Vatican Approval Of Decoration Campaign

VATICAN CITY (Reuters)—The Vatican has given its support to a campaign to improve the artistic standards of the decoration of Roman Catholic churches throughout the world. The holy office, of which the Pope is prefect, ordered Catholic bishops to give the closest attention to the building of new churches and the decoration of old ones in order to ensure that they follow the principles and assume the forms which are suited to the decorum and the sanctity of the house of God. To help the clergy, a group of laymen in Rome have founded an organization designed not only to give advice but to take over, when asked, the task of decorating the interior of churches anywhere in the world.
