By Michael Newmarch LONDON, (AP)—In their own after 12 years in government harness, the men who buy Britain's grain began scouring the world last week to feed man and beast.

They have a tough assignment. The government ended its wartime system of bulk-purchasing wheat, flour and animal feeding stuffs last week and told traders to use private-enterprise channels to acquire the huge amount of grain Britain imports each year.

The big switchover came at a critical time. This nation has just walked out of the International Wheat Agreement, complaining the maximum price under the agreement of $2.05 a bushel is too high.

As a result, Britain, world's largest importer of wheat, must shop in the free market, where prices are higher still.

The government also announced all grain subsidies—except a payment to bakers for one grade of bread—will end at the next harvest. Any increase in grain costs will fall directly on consumers.

Private enterprise thus looks as though it is taking the rap for increased bread prices unless Britain can break the world market and set wheat prices tumbling.

If Britain succeeds in buying below the government's wheat in the free market, wheat agreement prices inevitably would fall too.

Britain is talking about $2 a bushel. Canada, the United States and Australia all are certain to resist British pressure for cheaper wheat.

But British grain men, who solidly backed the government's walk-out of the wheat agreement, are not dependent.

World wheat inventories are building up, and are expected here to hit peacetime records in the exporting countries before 1953 is over.

after ambushing a Canadian patrol in no man's land. A second patrol was sent out to rescue the remnants of the first. Then the Chinese attacked the main British and Canadian positions.

"Chinese and their mortars hit us simultaneously," said one British officer who fought through the attack. "They came in screaming, hurling grenades and firing heavily."

While the attack was in progress, the second Canadian patrol returned and found the Chinese had over-run their forward trenches.

"One of our men came back to find Chinese looting his bunker," said a Canadian officer. "Two of them came out carrying his boots. He killed them, took his boots back to his bunker and put them under his bed."

Discusses Mental Health Attitude

From the clinics, from practising doctors, from hospital records, there are reports of great numbers of illnesses which are caused or aggravated by emotional disturbances, said Dr. J. A. MacVicar, in a statement regarding Mental Health Week.

These illnesses are not the ones that are sent to mental hospitals, but the sufferers live a long and miserable life in and out of doctors' offices and general hospitals.

Some of these people have been tense, nervous, angry and frustrated, sad, lonely or afraid for so long their bodies become affected with such things as ulcers, high blood pressure, chronic diarrhoea (colitis), skin rashes, headaches and muscle pains, etc. Then their misery is twofold—with nervous disturbances plus bodily illness.

You all know how common such diseases are. Now psychiatrists find that many of these diseases can be helped, and in some cases cured by having the patients discuss their "nervousness" and finding the answers to their emotional troubles.

Ill-health or disease is "dis-ease" (unsatisfactory ease), which involves the physical, psychological and spiritual, and that all these areas must be in a satisfactory state if a person is to acquire or maintain health.

There will never be enough psychiatrists to look after all the emotionally troubled people who ask for or need psychiatric help. Nor should there ever be. Many who now go to psychiatrists could have been helped long ago by proper understanding of their attitudes, feelings and sensations in their bodies. This understanding can be given by parents, clergy, nurses, teachers, and doctors if these individuals will learn to discuss illness from the emotional angle as freely as immunization, tuberculosis, good posture, and good food are discussed now.

While the attack was in progress, the second Canadian patrol returned and found the Chinese had over-run their forward trenches.

"One of our men came back to find Chinese looting his bunker," said a Canadian officer. "Two of them came out carrying his boots. He killed them, took his boots back to his bunker and put them under his bed."

Two other women who collapsed outside bedroom doors are in serious condition with second and third degree burns. They are Mrs. Mae Doherty, 45-year-old owner of the house, and Mrs. Maria Zorka, a boarder.

Eight people were in the rambling, 10-room brick house when the fire of unknown origin swept a downstairs living room and up to the second floor.

A battalion of Reds—about 750—slammed up against positions held by the 3rd battalion of the Royal Canadian Regiment and the 3rd battalion of the Patricia's. A Red company—about 150 men—hit the 1st battalion of the Fusiliers.

New Retail Display Area Nearing Completion At M.F. Schurman Co. Ltd

The firm of M. F. Schurman Company Limited have for some months been making extensive alterations on their retail sales branch in Charlottetown, which have resulted in the addition of a spacious, up-to-date showroom. This showroom, when completed will afford the prospective customer an opportunity to see various materials as they appear in the finished job, and some helpful ideas will be available from the many attractive and comprehensive displays.

To describe the display area in detail, the first feature to catch the eye is a handsome fireplace built into a wall. Along one side wall of the showroom, doors are shown in a variety of designs for interior and exterior use, and are displayed in such a way that they may be viewed individually from any angle. On the floor along this same wall may be seen rubber, linoleum and plastic floor coverings in several attractive colors and laid in a number of interesting designs. In the centre of the floor are circular tables, which are built around the supporting columns on which hardware, paints, etc., will be displayed. A complete set of kitchen cabinets has been installed in "L" shape at one end presenting a smart, modern appearance and including among its many convenient features a set of revolving shelves—Lazy Susan, which places items stored on them always conveniently at hand.

The counter is covered with linoleum in a solid color extending up the wall under the cabinets and its flat edges making a water-tight bond on the linoleum covering. The cabinets are built in units, one of which contains a folding ironing-board, and will be available to the trade according to the requirements of the individual kitchen. Colorful, durable abortive counter covering and beautiful, realistic plastic wall tiles are attractively displayed in their applied state. Conspicuously located in an alcove is a complete stock of builders' hardware including lock sets, cabinet accessories, and all the other various and sundry items necessary in finishing a home.
