

Submarine Launched In England

GBOTON, Conn. (AP) The missile submarine Will Rogers sailed into the Thames River Thursday. The boat, packed with champagne from a bottle swung by Mrs. Hubert Humphrey, wife of the U.S. vice-president. Named for the late homespun U.S. humorist, the Will Rogers is the last of a fleet of 41 U.S. nuclear submarines to be armed with Polaris missiles. Horns blared, a band played and cheers rose from the crowd as the ship went down the ways. Outside the fence, the mood was different. Demonstrators carrying anti-war placards lined the sidewalk. About 75 pacifists paraded outside the electric boat wharves of the General Dynamics Corp. Police carried some of them to a waiting police bus when they went limp and sank to the pavement, blocking one of the gates. Seven were arrested. So was another pacifist, who dove out into the river to the edge of the restricted area and returned to shore. When it is commissioned late this year or early next year, the Will Rogers will be capable of firing 16 A-3 Polaris missiles from under the ocean of a land target 2,900 miles away. Thirty-one of the Polaris subs have this capability. The rest are older models which fire shorter-range missiles.
