PACKING EGGS AND BUTTER.

Reliable Receipts for Preserving for Winter Use.

From July to September is usually the time when butter and eggs are packed for winter use, as both commodities are cheap at this time, the former at about 20 cents a pound and the latter 15 cents a dozen, compared to 40 cents and 36 cents, prices that prevail during the autumn and winter.

Butter, is properly put away, will keep a long, long time. The principal outlook is for quality and method of working. The most successful butter packers give three rules to be followed—work out all buttermilk; use rock salt; put up in air-tight receptacles and keep in a cool place.

Heavy stone butter jars are the best. After all the buttermilk has been worked out, rock salt, a tablespoonful to a pound, should be worked in thoroughly. Rock salt does not contain as much lime as common salt. It should then be packed closely in the jar and covered with a thin cloth and a layer of salt over that. Generally the pot is then sunk in a hole in the cellar floor, leaving only a couple inches in view, and tops covered with a weighted board.

If the butter is packed by the purchaser, then no more salt should be adde. A regular butter man will, if asked, use rock salt in place of common. When the butter if from different makers, it should not be mixed. Wrap each lot in a cloth and put a layer of salt between.

This method makes the sweetest butter, but many cling to the saltpetre, a custom followed largely, it is said, in New York State. This calls for a mixture of salt, one quart; white sugar, one-half ounce; saltpetre, one-half ounce. Pulverize them together. Work the butter free of milk, then work in one ounce of this mixture to a pound. It is then packed in brine strong enough to bear an egg, adding a quarter of a pound of white sugar to three gallons.

Twenty to twenty-five pounds is the usual amount packed for an average-sized family, and will last five or six months. The cost should not be, at the most, over $5, the same amount costing about twice as much in winter. A good buttermaker will sometimes take all the trouble on himself for a customer, which saves much worry and vexation.

Eggs are easily handled. Two ways are in use, water and dry-packing. The former may affect the taste of the egg, so that it cannot be used for eating, but for cakes and puddings they are equal to fresh. They will keep, too, some years, being used at sea.

Stone crocks are the most convenient. Make a brine of a pint of fresh-slacked lime, a good handful of salt and three gallons of water. Have perfectly fresh eggs, without the slightest crack in their shells, and cover with this brine. Put a bit of board over the top to keep them under the water, and if a little salt and brine is kept on it, the brine will be as strong at the top as at the bottom. It is curious to note that in 1791, one Jaynes of Sheffield, Yorkshire, secured a patent on a process from which the custody of lime water preservation undoubtedly arose.

Dry-packing has many advantages. It consists simply in packing fresh eggs in salt, putting the broad end downward, and seeing that the eggs do not touch each other. Bran and sawdust are also used. The tops must be covered thickly and the whole set away in a cool, dark place.

Before packing in this way some smear the shells with butter or lard. A chicken fancier who shipped eggs to England before the days of cold storage varnished the shells. Gum shellac was dissolved in sufficient alcohol to make a thin varnish, which was painted on the shells. When dry they were packed in bran, so that they neither touched nor could move about. When wanted for use, the varnish was washed off, and the eggs said to be equal to fresh.

Preserved eggs do not bring as good a price in the winter as fresh, of course but many grocers palm them off as new-laid articles. When care is taken there is really little difference, and none whatever when they are used for cooking.

Salting Butter.

At the Pennsylvania Experimental Station in three separate trails the churning was separated into three equal portions, one portion being salted at the rate of one ounce per pound, another at the rate of one and a half ounces per pound, and the third not salted. In one case only one-half ounce of salt was used instead of one and a half ounces. In two of the churnings a fourth portion was salted in the churn by the use of a strong brine. The separate lots of butter were all worked as nearly alike as possible, and samples were taken for the determination of water, fat and salt. The butter salted with one-half ounce of salt contained 11.7 per cent. of water; that salted with one ounce averaged 9.84 per cent.; with one and a half ounces 9.68 per cent.; salted with brine, 12.09 per cent.; and unsalted 13.31 per cent. The amount of salt retained in the butter varied in these trials from 1.35 to 6.02 per cent., and seems to be dependent upon the amount of salt added. When the butter was salted with brine practically none of the salt was retained. Salting by this method seems to be labor and salt thrown away.

