NOVEL TELEGRAPHING.

Looked Like Thought Transference, but the Explanation Was Simple.

A prominent lawyer thought he had discovered a wonderful instance of thought tranference the other day. He has two typewriter operators. One works in his private office and the other has a desk in an adjoining room. Of late he has been puzzled upon giving instructions to his private stenographer, to be delivered to the other typewriter, to find that she never quit the room, yet the girl in the next room would always execute the order, just as if she had been told explicitly what was required.

The attorney for a long time had been trying to account for this seeming telegraphic communication between the two young ladies. Yesterday he thought he would make a test of the matter, and calling his stenographe, he said: "I want you to take down this article of agreement and give it to Miss Blank to transcribe." He then dictated a lengthy and technical document, trying to make it as difficult as possible.

The stenographer took it down and then went to her machine and began operating it. The attorney watched her closely, and saw that she never stopped her work. He waited for a half hour, then he turned to his typewriter and said:

"Miss So-and-So, I think you have forgotten to give Miss Blank that dictation I gave you for her."

"Oh, no," replied the young lady, "Miss Blank has it finished and waiting for you out there."

This nonplussed the attorney. He was sure his private stenographer had not left the room, and did not see how it could be possible for such a complicated agreement to be transferred by telepathic communication. He went out to Miss Blank, who handed him the agreement completed. The attorney could not contain himself any longer as he said: "Miss Blank, I have been noticing something strange for the past month. Will you tell me how you receive my instructions from Miss So-and-So without her leaving my room? Here you have transcribed a very difficult dictation, and I am sure you have had no communication with her." The young lady began to smile and said:

"Mr. —— you should not be so shure that we have had no communication. We can converse with each other when the door is open just as well as if we were in the same room. No, its not thought transference, but plain telegraphy. You see, Miss So-and-So, and I have learned telegraphy recently, and we practice in this way.

"We found the space bars of our type writers made perfect telegraph keys, so that we can send messages just as well as with a regular telegraph instrument. So its not so mysterious after all."

The young lady showed her employer the manner of sending a message, and he began to think how easily some mysterious incidents could be explained if we only knew the truth.

The Guecha or Geisha.

Outside the temple there still are a thousand things to see. Every variety of amusement can be had in this enceinte, which contains a circus, a theatre, shooting-galleries, and numerous tea-houses in which the young exquisites of the town organize charming little parties. They hire jesters, musicians, and singers, or, if they are very refined, they send for a Guecha. It is very difficult to define what a Guecha is, as there is nothing at all resembling her in our Western civilization. A Guecha is a dancer, but her slow dignified graceful dance, like that of the Japanese women, is the least of her talents, or rather of her merits. Chosen from amongst the most beautiful women, brought up with the greatest care by an old Guecha who has become a professor, these dancers, like the Roman vestals, are the very ideal of purity, beauty, and grace. Absolutely chaste, of perfectly correct deportment, supremely elegant, a Guecha is the model, the example, the rare flower cultivated with loving care. A princess may consult her on the laws of good breeding and etiquette; if a poet compose a madrigal in her honor, she will reply to him in the language of the gods, with as much modesty as spirit; and if she inspire passion in a man marriage is the only possible denouement.

The amusements of the young men of the world at Tokio are then often of a very refined character. If the dancer consents to come at her invitation, it is that they may enjoy the charm of her exquisite conversation, the grace of her toilet, her beauty, the song she sings to the accompaniment of the chamisan, and her plastic dancing, which will carry her spectators back to the world of the gods and heroes.

In former days if a Guecha sinned against chasity, the chief Shogun himself punished her by condemning her to pass several years amongst the fallen women of Yoshiwara.

But the Guecha is beginning, like everything else, to degenerate, and before long she will disappear.—Harper's Weekly.

Onions For the Complexion.

Walter Besant says: "May I help you, madam, to an onion? Will you prefer the vegetable raw or fried? Or you may have it boiled, baked or sliced in vinegar. You decline the offer? Fie! It is because you know not the sovereign qualities of this vegetable. The praises of the onion have been recently set forth in an American paper, which says: 'If ugly girls will eat onions they won't be ugly. Ugliness is another term for sickness. Well people feel good and look good. Health is beautiful, and onions are health-giving.' The writer goes on to explain that onions, raw or cooked, stimulate all the organs, aid digestion and—which is perhaps of greater importance—brighten the complexion. Some of the best people, particularly in college and literary circles, are not 'at home' even to their intimate friends on Sunday. The ladies stay at home on Sunday to consume leeks for the lily cheeks.' After the leek soup a cup of strong black coffee is recommended, with seclusion. Again, madam, may I help you to a few slices of the Bermuda variety for the good of the lily cheek, which they will transform into a cheek of rose and lily?"

A Ripe Side to the Orange.

There is a ripe side to the orange as well as to the peach. The stem half of the orange is usually not so sweet and juicy as the other half, not because it receives less sunshine, but possibly because the juice gravitates to the lower half, as the orange commonly hangs below its stem.

Pleased With the Relief.

YACHTING NOT UNMIXED PLEASURE.

Some Experiences Possess None of the Charms So Often Painted.

