

MR. AND MRS. J. C. MacDONALD

Double Ring Ceremony Held At St. Theresa's

Monday morning, July 29, St. Theresa's church was the scene of a happy event when Marion Ellen Rogerson was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to John Charles MacDonald.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Rogerson, Peakes, while the groom is the son of Donald J. MacDonald and the late Mrs. MacDonald of St. Andrews.

Reverend Basil Croken officiated and celebrated the Nuptial Mass. Rev. George MacCormac was present in the sanctuary.

The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with the hands. Her chapel-length veil of French illusion was held by a crown of lace, embroidered with iridescent sequins and seed pearls. She carried a pure rock crystal rosary and a cascade bouquet of white snapdragon and maiden-hair fern.

Mrs. Edward Cullen, sister of the bride as matron of honor, was gowned in a ballerina length gown of shrimp net over taffeta. The bridesmaids were Mrs. Loyola Deighan, sister of the bride, and Miss Ann Cavanagh.

Mrs. Deighan wore a ballerina length gown of yellow net over taffeta and Miss Cavanagh wore lime green net over taffeta. The gowns worn by all the attendants were styled with matching bolero jackets, picture hats and mitts. They each carried a nosegay of coloured carnations to complement each gown.

Mr. Urban MacDonald was best man for his brother. The ushers were Mr. Leslie Rogerson, brother of the bride, and Mr. Harold MacDonald, brother of the groom. Serving the priest was Joseph Rogerson, brother of the bride.

Mrs. Rogerson, mother of the bride, chose for her daughter's wedding, a dress of blue grey taffeta edged with rhinestones at lapels with white accessories and a corsage of red roses.

Following the wedding ceremony, breakfast was held at the Bison Dining Room, Montague, for fifty guests, the dining room being tastefully decorated for the occasion. Centre of attraction on the bride's table was a three-tier wedding cake, topped with a miniature bride and groom.

The toast to the bride was proposed by Reverend Basil Croken, Master of Ceremonies, and responded to by the groom.

The toast to the groom was proposed by Father George MacCormac and responded to by Mr. Urban MacDonald. Mr. Walter Rogerson, father of the bride, and Mr. Donald J. MacDonald, father of the groom, congratulated the young couple with fitting remarks.

A buffet reception for one hundred and fifty guests was held at the bride's home in the afternoon.

For travelling the bride wore a blue silk and rayon corded ensemble with white accessories and a white corsage.

Out of the province guests present were Mr. and Mrs. Reginald MacDonald and Jimmie, Dorchester, Mass.; Mr. and Mrs. James McGuigan, Brockton, Mass.; Mr. Charles Rogerson, Hamilton, Ontario; Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey Rogerson, Hamilton, Ontario; Mrs. Harold Rogerson, Hamilton, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. Urban MacDonald, Ottawa, Ont.; Mr. Leo MacKinnon, Ottawa, Ontario; Mr. Leslie Rogerson, Montreal, P.Q.; Mr. Dunstan MacDonald, Hamilton, Ont.; Mrs. Charles Morrison, Montreal, P.Q.; Mrs. Gerald Mulcahy, Halifax, N.S.

Telegrams of congratulations were received from Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pineau, Brocton, Mass.; Mr. and Mrs. Ronald MacLean, Halifax, N.S.

Prior to her marriage the bride was tendered a shower at the home of Mrs. J. B. Gillan, Charlottetown. A post-nuptial shower was held at the groom's home where they received many beautiful and useful gifts.

An Island Romance Makes For Good Reading

The following article is from the valuable scrap-book collection of the late Mrs. Albert Stewart of Park Corner and New Glasgow. Mrs. Stewart was the former Miss Annie Callier MacLeod of the Park Corner MacLeods.

The article was written by Mr. Bob Davis and appeared in his "Bob Davis Reveals" column in the New York Sun. It appeared also at that time in a Summer-side paper.

A Guardian reader kindly donated this piece of island saga to the Women's page for many readers to enjoy.

To Miss Jean Gill, legislative librarian for Charlottetown, I am indebted for a first-class column whenever I turn up in that section of Canada.

This year my good provider handed me a small volume, well thumbed and carefully patched, entitled "A Sketch Book", of historical incidents and traditional tales written by Jean MacKinnon whose pen was never idle.

"In this book," said Miss Gill, "you will find much memorabilia that has the merit of truth of it."