Pussy and the Flypaper.

The trouble that may arise from the use of "tanglefoot" flypaper is not confined entirely to flies, as was shown in Portland, Ct., the other day. A Swede family, living on Penfield hill, purchased liberally of the paper and spread it about the house. Shortly afterward a great commotion was heard in the pantry. Investigation showed that a kitten had become mixed up with a sheet of paper, and in its efforts to get away had stepped on another. Crockery was knocked from the shelves and other small articles broken by the confused feline. Finally the cat rolled over on the paper, which made matters worse, and for a while it looked as if the house would have to be given over entirely to the pet. It wa found necessary at last to shear the unfortunate cat in order to extricate it from its difficulty.

GRAVELOTTE.

Fifteen Thousand German Veterans Celebrate the Anniversary.

Fifteen thousand German veterans of the Franco-Prussian war celebrated the anniversary of the battle of Gravelotte, which was fought on August 18, 1870, by parade on the Templehofer field. The ceremonies attending the celebration were begun at noon with a religious service. The choral "Nun Danket Alle Gott" was sung, and addresses were made by Dr. Wolfing, an evangelical pastor, and Dr. Vollmar, a Catholic priest. After benedictions had been pronounced by the clergymen, Emperor William rode along the line of troops, stopping occasionally to speak to a soldier who bore visible traces of wounds received in battle and to the crippled veterans that were seated in wheel chairs on the field. The Emperor then ordered the troops to form in squares, and after this command had been obeyed, his Majesty addressed the soldiers as follows:

Comrades: The honoring of the memory of my grandfather will awaken within you memories of the glorious days when you bravely stood faithful to your colors. God was with us and gave victory to our just cause, and we defeated the designs of our foes. Continue to be proud of the triumps of our standards. Rejoice to see so many of the old combatants here today. May this day be a starting point in your daily life, increasing your respect for the law, heighting our religious feelings and aiding you to maintain your faith in your King. Camrades, know that every one of you did his duty, and I feel that you will do so in the future, standing faithful to your King by fulfilling your duties in furthering all that will establish the throne and opposing all that tends towards its overthrow. In special recognition of your merits, I decree that all iron crosses shall receive an oakleaf ornament of silver, with engraved numbers, and that war medals shall receive clasps, on which will be inscribed the names of the battles in which their owners fought. Now go and do the work that remains for you. Good-bye, comrades.

Volleys of cheers from the assembled veterans and the thousands of spectators followed the Emperor as he left the field.

ORGANIZATION OF FARMERS.

A FEATURE OF THE DAY.

James Rogers Speaks Earnestly.

The development of Farmers' Institutes and other means of education on successful practical farming has proven beyond a doubt that the present day farmer requires to be a student of his work. The most successful ones are not, as a rule, those who do the greatest amount of manual labor, but they are found ranking first as prize-winners on all agricultural products. James Rogers, a resident of Tilsonburg, Oxford Co., Ont., for 45 years, has taken numerous first prizes during the year. A successful, reliable man, his statement will be of interest to many:

"I have suffered for seven or eight years with Itching Piles; the torture and agony I cannot here find words to describe. Night after night was kept awake with the painful itching. I tried all the physicians and every known remedy all to no account, not even relief. In talking over my curious trouble with Mr. Chas. Thomson, our well known druggist, he recommended Chase's Ointment. To my wonder and surprise, I got relief from the second application. I firmly believe one box sufficient to cure any case of Itching Piles no matter of how long duration. I would not be without it for ten times its cost. In volunteering this testimony and my consent for the manufacturers of Chase's Ointment to use it as they wish, it is that like sufferers may know they can be cured."

FORCE OF HABIT.

London People Have Become UsED To The Great Specific Remedy.

LONDON, Aug. 19—The despatch from Detroit with reference to the cure from Brights disease and blood poisoning of Mr. Langley, of this city, by the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills, has recalled the wonderful facts of the case to the citizens, among Mr. Langley is well known. It has reminded them that Mrs. Langley among others also made an equally wonderful recovery. The use of the pills however has become so universal here, and there have been so many instances in which they have been used with beneficial results that a similar case would hardly excite as much interest now as it did then when the medicine was less known.
