Home Questions

WHILE President Harrison and his "workers" are making diversions in the direction of Canada, there is in the deplorable difficulties respecting labor and capital in the United States, matter for the serious consideration of Republican statesmen. Strikes are a prominent feature in almost every State, and in almost every city. The building trade of New York is, we are told, completely paralyzed. Twenty thousand men in the metropolitan city have been forced into idleness. Idle men abound in Boston and in every other large town of the Union. The new state of Idaho is the scene of internecine strife. Widows and orphans will mourn for many a long day the terrible affair at Homestead.

Concurrent with these "labor troubles" is a widespread disregard for law and the strength of law. The officers of the State seem to be powerless, and private firms have to hire "Pinkertons" to maintain order and protect their property. Men are being constantly executed without judge or jury. The functions of the State are usurped by private individuals.

To an outsider it would seem that the people of the United States have questions at home which their statesmen might well try to settle,—rather than interfere in respect to the discrimination which the Canadians have made in favor of all vessels passing through their canals which unload at their ports. But perhaps the United States statesmen prefer the easier task of making an international row. It is said that the ancient English Kings had a trick of diverting attention to a war with France whenever difficulties not easily settled arose among their over-turbulent followers. It may be that our modern American statesmen have taken a leaf out of the book of the ancient kings.

Notes and Comments.

—Big hauls of mackerel have been made in the Bay of Fundy, and the American fleet is there—of course.

—During the seven months of this year, according to the official reports, 15,000 immigrants have arrived and settled in Manitoba. Mr. Ferguson states that numbers of those now flocking into our Northwest are from the United States.

—Speaking a fortnight ago in the town hall, Eastbourne, in support of Capt. Brand's candidature for the Eastbourne division of Sussex, Sir W. Harcourt asked, among other questions, what made a small majority. In reply he recalled that, after the Tory Government of 1879 had, on the motion of Lord Hartington (the Duke of Devonshire) been defeated and an appeal to the people followed, the incoming cabinet was supported by a majority of 13! That was a small advantage apparently and one might fancy that such a Government might prove short-lived. Nevertheless, strange to say, that Government survived for six years and a half. It was his experience that the last thing a new parliament desired was another dissolution, and this feeling had a solid effect on political operations.

Railway Picnic.

The employes 14th annual picnic was held at Morell yesterday. Six or seven hundred excursionists went from Charlottetown. A large number also came from Souris and the country round about. On the grounds we noticed Supt. Unsworth, Hon. Mr. Hooper, Hon. Mr. Underhay, J. P. Sullivan, Esq., M. P. P., and many other of our public men. On arrival of the train the dinner bell sounded, and from that time until the hour of departure the tables were well patronized. The bill of fare is pronounced by all to have been the best ever offered at similar gatherings. Every one went away pleased and satisfied.

Notwithstanding the very hot weather, the dancing and other sports and amusements were kept up with energy. Galbraith's Band rendered excellent service. A few young men who had just visited the "Hole in the Door" at Mount Stewart, rendered themselves a nuisance to all decent people. With this exception the picnic was a grand success. The prize winners were as follows:—

Men's Foot Race—1, M Galbraith; 2, V Robbins; 3, G Worthy.

Boys' Race (under 16)—1, J Ayling; 2, W Chappell; 3, N Winchester.

Boys' Race (under 12)—1, J Flynn; 2, J Mitchell; 3, J Chappell.

Girls' Race (under 16)—1, N Ross; 2, E Hodgson; 3, A McAleer.

Girls Race (under 12)—1, J Kelly; 2, L Hodgson and J Poole, equal.

Potatoe Race—1, J Lappin; 2, W Chappell; 3, H Winchester.

Three Legged Race—1, Mitchell and Lappin; 2, Smith and Worthy.

Neck & Neck Tug—J Handrigan; 2, W Mitchell.

PIONEER RELICS.—The Pioneer committee of the Scottish Gathering are still adding to their collection of relics. They are also receiving encouraging letters from sons and grandsons of the old pioneers from different sections of the country, from one of which letters we are favored with the following extract to show that the pioneer feature of the Gathering on Wednesday next has taken hold of the Scottish heart: "Whilst there should remain a place within our breasts for the land of our fathers, and whilst our hearts should be animated with a just pride as we turn over the pages of history and find the galaxy of worthy sons who have sprung from the land that gave birth to Wallace, Bruce, Burns and Scott, we must remember we owe a deep debt of gratitude to our own fathers, who left behind them the land of their birth, with all its fond associations, and crossed the wide wastes of the western ocean, suffering privations and hardships of which we can form no adequate conception, in order to carve out a home and a heritage which they have bequeathed to us." We could, did space permit, give to our readers extracts from other letters of the same kind in the hands of the Committee, to show the enthusiasm with which this new feature of the Gathering of the Clans is so universally received.

