OTTAWA (CP) — New babies were born at the rate of about one a minute for a 1955 record of 441,682 births, but a small crop of depression babies reduced the number of last year's marriages, the bureau of statistics reported Monday. A preliminary report on annual vital statistics showed the number of births increased to a record high from 435,142 in 1954. The number of deaths also reached an all-time high, to 128,154 last year from 124,520 the year previous, although the death rate remained at 8.2 per 1,000 population—one of the lowest in the world. Last year, the infant death rate showed a slight decline to 31 for each 1,000 live births from 32 the year previous. U.S. Would Buy Island From N.B.

EASTPORT, Me. (AP) — A move to purchase Campbell Island from Canada opened here Monday. The president of the Eastport chamber of commerce said he will present a resolution urging that Maine's congressional delegation work toward U.S. purchase of the late President Roosevelt's summer home. The chamber president, Norman Pratt, said the New Brunswick island lies closer to the United States and always has been more closely connected socially and economically with Maine than with New Brunswick. There is ferry service from Eastport to the island and construction of a free international bridge has been proposed. If the bridge is built, Pratt said, the island would "become practically an economic appendage of Washington county."

Presentation To Minister And Wife By N. Winsloe U. C.

The members and friends of North Winsloe United Church recently met at the manse to tender farewell to their pastor and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Helen Hardy, who are soon to resume labours with their former congregation, at West Cape. After the purpose of the gathering was expressed, an address was read by Mr. Leonard Cudmore, Mr. Bruce Younker, and Mr. Arnett Shaw, on behalf of the congregation and friends, presented Mr. and Mrs. Hardy with a beautiful platform "Keraller" rocker. Mrs. Hardy was also kindly remembered by the Women's Missionary Society with a lovely white nylon bed spread. Mr. and Mrs. Hardy heartily thanked the people for their kind thoughts expressed in such a tangible way, and assured them they would have many pleasant memories of the days spent together. It was their earnest prayer that God's work would continue to advance in the Winsloe Church. The address is as follows: Dear Brother and Sister Hardy: It is now almost four years since you accepted our call to come over and help us. Mrs. Hardy has remarked, you came with fear and trembling. We hope she doesn't feel that way any more. You have been true friends to all, and we all admire a good friend. We feel that both of you have given freely of your time and talent, and have worked very hard to do all possible for the betterment of this community. Many of us will long remember the untiring efforts you have put forth visiting the sick, cheering the down hearted, and pointing the way to a better life. You have done all in your power to fulfill the duties of this Pastorate, which we feel has been very faithfully carried out, and is worthy of great praise. We could not let you depart from us without expressing our deep appreciation of your work among us. We now ask you to please accept this gift, and hope that it may bring comfort to the body after a tiresome day. The best wishes of this community go along with the gift. May God richly bless your work in your new field of labour. Signed: Your friends, North Winsloe.

WE AND OUR NEIGHBORS

WHAT THEY TALK ABOUT A number of readers (feminine) flatly disagreed with last week's findings that women are the more talkative sex. And who would wish to prove them wrong? There are certainly plenty of strong silent women and many fluent men. Let us simply say that research seems to confirm the general impression. But whether the word coup is more, less, or equal, are the topics of conversation among men and women similar when they gather temporarily into one-sex groups at the happy summer reunions on the island? Certainly there is one subject dear to the hearts of both men and women—their children. Here is John Davis talking about his son, Bill, at college: "Yes, Bill is doing all right—made honors in his class—on the hockey team too. Say, that team is one of the finest—etc., etc." Now Bill's mother: "You know I worried about Bill when he was home for the holidays! You just have to give up hockey! I told him, 'you're looking pale and you've got enough to do with all that studying.' But you know how boys are. He said—'and I told him' Or listen to George Wilson telling about his daughter Joan's wedding: "I said it was nonsense to have a big wedding—and Joan's husband felt the same but of course Joan and her mother got their way. What a turn-out! But Joan is a great girl and married a fine lad, and I don't begrudge the money." The version of Joan's mother about the event: "It was just too beautiful! You should have seen the decorations and the gown! The bridesmaids wore—My dress was—, and Joan was a dream! She wore—, and she looked so lovely as she came down the aisle I just cried and cried!" The women go on from there about other weddings and engagements—and births—There is detailed discussion of mutual relatives, friends, acquaintances—husbands—analysis of acts and motives. The men turn from personalities to sports, business, politics. "Good stories" feature largely and when they do speak of this one or that one, it is usually accompanied by a good story on him!" Do their different interests and attitudes (different in one degree or another) mean that men are superior to women, or women to men? Of course not. When it was much more a "man's world" than it is now (before the Machine Age took so many women out of the home) any trait typically femi-
