is the sole network authority. In addition to administering its national and regional networks, the C. B. C. is responsible for the temporary, informal, limited hook-ups comprised mainly of privately-owned stations which it sets up for special purposes from time to time. These are called subsidiary hookups.

"In the past, the CBC has restricted its function to approving subsidiary hookups as application was made. In the future, it intends as well to make all the necessary arrangements such as dealing with sponsors and agencies direct, booking time on the stations concerned, noting rates and other like administrative details.

"This is in accordance with the policy stated before the parliamentary committee. The committee was informed that all hookups would in future be arranged by and through the corporation in order to ensure effective co-ordination of network broadcasting.

"The change does not involve the taking over of private stations or interference in their operation. Nothing will affect any existing regulation. On the contrary, it is largely one of administrative procedure."

Dead Woman's Fingerprints Clue To Killer

CLEVELAND, July 9 (AP)—The story revealed by a dead woman's thumbprint—the only clue to identification of the third of Cleveland's dozen "strange murder" victims—led authorities Saturday to a pile of bones and a step nearer solution of at least one of the bizarre mysteries of the headless dead.

The thumbprint showed the victim to be Mrs. Florence Polillo, 42. Immediately the investigation focused upon the vicinity of her home and on a search for her remains.

This week the trial, nearly four years old, led to the first confession of the entire series of decapitations. And today's brought authorities within a stone's throw of the Kingsbury run section where four of the bodies were found. There, detectives discovered a dozen small bones at spot where Sheriff Martin L. O'Donnell said a Frank Dozela employed bricklayer, confessed he burned the bodies.

Dozela previously had confessed he killed Mrs. Polillo in an argument over money, the Sheriff said.

"The heavily muscled, squat man shielded his face as deputies dug with shovels. They gathered up the bones—none of which appeared to be from a skull—and removed them for examination to determine if they were human.

"I poured a gallon of gasoline over the head and set it afire," O'Donnell quoted Dozela as saying.

"Then I covered it over. For two years on my way to work and on my way home I stopped and looked to see if the ground was disturbed."

Earlier he had told of throwing the head into Lake Erie. This change in the story, with other details, O'Donnell told to a group of reporters.

Dozela said he had been ordered to close before he could determine whether the suspect was linking with any of the 11 other killings. A lie detector test was ordered for Dozela, but held in abeyance.

DANZIG NAZIS REAFFIRM AIM TO JOIN REICH

Defy Poland And Ridicule Britain At Mass Meetings.

(By ALVIN J. STEINKOPF Associated Press Foreign Staff)

OLIVA, Free City of Danzig, July 9 (AP)—Nazis of Danzig at two mass meetings today thundered defiance at Poland and pledged blind faith in the leadership of Chancellor Hitler. Ridicule was aimed at Great Britain and France.

Tens of thousands of perspiring Free City residents on the western shore of Danzig Harbor. This Polish munitions dump on the fringe of the City of Danzig has long been the subject of quarrels between Poland and Danzig in the League of Nations.

First Forster spoke at Oliva, picturesque town near the Baltic Sea. There he warned Poland that Danzig had adequate defenses against any "aggressive" action that Poles may be contemplating.

Then he appeared at the Harbor City of Neufahrwasser, near the Westerplatte munitions depot, where he advised citizens of the community to "embrace Polish influence wherever possible."

"The construction of the competitive Polish harbor of Gdynia, less than 10 kilometers (6.14 miles) from the spot on which I stand has been a decisive factor forcing us to recognize the necessity of political union with Germany," Forster said.

"Now it is up to you to prove to the world that this is a German harbor."

Poland was booed lustily and Great Britain ridiculed at the Oliva meeting.

The crowd laughed when the Nazi leader referred to "harmless London—a term indicating stupid fellows."

U.S. Warship's Visit Recalls Historic Raid

When the U. S. destroyer "Hamilton" of the United States Atlantic Squadron steams into Charlottetown harbor on Friday next to take part in the Confederation Celebration being held in this capital city July 16-21, it will be an entirely different visit from that made by two armed schooners, namely, the "Lynch" and "Franklin" commanded by Captains Nicholas Broughton and John Selwyn respectively, both of Marblehead, Mass., which were dispatched to the St. Lawrence by the Revolutionary Congress in October 1776.

They sailed into Charlottetown harbor on November 17th and took on board as prisoners the acting governor Mr. Callbeck and a secretary Mr. Wright along with the provincial seal and brought them to Washington's headquarters at Cambridge, Mass. General Washington released the prisoners immediately and returned them to Halifax expressing regret over the incident.

The acting Governor on his release wrote General Washington: "I should ill deserve the generous treatment which Your Excellency has been pleased to show me had I not gratitude to acknowledge so great a favor. I cannot ascribe any part of it to my own merit, but must impute the whole to the philanthropy and humane disposition that so truly characterizes General Washington. Be so kind, therefore, as to accept, the only return in my power, that of my most grateful thanks." The provincial seal has never been recovered and provincial officials would very much like to know, if it still in existence, its location.

In the present visit of the American warship expresses the friendly relations that exist between the United States and Canada and also with Great Britain which have received added emphasis in the recent visit of their Majesties the King and Queen to the United States.

Officials of the Canadian National Railways, expecting a large travel to this Island Province for the celebration which commemorates the 75th anniversary of the first meeting to discuss union among the Provinces of Canada, as Ontario and Quebec were then known, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, and Prince Edward Island. Coach and train fares are being put into effect by the railway from Charlottetown July 13th to Saturday July 15th, with return limit Tuesday July 23rd.

In his apparent decision against taking Winston Churchill into the ministerial fold, J. L. Garvin, well-known commentator, writing in the Observer (Conservative) said: "The British Government will make war in common rather than purchase a false and fatal reprieve by any kind of surrender or betrayal."

