Spirit Of Labor Day Aids Farming Country

IN ONE section of our country, Johnson County, Tennessee, the real spirit of Labor Day has produced a near miracle.

A few years ago the farmers could scarcely make a living. Incomes were low. Jobs hard to get. Business was slack. There were also no new job opportunities.

AMERICAN INGENUITY

But the old American spirit of get-up-and- go that built our country was still alive. The people took action, formed a county industrial commission, started work on an industrial park and voted a $400,000 bond issue to attract industry.

Committees were formed to explore ways to economic development. The University of Tennessee, the U.S. Department of Agriculture and Commerce, and local people pitched in to help.

THRIVING COMMUNITY

Today, there's a 30-acre industrial park in Johnson County on ground that once was a farm. A garment factory provides employment for 200 local men and women and soon another 100 may be added. A cotton work-glove factory employs 115 persons. It, too, plans to expand — to hire up to 200 people, with an annual payroll of $500,000. A hosiery mill employs 20 workers.

Farmers have doubled their milk sales and increased sales of cattle, calves, potatoes, eggs and strawberries. But, of course, more persons are eating in the county.

RECREATIONAL FACILITIES

Recreation in the Cherokee National Forest is being emphasized. The Forest Service is reopening old trails, building footbridges, camping and parking facilities which bring in trade.

The payoff — in Mountain City, bank deposits rose $809,000 in two years! All because the Johnson County people believed in themselves and took action.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN TILKER

Potted Plants, Mixed Flowers Decorate Church In Caledonia

A lovely summer wedding was solemnized at Caledonia Presbyterian Church when Carole, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Matheson, Brooklyn, became the bride of John Tilker of Toronto.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Carl Currie. Mrs. John Peardon was organist, and accompanied Miss Evelyn Bears, as she sang "O Perfect Love", before the bride entered the church and "The Voice that Breathed O'er Eden" during the signing of the register.

Floral arrangements of potted plants, lupins and mixed flowers decorated the church.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length gown of lace trimmed silk organza over white taffeta, featuring a fitted bodice, lily point sleeves and bouffant skirt Her shoulder length veil fell from a crown of pearls and sequins. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses.

Mrs. William Heise, sister of the bride, as matron of honor wore a street length dress of silk brocade, with overskirt of organza. She carried a bouquet of white carnations. The bride's attendants, Linda Mathieson and Joyce Mathieson wore dresses of mint green and blue brocade with organdie overskirt, and white headdresses. They carried bouquets of white flowers. Susan Mathieson, flower girl, wore pink cotton and carried a basket of assorted flowers.

The groom was attended by William Heise. The ushers were Malcolm MacPherson and Fred Nelson.

Mrs. Buddy MacCullough was in charge of the guest book.

The reception for 70 guests was held at Hillside Inn, Montague.

For a honeymoon trip in the National Park the bride chose an ensemble of aqua linen with white accessories and white corsage.

The young couple have taken up residence in Toronto.

YOUTHFUL TURBAN

ELIZABETH, one of our most eminent American milliners, created this youthful turban for the first chilly days of autumn.

The hat is fashioned of a fabric called "French mousse," which in plain English is fluffed up, combed felt.

It is banded in cherry red and the dome-like crown is in white.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Old Time Threshings Were Once A Community Effort

Tonight, we tally, putting a diagonal mark through the vertical strokes on wall or shingle, to complete that count, which, represents the days of the week about gone — As we have so often seen the farmers do in the long ago, thus keeping count of their bushels. At the cleaning perhaps, when the grain sheeted down from the hand-powered fanners in the barn-and out of doors Spring was making all things new, about. Or again in the blue and gold of the harvest tide, when the wheat, it might be, the most cherished of all the grain-crop, was being threshed, treasuring well the bushels, so tallied.

How — we have mentioned this to James with a longing — we should like to see again one of the old-time threshings at our barns, gathering folks as they then were, back to the work of it, once more. See them bring in with a seasonal and quite an impressive parade of horse-drawn equipment, the nowquaint machines of those days: the marvel that was the upright gasoline engine, and the wonder of the threshing machine.

What great ceremony went to setting up the latter on the clean-swept barn floor, and in drawing up the former a few feet beyond the door. How interesting too to see presently, the connecting belts slipped on, and to feel then the gear's motion; to watch the crew, as one man, take respective places at the work.

"I'll go 'on the sheaves' " a younger hand once proposed.

"It's not where you or I will go" an older one commented in a lesson to youth, "It's where gasoline engine, and the wonder we will be put — remember that!"

And they went, each one fitting into the pattern of the whole. He that "handed sheaves" placed each in turn on "the table." The hand-cutter, blade sharp severed his band. The feeder, with rhythmic moves, right hand, and left set the pace of the work. And now the wheat, the bread to be our very staff of life, commenced to flow to the basket of the one "tending grain" to be carried to the bin or perhaps the first bushels went into the white sacks to make grist ready for the mill. This straw, valued lightly, fell from the machine to him who passed it on to the one or ones who stowed it in shed or in barnyard in a mound, which was the delight of lads and a dog, who later played there.

So we tally now the days of this August week, and suffer them to go. Soon now, Sunday will summon folks to their churches — to worship, to find there by the strength and courage to meet the trials — and the happiness of the days ahead. Yet not only on our Sabbaths, one reminds us, can our thoughts rise Heavenward:

"Not on the Sabbath only,
In the dear house of prayer,
Where earthly din can not intrude,
And only God is there.

But all week long, in spite
Of care and vanity:
Let our thoughts rise to Thee in praise,
Our God, so great and good."

Until Tuesday — — Diary — Good-night....
