Military dictatorship looms for China as result of purge

An AP News Analysis
By WILLIAM L. RYAN

"Dare to organize the masses," said a Chinese Communist party directive issued several weeks ago. Now the "masses" are organized and in full cry, and those who dare are becoming the masters of what begins to look like a East China.

Indiscriminate teen-agers, glorifying in a licence for mass cruelty, roam the streets of Chinese cities, inflicting outlandish humiliations on random victims who have suddenly become "enemies of the people."

Evidently the stage is being set for a climactic act of the purge the party calls "the great proletarian cultural revolution."

And evidently some men in high places are about to fall. Those who have "the masses" in their hands also have the "front" at least for now. They will be tough. Ominously, the theoretical journal Red Flag announced this week:

"Any person, no matter how high his position, how old his standing and how great his fame, as long as he fails to do things according to Mao Tse-tung's thinking, should have his erroneous views boycotted and a determined struggle should be waged against him until he is dismissed from his official posts."

WILL REVEAL EXTENT

The impression left by the spectacle going on in China is that within a short time Peking will make known to the world the more important results of the purge. Whatever opposition existed in the current line of policy is being remorselessly crushed under the mass attack of the mobs of youngsters.

What is relatively certain already is that China has a military dictator masquerading as a proletarian Defence Minister Lin Biao, a marshal when the army had ranks, is the organizing boss, and the great proletarian cultural revolution seems designed to establish the line of succession after the ailing Mao Tse-tung.

With his opponents swept into oblivion, Lin appears to be using the armed forces to nail down his authority.

It will be hard with those who tried to stop the Lin-Chiang. Their sin, nicely prefabricated, was "losing touch with the masses." The winners got to the masses first.

Red Flag says a struggle has been going on for years and has been "extremely violent and extremely acute." Peking frequently repeats that there is resistance, from "those who wormed their way into the party and rose to power but took the capitalist road." The central committee says the resistance remains "strong and stubborn" and adds that "because this resistance is comparatively large, ups and downs are expected."

But, it said, the future belongs to the "spirit of daring," and "whether the party leadership dares organize the masses will determine the fate of the great cultural revolution."

Few, pondering the spectacle, would doubt Peking's words that the revolution "has reached a new stage." This stage appears to be one which brings China the prospect of total regimentation, total subservience to the state, total conformity to the notions of those who run the party; and, in the bargain, total isolation from the outside world.

The difference between Disney and Tors seems to be that while Walt works with animals that are cartooned or automated (as in the Disneyland exhibits), Tors uses the real thing.

THOUGHT WAS FISH

"It all began when I was making 'Sea Hunt,'" said the producer. "During the years of filming we were exposed to sharks, killer whales and all kinds of supposedly dangerous fish. But the only real encounter was when a barracuda jumped against a man's chest. The man was wearing a St. Christopher's medal which the barracuda apparently thought was a fish."

Tors was intrigued by the apparent willingness of the sea denizens to tolerate the presence of human beings. He continued research with land animals, as well and how is convinced that man and beast can coexist.

"The approach is simple," he explained in his MGM office where he works surrounded by photographs of his four-footed and finny friends. "There was antagonism between man and

No plans to rejoin Social Credit party

MONTREAL (CP)—Creditiste Leader Real Caouette said Wednesday he has no immediate plans for rejoining his party with Robert Thompson's Social Credit party and that if Mr. Thompson has any such plans "he should come to us."

"We have nine parliamentary members," he has five," Mr. Caouette said. "Let five come to nine."

Mr. Caouette made his remarks in a telephone interview from his hospital bed in Rouyn, Que., where he went for a rest and medical check because of his diabetic condition. He expects to be released today.

He was commenting on remarks made by Mr. Thompson Tuesday when the Social Credit leader said the accession of Creditiste MP Gilles Gregoire to the leadership of a separatist party removed the main cause of the 1963 Social Credit split. Mr. Gregoire, who is House leader of the Creditistes, was elected president Sunday of le Ralliement National, formed out of an alliance of Quebec nationalists and provincial Creditistes earlier this year to contest the June 5 Quebec elections. It won no seats.

Mr. Caouette said he is strongly opposed to Mr. Gregoire's separatist policies and will propose to a caucus meeting to be held in Ottawa Monday that Mr. Gregoire be removed as House leader.

He said that if Mr. Gregoire does not voluntarily resign from the Creditiste party before Monday, his removal from party ranks will also be discussed.

But he said Mr. Thompson was mistaken in calling Mr. Gregoire the main reason for the split between the two parties.

BLAMES MARCOUX

More important were the actions of Dr. Guy Marcoux, then a Social Credit MP for Quebec-Montmorency, "who worked behind my back with Mr. Thompson at that time."

Dr. Marcoux later became an unsuccessful independent candidate in the 1965 elections and published a pamphlet in which he claimed six former Social Credit MPs had sold out to the Liberals in 1963.

"There have been no steps taken yet by either side towards an understanding," said Mr. Caouette. "I would have to study the whole matter very carefully before I would even contemplate reunion."

