should cover a mare.

When there are many buyers after every big, fine "span" of geldings in the market a few years hence, and you are caught empty handed, or will you be among those who, taking time by the forelock, have prepared against the day? (Breeder's Gazette.)