One commonly thinks of yaching as the most delightful of summer pastimes, and the very word calls up visions of a "wet sheet, and a flowing sea, and a wind that follows fast," and whistlings through the rigging, blue sky, white caps, driving clouds and all that sort of thing, to say nothing of the possibilities of delightful companionship and the delicious unconventionality of meeting one's fellow men and women with all the formality and restraints of on shore life thrown off; no making talk or anything of that kind, but knocking about carelessly and easily in flannel suits and having "a real good time." Or, again, racing, with its excitements, and cruising, with all the possibilities of adventure. Such is the popular and accepted view of yachting, but there is another and gloomy side to the picture which the writer, who is sometimes inclined to growl, can set forth clearly in three distinct statements, with an open challenge to contradiction—first, that to "go and take a sail" in a small boat belonging to some one else and to sail aimlessly about on the open lake is "an awful bore"; secondly, that to go as "amateur crew" on a rowing yacht is not only a bore, but a hardship, and lastly, that cruising is a lottery absolut-ly dependent on the weather. Fogs, calms, storms and head winds are quite as usual as free winds and sunshine.

Observe that nothing has been said about sea-sickness, which makes yachting impossible to so many.

There is no place on earth where the sun can strike down out of the sky and bleach and blister and sizzle as it can upon a yacht deck. There is no place that can be hotter or more stuffy or more uncomfortable than a yacht's cabin on a hot day, when there is no wind or when the wind is dead aft, and when it is rough, and the water is diving across the yacht's deck in a sheet of white foam, and the crew are all huddled behind the shrouds, into which old oilskins have been stuffed to make a screen, and the man at the wheel has lifelines running from the main sheet to the main shrouds on either side of him to keep him from being washed overboard, and the fire is out in the galley, and the cook has been scalded by the soup stock jumping out of the boiler, and the barometer is dropping like mad, and the skylight leaks so that every wave which comes aboard sends bucketfuls of swash down into the cabin, and when every now and then a wave comes aboard and pounds down on her deck like a load of pig iron, and those below are shaken about like corn in a popper, and those on deck simply hold on and duck their heads—when such is the condition of affairs, yachting would not be considered a pastime.

The delights of being "amateur crew" can be briefly summed up. They consist in lying flat on your face either in a hot sun or a pouring rain, and if you turn over having the owner shout at you: "Keep still! Do you think that you're a wild elephant? You jarred her all over that time." Furthermore, all yachts are not rigged alike, and if the amateur crew is told at a critical point in the race—say just before rounding the leeward mark—to let go the spinnaker halyards and let the balloon jib halyards go instead, so that the whole sail goes over to leaward, the remarks which will be made to him will be "unfit for publication."

An Image of Gold.

Two miles out from Kamakura and about twenty miles from Yokohama, Japan, on a terrace, near the temple of Kamakura, sits the most gigantic idol, or heathen god, now known to exist. This immense brazen image of a deity was built or made during the reign of Shomu, who was forty sixth in the present line of Emperors, and died in the year 748 A.D. This idol, which has been prayed to daily for more than 1,200 years by the crowd of devotees that hourly cluster about it, is still in perfect repair, and justly reckoned as one of the greatest wonders in the Orient. Frank Dobbins, who visited Dia-Butsu the same summer that the writer worshipped (?) at the shrine, and has given the best description of the god that has yet been written, says:

"The dimensions of the god are truly colossal. His height from the base of the lotus flower, upon which he sits, to the top of his head is 63½ feet; and above this rises an aureole 14 feet wide, and above which again rises for several feet the flame like glory which encloses or arches in the whole figure. The face proper is 15 feet long; its width 9½ feet. The eyes are 3 feet 9 inches long from corner to corner; the eyebrows 5½ feet, and the ears 8½ feet. The chest is 20 feet in depth, and the middle finger is exactly 5 feet long. Around the sides, shoulders and head of the god, in front of the aureole, are 16 figures, each in a sitting posture, and each 8 feet in height. The leaves of the immense lotus, upon which the god sits, are each 10 feet long and 6 feet wide, there being 56 of them in the cluster. The casting must have been wonderfully well executed, although the fineness of the leaf edges and other parts which I was able to examine, and the elaborate engravings which can still be traced upon the lotus flower itself in the uninjured parts, leave no doubt that the founder's art was supplemented here and there by artists with file and graver. The right hand is open and raised upward; the left rests upon the lap."

The image weighs about 450 tons, and is made of a combination of gold, tin, copper and mercury in these proportions:

	Pounds.
Gold	500
Tin	16,827
Mercury	1,953
Copper	986,080
Total	1,005,361

All other existing colossal images are pigmies compared with Dia-Butsu, whose hard visaged face has looked down on the meaningless rites of heathen idolators for more than 12 centuries.

Another Watson Cutter for Toronto.

Probably the most important addition to Toronto's fleet of yachts next year will be Mr. George H. Gooderham's 35-footer. G. F. Watson, of Glasgow, the famed designer of the Valkyrie and many other English and Scotch racers, has the design in hand. The design will be soon completed and the frames are expected to arrive next month. The building will be done here, as was the case with the Zelma and the Vedette. The advent of the new boat should add greatly to the interest of next season's racing. Mr. Gooderham has asked for a racer and not a cruiser and the summer of '94 should see some great contests between the Watson cutter and the Fyfe lugger Vedette.

The plans will probably be ready in February. The dimensions call for a deep, powerful boat of cutter type. There are two Watson boats already in Toronto, the Vreda, Commodore Boswell's flagship, and the Aileen, Capt. G. Myles' cruiser. The Vreda, of course, with the last few years' revolutions in yacht designing, is of an older vintage, but still possessing great speed.
