Lines Written on the Departure of Ven. Archdeacon Read.

The following lines, composed by one of Archdeacon Read's parishioners previous to his departure from the Island, shows the estimation in which he was held by at least one of them:—

RUSTICO, June 10th, 1878.

We now arise to bid adieu
To a kind loving friend,
Who oft has told us what to do
To save us at the end.

He labored hard to show us all
The way we all must come;
And pray'd to God to hear the call,
And save us every one.

He did his best to bring us to
The arms of God above;
And we should all our duty do,
And show to him our love.

A faithful shepherd he has been,
And guided all his flock;
To keep the wolf from coming in,
Nor let the fold be broke.

With hearts of grief we all should weep,
And wish our Pastor well;
As he was faithful to his sheep,
While he with them did dwell.

His loving spouse, we all do wish
A pleasant voyage across
The briny sea, and may she reach
The shore without a loss—

Of any kind; but may she gain
Her health upon the sea;
The Lord preserve her free from pain
Throughout eternity.

God bless our pastor all his life,
And spare him many days
To guard his flock by day and night,
And warn them of their ways.

A faithful shepherd should be loved,
Who well attends his flock,
And never lets the field be moved,
For fear it might be broke.

The faithful shepherd that we had
To guard us many years,
Had all his folds in safety made
But now he leaves with tears.

The tears he sheds are for the sheep
For fear they go astray,
Some shepherds often fall asleep
And pass the time away.

Not so with him we have to bid
A sorrowful adieu;
He kept his sheep in safety hid
As faithful shepherds do.

No doubt the sheep will bleat for him,
And miss him very much;
As he was always kind to them,
And sharp the wolf did watch.

But now the flock is left to one,
Whose voice they do not know;
But soon they'll have to him to come,
If he them kindly show.

I hope he will the flock defend
From foes of any kind;
And shew them that he is their friend,
And keep them in his mind.

Now, fare thee well, our loving friend,
May God preserve your life,
And save your soul when life shall end,
Also your loving wife. J. G.

Farewell to you, dear Doctor Read,
Farewell to you my friend;
I trust you as a friend indeed,
On whom I can depend.

I oft have listened to your voice,
While you the Word proclaimed,
Of Jesus and His Holy Law,
That lead us to the lamb.

You labored hard, for many years,
And faithfully did warn,
Your flock to shun the many snares
That satan sets to charm.

But now you have to leave us all,
And cross the raging sea;
May God's great blessing on you fall,
And reach your destiny.

In safety and the best of health
Your humble servant prays,
And grant you blessings more than wealth,
Through your remaining days.

I hope you will excuse these lines,
As they no doubt are not,
As good as you have seen sometimes,
By better poets wrote.

I never in my life before,
Attempted for to write
To a D. D. on any score,
So please excuse the like.

The love for you, my friend,
Induced me for to try;
I hope you will your hand extend—
I'll grieve if you deny.

No doubt that after you are gone,
You will be sadly missed;
For often you have really done
More than we could expect.

You travelled here thro' cold and storm,
While we remained at home;
And you your duty did perform
And ne'er appeared to moan.

When quite unfit for man or beast,
You often travell'd out;
Your love for us did ne'er decrease—
Of that we have no doubt.

Now fare thee well, my loving friend,
May God prolong your life;
May He be with you to the end
And keep you free from strife;

And when the trials of life are o'er,
May you his joys receive!
And join with them who are gone before,
Eternally to live. —J. G.

Good Men.

The Toronto Mail remarks that "It is a fact worthy of note that while the Conservative Party will find its ranks strengthened in the next Parliament by men of the highest ability, there is nothing to be seen in the Ministerial ranks but the old 'Brown stuff.' The Government go to the country with their Huntingtons, Laflamms, Walkers, and Glasses. The Opposition present anew for acceptance such able and tried men as Mr. Tilley in New Brunswick, and Mr. James McDonald in Nova Scotia. These are natural leaders of men—the best stuff the country affords. The party which possesses such men as Sir John McDonald, Dr. Tupper, Mr. Tilley, Mr. James McDonald, Mr. Dalton McCarthy, M. Masson, M. Langevin, not to mention many others whom we might name, is not an effete party. They are the live leaders of the live party of the country, and having a following of which any leaders might be proud. They are the men to whom the country naturally turns in the hour of its trial.