THE IRISH PARTY'S PLANS.

A Talk with Mr. Justin McCarthy.

HOME RULE PROGRAMME.

Home Rule Measure Must Come First.

The Probable Action of the House of Lords—The Method of Procedure.

The New York World (Aug. 1) has the following report of an interview with Mr. Justin McCarthy, leader of the Irish party:

Everybody here seems at sea regarding the position of the Irish party in the incoming Parliament. The newspapers say one thing one day, retract it the next, and the public follows blindly the dictates of these journals.

The Irish party has the key to the situation. What it will do is what Parliament will do. So, of course, all the interest of the day centres in those 80 Irish members.

Here is an authoritative statement of the exact position of the Irish party. It is the first and the only exposition made to anyone. It comes from the leader of the Irish party, Justin McCarthy. All agree that he is the leader.

Parnell's mantle, after his death, fell on the shoulders of McCarthy.

He lives in one of a row of pretty little terra cotta houses in Chelsea. There are twenty houses in the row. His is the last one and is No. 2. It faces a large garden and is as quiet as the house of a historian, novelist and philosopher should be. Incidentally he is a great politician.

He looks more like a poet and philosopher than like a leader of men, and of unrestrainable men at that.

With flowing white hair, a long beard that suggests Longfellow in its fine whiteness, and a ruddy English complexion, at 62 years of age he is a fine specimen of man.

His library at Chelsea is lined from ceiling to floor with books, and broad leather chairs invite one to rest rather than work. But there has been little rest in his life.

Quiet in manner, polished in speech, careful in the choice of words, soft spoken as a woman, he seems the last person to lead a lot of Irishmen fighting for their homes.

HIS COURAGE UNQUESTIONED.

But nobody ever questioned his courage. The only thing ever brought up against him was his distressing want of native ferocity. His eyes, that look out from wide glasses, are Irish-grey, and very kindly.

The following interview was read over by him after it was written and was pronounced correct.

Mr. McCarthy talked with the greatest freedom on every phase of the political situation. If there had been any doubt as to who is the leader of the Irish party—and there is no doubt—he settled it by replying to the question whether he would lead the forces in the coming fight.

"If I am chosen," said he, with a show of a smile, "the time has not yet come to take action to settle that question, but there does not seem to be any division on that point. Very fortunately, my health has improved greatly of late, and I am feeling in good condition to take up work."

This disposes of the suggestion that Mr. Blake of Canada, might stand at the head of the Irish forces.

"What do you think," he was asked, "of all this talk that Mr. Gladstone intends to postpone Home Rule? Will he introduce such a measure?"

HOME RULE AT ONCE.

"Unquestionably," Mr. McCarthy answered. "I have not the slightest doubt that he will do so and at once. It is as absolutely certain as any event in the future can be.

"I have not seen Mr. Gladstone for some time now, but there is no possible question on this point. We trust Mr. Gladstone implicitly, and it would be suicidal for him to do anything else.

"Will it be the first measure introduced?"

"It will. Nothing whatever will be allowed to stand in its way."

"Will all the Irish factions and the English majority vote for it?"

"They must. I do not see now they can help doing so, and I have no fear on this point. They were elected on a home rule platform and must, of course, stand by it. Besides, I see no disinclination on the part of any of the Liberals not to do so, and as for the Irish, well,"—and he laughed.

"How about the other contemplated English reforms?"

"These will be introduced too. There is no reason why they cannot go through side by side, with home rule leading. The method of procedure will be this: home rule will be introduced, and after the first reading of the bill the House will have nothing before it for a few days. Then the one man one vote bill can be introduced and passed through its first reading. Then a better registration act will be introduced."

"Meanwhile home rule will be brought back and passed through its second reading, and after this these other measures of reform will take the same course, following in the wake of the great Irish reform movement. They need not interfere with one another at all. It will not expedite home rule to have it monopolize the entire attention Parliament."

