

Princess Shows Keen Interest In Paralyzed Artist

HALIFAX, Nov. 8.—(CP)—On the grounds where pioneers two centuries ago came ashore to establish Halifax and British prestige in the new world, Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh today received an official civic welcome.

The Birthday Murder

By Lange Lewis CHAPTER EIGHTEEN Part Two

HOLLYWOOD PRODUCER DIES OF POISON

While his wife slept peacefully in another bedroom, Albert Hime, 38, died early yesterday morning. The family physician, Dr. Joseph Mahler, was called by Mrs. Hime when she went to arouse her husband at a little after seven in the morning and found him dead. Dr. Mahler ascertained that death had come as a result of poison. He at once called the police.

ter that she wondered at her own blindness on another score. Traps are set. Where there is the trapped, there must also be the trapper.

But on the second morning after Albert's death she awoke with her blindness still upon her, and with the sound of the ringing telephone in her ears. She knew it would probably be the first of her fifty intimate Hollywood acquaintances who, having read the morning paper, had called to offer sympathy, aid and curiosity but thinly disguised.

But what I, of course, want to know is every little grisly detail. "You'll have to wait for tomorrow's paper, then. I'm pretty much in the dark myself." "Oh," said Leonard flatly. "Anything else?" asked Victoria.

the first time as a menacing figure. There was a passive threat in so much size pitted against the wrong-doer.

As he stepped into her house, she saw his attitude toward her had undergone a subtle change. He looked down at her in a puzzled way, as a man looks at some strange animal of which he has never seen. They went to the living room and took the same places they had occupied the day before—she on the sofa, he on the chair facing it.
