Civil Rights Movement Shows Some Dissension

By DON MCKEE

ATLANTA (AP) — Leadership of the U.S. civil rights movement constantly finds dissension in the ranks—especially among the young militants—but Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and his staff manage to keep the reins in their hands.

"I don't believe King is the leader of the Negro people," said one youth, Courtland Cox of New York, a few days ago in Selma, Ala., where a Negro voter drive is centred Cox is a member of the Student Non violent Co - ordinating Committee, most militant of the civil rights groups.

"I don't think any one man can be the leader," Cox went on. "That's not a democracy."

His attitude is typical of many SNCC members. Cox also is typical of the scores of activists who drift in and out of the storm centre.

SNCC's own leaders take a different view, although within the over-all civil rights leadership there often are disagreements. This does not, however mean a splitting up.

"We have been working together on all these things," said James Forman of Atlanta, executive secretary of SNCC.

AGREEMENT MADE

For example, Forman said, it was agreed King would announce a Montgomery march Thursday and he would announce a sit-in at the White House.

John Lewis, the Alabama-born national chairman of SNCC, denied reports of a rift with King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference. He or some of his staff sit in on the strategy meetings with King and his staff during specific drives.

"There are diverse opinions," said Rev. James Bevel, King's denim-clad field lieutenant.

"Dr. King is the leader," Bevel said. "The Alabama project was started by Dr. King and SNCC and CORE (Congress on Racial Equality) were invited to join in."

CORE's director, James Farmer, has taken part in some of the strategy talks. Not only do SCLC, SNCC and core coordinate their plans at the top level but every strategy session merged the local civil rights leadership.

MEETINGS DECIDE

Out of these meetings come the decisions—to boycott or not, to march, when to act and now.

King, however, leads. He does not push or command. He gets the consensus and then enunciates it.

The young activists are a problem that sometimes gets out of hand, however. They do not embrace King's philosophy that there is a stopping point—a fine line of not going too far because the Negro minority must convince the white majority "of the righteousness of our cause."

King repeats over and over, "We must not lose faith in our white brothers . . . we must not alienate our white friends."

James Orange, a young giant who has led the SCLC drive in Marion, Ala., said the SNCC members "are so arrogant they want folks to think that because they wear a beard folks ought to listen to them."

Orange, a Negro, said: "They think they are going some place but they always end up in the street. Martin Luther King is the leader of Negroes."

High Journalistic Standards Urged By Cardinal In Talk

MONTREAL (CP) — Maurice Cardinal Roy, in an address here, said the highest possible standards of journalism are required in a world in which people "have to see things as they are and realize what is going on in life."

Cardinal Roy, who as chief Roman Catholic Champlain of the Canadian Army, spoke at the 21st annual meeting of the Canadian War Correspondents' Association. It was his first address outside Quebec City since his appointment to the college of cardinals in January.

Speaking in English, the cardinal, who was a padre during the Second World War, recalled "friendships struck up in those hard years."

"We met men we had never met before and with whom we have remained friends ever since," he said.

He said possibly war correspondents had gained more from their wartime friendships and contacts because of their training and opportunities to meet more people than armed forces personnel did.

The conflict in the Second World War had risen over a fight for freedom and defence of a way of life that still continues.

"We still have the problem of preserving freedom and our way of life," he said. "The world is made up of living beings and always somewhere in the world the problem of freedom, complete freedom and of complete Human living, is an issue.

"We cannot ignore any longer what is going on in places such as Africa and China," he said.

The role of the journalist in reporting happenings and making certain that accurate information was reported was of the highest importance.

"Men all over the earth should be something of a model and up to the standards that are accepted in other fields."

Cardinal Roy said although he spoke as an outsider to journalism and as an average reader he felt when journalists realized because of speed required in their work they had given only partial or inaccurate information, they should correct it.

"Gradually as information is gathered the full picture should be given to readers," he said.

Pay Increase Given Portion Of Mounties

OTTAWA (CP)—A nine-per-cent increase in pay for special constables, marine constables, civilian members and civilian employees of the RCMP was announced here.

The increase, which affects 778 men in the 10,000 - man force, ranges from $232 a year for the lowest rank to $707 for the highest. Like increases for the regular force announced Jan. 29, it will be retroactive to April 1, 1964.

RCMP special constables fill such jobs as aircraft technicians, guards, investigators, watchmen, guides and interpreters. Civilian members include messing officers, radio operators and technicians, and training staff.

Retroactive payments will be made in supplementary cheques at the end of March or early April. New rates of pay should be reflected by the mid-April cheque.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	1 ♠	1 NT	Pass
3 NT

Opening lead—ten of spades.

In notrump contracts the declarer frequently must choose which of two long suits to attack first. Unfortunately, it is next to impossible to formulate a rule that will govern all such cases, and declarer is best advised to rely on the common sense of a particular situation rather than attempt to follow any general rule.

Let's say that South is in three notrump and wins the spade lead with the queen. He now faces a crucial decision—whether to play diamonds or clubs first. He knows from the bidding that he is contending with a long spade suit held by East.

If you look at all four hands, you see that South makes the contract by attacking diamonds first. East's king of diamonds is forced out, declarer ducks the next spade lead, and East's remaining spades wither on the vine. Declarer eventually makes four notrump.

But if South attacks clubs first, he goes down. West takes the ace, returns a spade, and East later scores the king of diamonds to defeat the contract one trick.

The question is whether South, who does not see the opponents' cards, can reasonably determine that it is better to lead diamonds ahead of clubs. Actually, he should, but the reason is not that the diamonds are longer. That is only a coincidence.

South should reason instead that if West has the king of diamonds, the contract cannot go down. He therefore mentally assigns the king to East and dispossesses him of that card before the spades can become established. Attacking diamonds must be right regardless of which defender has the king.

It is true that if East has both the king of diamonds and ace of clubs, the diamond play will prove ineffective. But in that case, the club lead will also fail. The point is that the diamond lead will make the hand if it can be made, while the club lead will from time to time cause the contract to be lost.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X B
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