Resorting to condensation, a writer's privilege, I have brought Mr. MacKinnon's tale within the space of a column:

George Trueman Sr., son of a British loyalist, killed at the battle of Stoney Point, July 15, 1779, left a son, George, who succeeded him in the service of the king, and was wounded in the Battle of Copeners in January, 1781. Recovering he returned to his father's farm, comprising the pleasure grounds at the point where Niagara River runs out of Lake Erie. At this point he settled down until the close of the war in 1783, in company with a man named Stanlake, crossed into Canada, took up land, married Stanlake's sister, by whom he had two children. Mother and infant died, leaving the elder child a girl named Inez, 3 years of age. Greatly cast down by this calamity, Trueman sold his farm and took passage on a trading vessel which landed him on the north shore of Prince Edward Island, 1804.

Here he built a cottage and with tools he had brought, together with seeds, books, meager necessities and determination to remain in exile until Inez, instructed by her father, was old enough to return to the mainland and civilization. He called his place "Lone Point," located in the dense forest near a gushing spring which, after attaining larger dimensions, became known as Hunter River, still charted.

In October, 1806, a terrible storm swept the north shore. Many ships piled up in the wild breakers. At the point of the storm's greatest intensity, a full rigged vessel crashed ashore, scattering wreckage and bodies high above the smothering tide. In the midst of the havoc Trueman detected a small figure clinging to a part of the vessel, now under water, now aloft, finally piling upon the sands to be rescued by the lone beach comb.

Jeleniski, of Claybank, Saskatchewan.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was winsome in her floor length gown of Chantilly lace and two tiers of nylon net over a hooped skirt of slipper satin. It was topped by a lace jacket with Peter Pan collar studded with pearls. Her tulle illusion crown studded with pearls and sequins. Her jewelry was a pearl necklace and earrings, the gift of the groom. She carried an arm bouquet of red roses and a sterling silver rosary, the gift of Fr. Keoughan Claybank, Sask.

Miss Stella Flood, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, dressed in a floor length gown of blue nylon net and lace over a hooped skirt of satin with matching jacket, headdress and mitts. Her bouquet was brier cliff roses.

The bridesmaids, Misses Inez and Rosaline Flood, sisters of the bride wore identical ballerina length dresses of net and lace over taffeta in colors of yellow and rose, with matching headdresses sprinkled with opalescent, sequins and matching mitts. They carried nosegays of carnations in color to match the dresses.

Little Miss Eileen was her sister's flower girl attired in blue nylon with matching coronet and carried a basket of mixed flowers.

The duties of best man were ably performed by Mr. Peter Funke, cousin of the groom. The guests were ushered to their marked pews by Mr. Russell Flood, Ottawa, and Mr. Gerald Carragher, Charlottetown.

The mother of the bride chose for her daughter's wedding a sheath dress of yellow brocaded bengaline with tan and white accessories and corsage of rose carnations.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Bonshaw Inn for 70 guests. The bride's table decorated with floral bouquets was centered with a three tier wedding cake topped by a miniature bride and groom. Mr. Russell Flood acted as master of ceremonies.

Rev. Fr. MacCarthy proposed the toast to the bride to which the groom fittingly replied. Congratulatory remarks were then offered by other guests. During the reception telegrams of congratulations were received from the parents of the groom, Sask.; the McQuaid family, Maine; the Cuthberts, British Columbia. The afternoon was pleasantly spent in dancing, music and song.

For travelling the bride wore a fitted suit of beige tweed, flecked with yellow and turquoise. Her accessories were turquoise and navy. Her corsage was yellow carnations.

After spending a happy honeymoon on the island visiting friends and historical spots, Mr. and Mrs. Jeleniski accompanied by Stella, sister of the bride left by plane on August 1st for Ottawa where they visited the two uncles of the bride.

From there they went by C.P.R. to Claybank, Sask., where Mr. Jeleniski is a prosperous wheat farmer. He is also a high school graduate of Campigo College, Regina. The bride who had given 3 years of successful service on the island in the teaching profession, has been employed for the past 2 years with Assiniboia School Unit, in Sask.—Photo by Meyers.

Waved Union Jack In Front Of Kremlin—Drew Smiles

VICTORIA (CP)—Miss Nanelle Woods waved a Union Jack in front of the Kremlin during Moscow's May Day celebrations, she said on her return home to suburban Saanich.

Her flag - waving drew only friendly waves and smiles from the crowds packed in the street, said the attractive young school-teacher.

Miss Woods and a friend hitchhiked from London, where she spent the last two years as a teacher, to Helsinki, Finland, and there joined an organized tour.

"We had to stay right with the group and its interpreter," she said, as the only Russian I know in the bank you.

PUPILS QUIET

"As a teacher I was especially interested in seeing Russian schools. In Leningrad I visited a school held in a former palace. "It was very formal and strict, and the pupils made no noise at all. The children wore black uniforms and boys up to the age of 11 have their heads shaved.