"After the Commons pass home rule what will happen?"

HOME RULE PROGRAMME.

"As I said, the Commons will pass the bill, then it will go to the House of Lords. They will reject it. Yes, I'm sure they'll reject it. Then it will come back to the Commons again. According to our law it cannot be re-introduced the same session, but Mr. Gladstone will promptly prorogue Parliament and call a new session within a short time. He may call it within twenty days. Then the bill will be passed again and sent to the House of Lords. This time the Lords will pass it."

But suppose they do not?"

"Ah, but they will. If they do not Mr. Gladstone will call upon the Queen to create enough new peers with Liberal tendencies to make a majority for home rule in the Lords."

"As this is a constitutional government the Queen will do as he asks. But such a radical course is very unlikely. The Lords, finding themselves powerless, will pass the bill rather than have the exclusive body diluted by so many new peers. There is no trouble on this score."

"Just how soon will the Irish bill be introduced?"

"The method of procedure will be this: When Parliament meets next Thursday several days will be taken up in swearing in the new members and all the the formula incident to a new House, including this time the defeat or resignation of the Tory Government and the formation of a new Cabinet. All this will take time. Then adjournment will be take until the usual meeting of Parliament next January. Then the first thing introduced will be the home rule measure. Nothing would be gained by bringing it up sooner."

"Will the holding over of Salisbury complicate matters?"

THE PROCESS OF DISSOLUTION.

"Not at all. There will be the usual Queen's speech, then Mr. Gladstone will move an amendment to the speech disclaiming confidence in the Government. This will be passed, and, following the usual course of procedure, the Queen will send for Mr. Gladstone and ask him to form a new Ministry. The entire delay will not be a fortnight. It doesn't complicate matters at all."

"Then Salisbury will not try to retain power?"

"He might, and if he were shrewd enough he could. If Disraeli were alive (he called him "Dizzy") he would certainly do so, and it would be a good political stroke. Salisbury could say in the Queen's speech that, having introduced measures for the local government of Ireland in the last Parliament, and finding them insufficient, he was prepared to introduce a new measure of wider scope. If he did this and really promised home rule under another name, it is possible that Mr. Gladstone would accept it, and in that way the present Ministry might be retained.

"Mr. Gladstone does not want to be Prime Minister. Only he wants home rule for Ireland. He does not care who introduces it. But this is an unlikely contingency. 'Dizzy' once kept his place by just such a move."

"Will there be any Irish members in this Cabinet?"

"Surely not until the Irish question is settled. We shall have to consider ourselves an independent Opposition, and will take our seats as we have always done."

"How about the Coercion Act?"

"That will be repealed at once. It will be among the very first measures introduced. We are determined upon this. The Coercion Act is doomed."

"Have any overtures been made by the Parnellites to coalesce, and will they cause any trouble?"

"There has been no special movement toward union, but I think the lesson taught them by this election will show them that their constituencies are not in favor of any division. From 30 seats they have dropped to nine. The lesson is a plain one. They followed the great body of the Irish members."

"Suppose all goes smoothly, how long will it be before home rule can actually take effect, that is, if everything is absolutely favorable?"

THE IRISH PARLIAMENT.

"Not under three years. There is much to be done, many details to be looked after, and three years is a short time for the formation of a new government at Dublin. No religious questions will be allowed to come before the Dublin Parliament; nothing that affects Imperial ministration will be touched upon. All the power that the Irish Parliament will have will be over purely local affairs."

"Is the labor element of serious importance?"

"It is growing to be a very serious matter, and the Irish party has hitherto worked hand in hand with the labor people. But the time is hardly ripe yet for their reforms."

"What is the condition of the fund which America sent over here?"

"There is now £38,000 or £40,000 held in trust in Paris. Parnell and I were joint trustees for this fund, and when he died I was left residuary trustee. But, the French law is complicated, and some of the opposing members added to the complications so that no money can be drawn out. Parnell and I were good friends up to the day of his death. Some overtures have been made to the other Irish party looking to the adjustment of our difficulties, so that this fund can be drawn upon, but nothing definite has been done yet."

"How long will it before we have another general election?"

"I think this Parliament will last three years—not much longer. But much can be done in three years."

Mr. McCarthy stepped to the door with his caller as he said this and the sunlight, streaming on his hopeful face seemed to light it up and make his words almost prophetic.