Beaconsfield's Triumph at Berlin.

The St. John Telegraph remarks that "No one, in view of the news of the past few days, can doubt that the central figure at Berlin and the guiding spirit of the Congress, has been England's representative, Earl Beaconsfield. This is a fact which must be particularly galling to those half-hearted Englishmen who are continually decrying the British Premier as a charlatan and a pretender, and likewise to those journals in the United States which three times a week contain an article on the decay of English influence in Continental politics. Those journals have been telling us for months past how Bismarck would arrange matters to suit himself when the Congress met, how German influence would be thrown in favor of Russia and how England would slink away from the Congress humiliated and abashed, with all her claims disregarded and all her hopes destroyed. How far different from this fancy picture has been the reality. Bismarck, instead of being the principal man in the Congress, has been to a large extent a lay figure; once or twice he has tried to induce Earl Beaconsfield to moderate his demands, but never with any success, in fact the British representative told him plainly that he did not go to Berlin to yield. Gortschakoff, the principal Russian representative, has become so completely demoralized at the turn things have taken, that he has retired from the Congress, leaving Schouvaloff to do whatever additional backing down is necessary to satisfy Earl Beaconsfield.

More "Reform" Men and Measures.

It is not a great while since the Grits in Nova Scotia put into the Legislative Council an importer whose importations of molasses, his account books, etc., had, not a year before, to be seized in consequence of his violation of the Customs Law, and whom Inspector Cadlip compelled to disgorge an immense sum for duties. The same thing is being done in Ontario. There the "Reformers" are running for the Commons a candidate who was charged, arrested and punished for defrauding the revenue, as per the following certificate:—

"BROCKVILLE, June 14, 1878.

"I hereby certify that, on the 16th March, 1863, John Philip Wiser was charged before me with having a concealed pipe on his premises, for the purpose of defrauding the revenue. It was clearly proved that he had defrauded the revenue by illegally distilling 1,226 gallons of proof whiskey, which had been seized. The suit was brought to recover an additional penalty, beyond the forfeiture of the liquor, of $500. As it was shown, however, that the pipe was not concealed in the floor or the wall, in accordance with the statute, the Court had to dismiss the case. The fact, however, of his having defrauded the revenue was proved in the clearest manner."

"JOHN McMULLEN."

Mr. Wiser, strange to say, is running as a Prohibitionist in the Grit interest! There are some other curious temperance men working for the Grits, as per the following:—

Hon. Billa Flint owns the Bridgewater House, a temperance house, in the village of Madoc, and he writes to the Review, complaining that some of the friends of Mr. O'Flynn, the Ministerial candidate in North Hastings, brought whiskey there the other day and dispensed it to the electors. Of course Mr. O'Flynn, like Mr. Wiser, the South Grenville distiller, is pledged to Prohibition.

Mr. Blake will not canvass in South Bruce, but Mr. R. M. Wells, his shadow, will do the canvassing for him. He has been hard at work for some time. And this is the way he works, as witness the Bruce Herald: "Rupert appears to have as profound a contempt for the Dunkin Act as Mr. Blake for past professions. 'Go it boys!' he says there is nothing to fear while Mr. Wells is present. He undertakes to protect the tavernkeepers from all harm who sell spirits to him. A very nice position for a man of Mr. Wells' position to take."

The Duke of Connaught has returned to England, accompanied by Prince Frederick Charles and his illustrious bride, Princess Mary of Prussia, who was presented to the Queen and the members of the royal family. The Duke has been residing since the 9th inst., at the Palace of Glenicke, the home of Prince Frederick Charles, near Berlin.