There were other important ideological beliefs still separating the two groups:

"We are definitely apart on nuclear arms for Canada. I am against them and Mr. Thompson formerly spoke for them."

"He supports the U.S. stand on the Viet Nam war and I am in favor of a withdrawal of all foreign troops from Viet Nam."

ASSIST TUNISIANS

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada will send a medical team to Tunisia to undertake a seven-year program to assist in establishment of a children's hospital, the external aid office announced Wednesday. It will be the most extensive medical aid project undertaken by the aid office

Kept tabs on Lemay

QUEBEC (CP)—Jean-Jacques Bertrand, provincial justice minister, said Wednesday his department was keeping close tabs on the Georges Lemay case and that he would have more precise information on the situation to disclose shortly.

"Our prosecutors are in constant contact with those of the state of Florida and once that state has made a decision relative to Lemay, we will know what to do," Mr. Bertrand said.

The elusive Lemay, sought in Canada in connection with a 1961 bank robbery in Montreal in which between $528,000 and $4,000,000 loot was taken, was arrested Aug. 19 outside the men's room of a Las Vegas gambling casino.

The 41-year-old Montrealer, one of Canada's most-wanted men, escaped from the seventh floor of Dade County jail in Miami, Fla., Sept. 31, 1965. He was reported to have bought his way out for $35,000.

His arrest in Florida had followed the flashing of his picture on television via the Early Bird satellite.

Lemay and his wife, 29, have been arraigned in Las Vegas on charges of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution and for conspiracy to bribe.

Allegations are denied

MONTREAL (CP)—A highly-placed justice department spokesman Wednesday denied allegations by former justice minister Claude Wagner that 35 Crown prosecutors have been dismissed by the Union Nationale government.

The spokesman said there have not been any firings, but that part-time prosecutors who were given the opportunity to stay on had declined in order to pursue a more lucrative type of legal practice.

He said the term "permanent" Crown prosecutor, brought to be the former Liberal government, was "a euphemism" because their work was not full-time as the term implied.

The spokesman said "permanent" prosecutors were paid roughly $9,000 yearly and had also carried on their private practice.

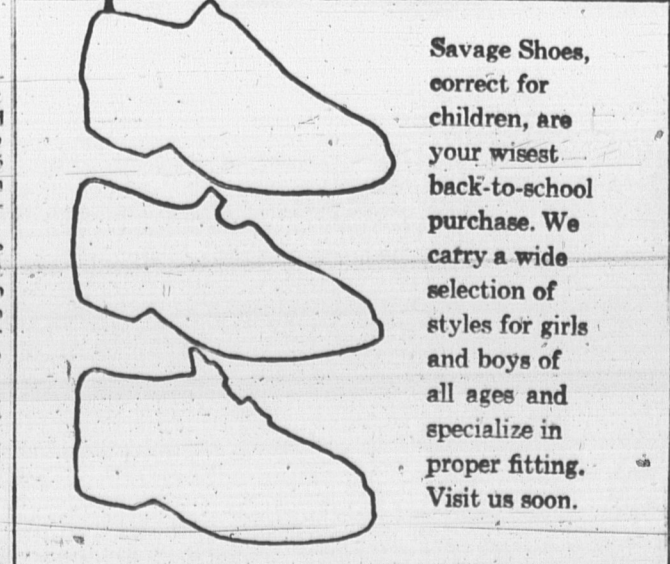

The justice department's present plan was to hire prosecutors who really would be full-time on salaries up to $17,000.

Many of those being considered for these positions are Liberals, he said.

EXPECT NEW FACES

When the dust clears, probably a half dozen new faces will appear on the political, which holds total power over the nation. Prominent names will be missing and other prominent men—probably including President Liu Shao-chi—will be downgraded.

But the show isn't over yet.

'Please Don't Hurt My Kids'

Dear Driver:

THIS WEEK, OUR DAUGHTER, who is six years old, started school for the first time. Her brother will be with her, but he's only nine himself, and he still looks pretty little to me. Their little dad, whose name is "Schmappa", sat on the front porch and wished his canine belief in the fall of education as they waved "goodbye" and started off to the halls of learning.

LAST NIGHT WE TALKED ABOUT SCHOOL . . . my daughter and I. She wondered what the teacher would be like. She hoped she could sit beside Mary (the little girl next door). She said her "letters" for me . . . just to be sure she knew them. Oh we talked about a lot of things . . . tremendously vital, unimportant things. Then she tried on her new dress to show me . . . and then to bed.

SHE LOOKED SO HELPLESS . . . sound asleep, with "Sally" (that's her doll) cuddled in her right arm. You see, I'm her daddy. When her doll is broken or her finger is cut, or her hand gets banged, I can fix it . . . but when she and her brother start to school, when they walk across the street, then they're in YOUR hands.

THEY'RE NICE KIDS, both of them. They like to fish, swim and go for walks with me on Sunday afternoon. But I can't be with them all the time. I have to work to pay for their clothes and education. So please help me look out for them. Please drive slowly past the schools and intersections . . . and please remember that children DO