"Mr. Chamberlain believes... British determination is now more effectively recognized by all concerned and that to bring in Mr. Churchill as a demonstration would act as a superfluous irritant which would be denounced in Germany as a glaring proof of aggressive designs and might be deliberately exploited for all purposes which are inimical to chances of peace."

"Meanwhile we must not be misled by the pause in Nazi arming of Danzig. If the peril comes, a decisive direction for the Reich will lead through Hungary to Rumania. For this major plans are laid."

However, Mr. Garvin adds: "Yet, for aught we know to anyone, whether in the Government or out of it, drastic (cabinet) reconstruction may become imperative during the next six weeks or so."

Euler Discusses New Industries At Liberal Rally

(By George Boyle)

PINCH, Ont., July 9 (CP)—Lionel Chevrier, minister of foreign capital to conduct industries here but it must be with the "distinct understanding" that no foreigner be brought in to do work that can be done by Canadians, trades minister Euler told the Stormont Liberal convention here yesterday.

The convention unanimously re-nominated Lionel Chevrier, present federal member for Stormont, as its candidate in the next election.

Mr. Euler said there had been a "pretty fierce argument" over proposals of Bata Shoe Company of Czechoslovakia to establish a plant in Ontario, bringing in a number of employees described as "key men" from its parent plant.

"The shoe manufacturers do not want another shoe factory, claiming there are enough already in Canada, and I understand their point of view," the minister said.

The view of the government was that it was "bad to have capital come into the country, conduct industries here and give employment to Canadians." If Bata, head of the shoe firm, wanted to come here, the country would be glad to have him—but with the distinct understanding that Canadian labor would be employed wherever possible.

Mr. Euler dealt at some length with articles of the government's tariff policy and its implications, particularly. He reminded those who claimed extremely high tariffs would cure unemployment that Canada had experienced the worst unemployment between 1930 and 1935, during the Bennett government's regime, when tariffs were highest in the country's history.

He personally believed in tariffs, not as a Liberal or Conservative instrument, but as an instrument to be used in the best interests of the country, he said. When Canada was shut out of other countries, then its own producers should have a fair chance in the markets of their own country.

unwilling to participate, scurried through the heavy high-tide traffic resulting "cash" and "cash" taken aboard the hospital ship "Royal Princess" where red ink "brands" were treated by steel-helmeted nurses and doctors.

From the deck of an excursion boat and along Greenview Pier hundreds of volunteers afloat and on land could be seen carrying out the drill.

Sea scouts received telephone messages and relayed them to boats on the river by flag semaphore signals. The boats dashed to scenes of "his" recorded by the "raiders."

A ship in the channel flashed a signal that aircraft formation was headed toward the coast. This message was received in a secret control room somewhere in the southern counties from which the defenses were directed.

Urges Food Reserves

The noted economist Sir Arthur Salter, arguing in the Observer that Great Britain should have built up food reserves during the past six months, guardedly mentioned the same time limit for a new crisis.

Sir Arthur urges quick steps to remedy the situation claiming this country would experience a serious food shortage in the event of a protracted conflict.

"Suppose now we have not six months but only six weeks, is there anything we can do more quickly?" he asked.

He suggested immediate importation "to the utmost capacity of all available ships and ports, reserves of all essential imports which can be stored without difficulty and do not quickly deteriorate."

Specifically mentioned were timber, ores, and metals. Sir Arthur said it would be better to import them and dump them in fields rather than not have them.

Sir Arthur recalled that during the Great War imports of foods and essential commodities were drastically curtailed to a point where "we just got through—but only just."

He contended that in another conflict, while Great Britain would command the sea, imports would be reduced nevertheless, to a greater extent than during the Great War.

Immediate amassing of supplies that can be stored easily would release ships later for carrying foodstuffs and perishable goods, he said.

NASCOPIE

Arctic life, a scruit-coated Royal Canadian Mounted Police Corporal whose job will be that of quartermaster, and an R. C. M. P. Constable.

Captain Thomas F. Smelle, who spends the winter in the company's office at Winnipeg was in command, for his 16th successive northern voyage. He was too busy greeting passengers to talk much but let it be known the weather would be cool—no chills (from 26 degrees above zero, however).

First stop in the trip will be Hebron, Labrador. After that she will touch ports bearing names like Stouffville, Wolskhome, Churchill, Man, and Craig Harbor on far-north Ellesmere Land. When the Nascopee puts into port at Halifax next Sept. 1st she will have visited 21 northern ports and travelled nearly 11,000 miles.

Heads Government Party

Head of the Government party, Major D. L. McKeand of Ottawa, has made the trip seven times but he said the present trip was "just as fresh as the first year."

An 18-year-old college student, Edward Charles Boyer, Jr., anticipated hunting polar bears with his father, Dr. E. C. Boyer, of Johnstown, P. r.

For Mr. and Mrs. Louis Wallace of Rancho Santa Fe, Calif., the trip will be a case of "one from one extreme to the other. They have just completed an 18,000-mile motor trip through the near east and before the next Sept. 1st they will have visited 21 northern ports and travelled nearly 11,000 miles.

"There is no where else to go just now," Wallace said. "The trip may be a little bit but at least we'll be out of the war zone."

M. Dumber of Oxford University will study planktonic organisms—forms of drifting or floating organisms—in the northern seas. He will investigate migration and changes in the number of land mammals.

Entertainments aboard includes moving pictures. Among pictures to be shown will be the one recording the presentation of the company's tribute to King George VI during the Royal Visit to Winnipeg. Mr. Cooper presented the King with two elk head and two black beaver skins—the rent prescribed by his charter to be paid whenever a monarch visits the territory which the company once administered as Rupert's land.
