Scout News and Notices

Scouts Mourn King—Take New Oath

Canada's 126,000 Scouts and Cubs will be in mourning for a period of six months for the late King. All Scouts, Commissioners and Rover Scouts will wear a two inch black crepe band around the left arm midway between the elbow and shoulder. The wearing of the band by Scouts and Cubs is optional with the Groups.

During the period of mourning, flags flying from troop headquarters will be flown at half mast until after the funeral. Mourning emblems on flags, if desired, will take the form of two three inch crepe streamers of about the length of the flag, and secured above the flag with a small bow.

Scout Councils, Associations and Units have cancelled all entertainments, banquets, etc. until after the funeral. Scout units are expected to take part in suitable memorial services.

At the first meeting following the announcement of the death of the King, all Units will pay appropriate tribute to the memory of his late Majesty, and the Promise will be reaffirmed to Her Majesty "The Queen."

ELIZABETH VOWS

(Continued from page 1) to be assured of the sympathy which you and all my peoples feel toward me, to my mother, and my sister, and to the other members of my family. "My father was our revered and beloved head, as he was of the wider family of his subjects; the grief which his loss brings is shared among us all.

"My heart is too full for me to say more to you today than that I shall always work, as my father did throughout his reign, to uphold the constitutional government and to advance the happiness and prosperity of my peoples, spread as they are all the world over.

"I know that in my resolve to follow his shining example of service and devotion, I shall be inspired by the loyalty and affection of those whose Queen I have been called to be, and by the counsel of their elected parliament.

"I pray that God will help me to discharge worthily this heavy task that has been laid upon me so early in my life."

At Sandringham

After taking the oath of sovereignty, Queen Elizabeth motored with the Duke of Edinburgh to Sandringham, 130 miles away. The Queen's banner fluttered in the breeze over the mansion, where the King's body lay on a candle-lit bier in the ground-floor bedroom where he died in his sleep.

Late tonight the body—in its coffin made from an oak tree felled at Sandringham—was taken along a garden path to the little 16th century church of St. Mary Magdalene. A sackcloth screen was erected along the path to shield the procession from public view.

Until Monday morning, when the body is then taken to London for the official lying-in-state, the King's own gamekeepers dressed in forest-green leather jackets similar to those of Robin Hood's day will keep a round-the-clock vigil over the coffin in the church. The late Sovereign's personal flag will cover the coffin.

The King's Company of Grenadier Guards, specially picked for physique and bearing, will serve as pallbearers and guards of honour when the body is carried from the parish church on a gun carriage to a nearby railway station to be transported to London.

After the lying-in-state at Westminster Hall in London, the body will be taken to the ornate St. George's Chapel at Windsor Castle.

Royalty from all over the world—ruling and deposed—will be represented at the King's funeral. President Truman will be represented by Secretary of State Dean Acheson.

Templer Faces Hard Fight To Win Malaya War

SINGAPORE, Feb. 8 — (AP) — Britain's new high commissioner for Malaya, Gen. Sir Gerald Templer, must solve a Chinese puzzle if he is to win the jungle war against Communist terrorists. Approximately 95 per cent of the terrorists are Chinese. In this guerrilla war, it takes a Chinese to fight a Chinese.

To ease Templer's task somewhat, Britain this week named Donald MacGillivray as Deputy High Commissioner of the Federation to deal with Malaya's complex political problems.

With someone else to take care of civil affairs, Templer can concentrate on the urgent task of beating the Reds in this important dollar-earning tin and rubber country. An atmosphere of tension hangs over all—British planters in their armored cars, Chinese, Malay and Indian rubber tappers gathering latex on isolated estates.

Main Problems

Everyone agrees the jungle army—which calls itself the Malayan Races Liberation Army—could not have existed long without the help of other Chinese. The British military estimate there are 20,000 Red sympathizers among the Chinese workers of Malaya. For most of the Chinese in the villages and on the rubber estates it is a choice of giving food and money to the terrorists or sharing the fate of 3,000 civilians slain by the terrorists since mid-1948.

There lie the main problems for Templer: first, to provide protection and stop the terrorists' aid; second, to win over the Chinese to active co-operation in the anti-Red war.

Sir Cheng Lock-Tan, Malaya's No. 1 Chinese who was knighted recently, told Colonial Secretary Oliver Lyttelton: "the best man to catch the Chinese bandit, Communist agent or rebel is the Chinese policeman, Chinese spy or Chinese soldier."

But the Chinese co-operation will not come easy.

Bitter At British

There is bitter resentment among the Chinese because they feel they are little better than second-class citizens—or no citizens at all—under Britain's policy of "Malaya for the Malays."

Malaya's 5,300,000 population includes 2,000,000 Chinese. More than 60 per cent of them were born in Malaya. Only a handful has been granted citizenship. Malays are permitted to join the Britishdominated Malayan Civil Service. Chinese are barred. The government has refused to arm the Chinese "home guards" in many cases for fear the weapons will get into Communist hands. Remove these sore spots, says Sir Cheng Lock-Tan, and the Malay Chinese will feel they have a real stake in Malaya.

After the long months of conflict with the jungle Reds, there is evidence that Britain is ready to give the Chinese a better deal in return for active help. Britain has found that distrust and criticism of the Chinese as "fence-sitters" has not altered the basic fact that the war won't be won without Chinese help.

Four-fifths of Malaya is jungle. Troops patrol the wastes daily. Most successful raids come on tips from Chinese, usually inspired by liberal rewards.

"The terrorists have to rely on Chinese villagers for food and money," one British general said. "The Chinese know where the bandits are. All we need is to get them to tell."
