Davis-Hart Wedding

—Miss June Dymont Hart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rodman C. Hart, 98 Hollis Ave. North Quincy, Mass., and granddaughter of Mr. David Dymont, Spring Hill, P. E. I., became the bride of Alfred Louis Davis, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred L. Davis of East Hartford, Conn., at a ceremony performed in the home of the bride's parents.

Against a background of white carnations, gladioli and fern, Rev. Joseph D. Parkman, pastor of the Atlantic Memorial Congregational Church, North Quincy, Mass., officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a white satin princess gown on train, with a fitted bodice, cathedral sleeves and full skirt. Her fingertip veil of imported French silk illusion, was arranged from a seed pearl crown, and she carried her white Rainbow Bible with a marker of white roses and streamers of Stephanotis.

Mrs. Arthur W. Olive of North Quincy was matron of honor to her twin sister. She wore an ice green satin gown with a sweetheart neckline, cap sleeves, matching mitts and full skirt with a corsage of gardenias.

Ronald Davis of Ellsworth Me., was best man for his brother.

A reception for the immediate family followed the ceremony.

After a wedding trip to Washington, D. C. Mr. and Mrs. Davis will reside at 194 Hollister Drive East Hartford.

The bride is a graduate of North Quincy High School; a charter member of the Atlantic Rainbow Assembly, and was employed by Stone and Webster Company Boston.

Mr. Davis was educated in Maine and is associated with the Pratt Whitney Company, Hartford.

"FIGHTING MAN OF THE PLAINS" AT CAPITOL

—A virile, exciting Western has come to the Capitol. In "Fighting Man Of The Plains," audiences will find that producer Nat Holt has turned out a fast-moving story free of the stereotyped cowboy cliches that make many Westerns the "same old thing."

By using Cinecolor, a remarkably-attractive process, Holt has made Lanyard, Kansas come to life in the Twentieth Century-Fox release which stars Randolph Scott. A high level of acting by Scott, supported by the solid characterizations of such fine actors as Bill Williams, Victor Jory and Jane Nigh gives vigor and movement to "Fighting Man Of The Plains."

The suspenseful drama of the great out-of-doors was written by Frank Gruber from his original story. In it, Scott plays a notorious outlaw who guns for the man who
