PRIVATE AND CHRONIC DISEASES.

To the Citizens of P. E. Island and Invids Especially:—
We come to you not entirely as strangers, but for the first time, and beg leave, there fore, to inform, in as brief a manner as possible, those not acquainted with us or our institute who we are, where we come from, and what we are doing.
Dr. Kergan and the surgeons comprising his staff, better known in the United States and Canada as his International Medical Council, have for years been regarded as the most reliable, most skillful and most successful specialists in the treatment of all chronic diseases, deformities and diseases peculiar to men and women in America.
In 1878 our present institution was founded by Dr. Kergan in Detroit, and has from year to year grown in such rapid proportions that at present a staff of 18 medical and surgical experts is required to attend the home and foreign patients. This staff comprises men of age, education, extended experience and superior ability, all being graduates of leading English, Scotch, French, Irish, German, Canadian and American universities, and admitted to become a member of Dr. Kergan's Medical Council only after they have devoted themselves to the study and treatment of chronic diseases or deformities, and obtained positive and superior knowledge and success in diagnosing and treating those diseases.
Thousands of rare and obscure cases are yearly treated by them; therefore, by the experience received from treating so many cases, aided by all that medical science of to day affords, it can readily be seen why it is that they are so successful in the curing of all private and chronic diseases.

WHAT WE DO NOT PROPOSE TO DO.—We do not propose to raise the dead, nor can anyone else; we do not propose to furnish new lungs, the man who promises to do so is a fraud; we do not propose to furnish youth to the aged, it is impossible; we cannot cure every case of heart disease, and the doctor who agrees to it is a humbug; we cannot cure every case of kidney disease, no man of reputation professes to do so; we cannot cure an incurable disease—frauds alone promise the impossible.

WHAT WE PROPOSE TO DO.—We propose to give correct and honest opinions; we propose to only make reasonable promises; we propose to give our best attention to every case; we propose to cure in the shortest possible time; we propose to cure for the smallest fee consistent with honest skill; we propose to cure by the most pleasant possible method; we propose to refuse to treat any case that we think we cannot help; we propose to cure every curable case; we propose to cure many cases that have heretofore been considered incurable; we propose to continue to conduct a reputable Medical Institution in the future as we have the reputation of doing in the past; we propose to be able to produce the evidence that we have more members of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Great Britain on our staff than any single institution in America.

"About a year ago I began using Ayer's Sarsaparilla as a remedy for debility and neuralgia resulting from malarial exposure in the army. I was in a very bad condition, but six bottles of the Sarsaparilla, with occasional doses of Ayer's Pills, has greatly improved my health. I am now able to work, and feel that I cannot say too much for your excellent remedies."—F. A. Pinkham, South Moluncus, Me.

"My daughter, sixteen years old, is using Ayer's Sarsaparilla with good effect."—Rev. S. C. Graham, United Brethren Church, Buckhannon, W. Va.

Mrs. Ann H. Farnsworth, a lady 79 years old, So. Woodstock, Vt., writes: "After several weeks' suffering from nervous prostration, I procured a bottle of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and before I had taken half of it my usual health returned."

The Situation.

THE Boston Record hits off the situation in the Dominion very accurately in the following paragraph:

"The real point of difference between the dominant party in Canada and the Liberals is in regard to manufactures. The majority in Canada decided at a general election in 1878 that the manufacturers of the country should be protected. All legislation and custom regulations since 1879 have been in that direction. The prices received by the farmers for their wheat, etc., have confirmed them in the belief that their interests are served by protection. The compact between the farmers and the manufacturers seems firm at present, and many of the principal mercantile firms in the cities have become interested in the factories, and the banks, in their turn, are interested in the stability of the mercantile houses."

The Halifax Mail comments upon the foregoing as follows:

"Hence all classes are alike interested in the maintenance of a protective tariff. One of the absurdities of Goldentite philosophy is the treating of the people of a country as composed of two distinct classes, the 'producers' and the 'consumers'—the interests of the latter being represented as diverse from and far more important than the interest of the former. The truth is that in an industrial population like that of Canada every man is a producer. Appeals, therefore, directed to the 'Canadian consumer' are only appeals to the Canadian producer under another name. He receives these heartrending appeals to vote for free foreign imports, notes their contents, files them away, and goes on voting for protection."

Personal.

Lord Tennyson enjoys better health at present than he has known for some time.

Lord Salisbury's health is so precarious as to cause much worry to his friends.

Emperor William is the first reigning monarch who has visited Constantinople since 1457.

The Rev. Dr. Phillips Brooks has just completed his twentieth year as the pastor of Trinity Protestant Episcopal Church, Boston. Evangelist Meikle has been engaged by the East End Montreal Protestant Church for three weeks' evangelistic services.

When a Crown Prince condescends to marry a Princess over in Europe, she must come to his house to be married, and not he to hers, as bridegrooms do in democratic countries. That is the difference between etiquette and chivalry.

It is said that Benjamin F. Butler proposes to write his memoirs. He has in his possession a copy of nearly every important letter addressed to him since 1861. This correspondence will make his task a comparatively light one.

Samuel J. Tilden, who was regarded as one of the greatest lawyers of his time, has had his will upset by the New York courts. The law in its uncertainty is no respecter of persons.

Mr. George Kennan, it seems, has not related all his thrilling adventures in the Century. It is said that one occasion he was in a nihilist's house with papers in his possession, which, if found, would cost him his life. He was informed that officers were on his track and would be at the house in five minutes. The question was what to do with the papers. He looked about, saw a hand glass lying upon the table, took it up, pried out the back with his knife, hastily put the papers in the frame and restored the back to its place just as the officers arrived. A search was made, the glass raised from the table, but the important papers were not discovered. The officers departed and left Mr. Kennan in possession of his documents and his life.

The whole of Punch's original Round Table is at last dissolved. There is no longer surviving a member of the band that in years gone by every week sat at dinner to meet Mark Lemon, Douglas Jerrold, Leech and Thackeray. The last has just passed away in the person of Mr. Percival Leigh. Mr. Leigh, if he had lived till last Sunday, would have entered on his seventy-eighth year. He was twenty-eight when he, in the first week of his existence, joined the staff of Punch, and he has been connected with the journal ever since. Up to very recently he was one of the most constant attendants at the weekly dinner, and though his contributions of late have not been voluminous, he preserved to the last a keen fancy and a quick humor, to which the staff in council were often indebted. His range of reading was enormous, and his memory unerring. He knew Shakespeare by heart. No one needed a concordance when "the professor" was at hand. To his colleagues on the Punch staff he was always "the professor"—a name, the origin of which is lost in antiquity.

Sir Edwin Arnold visited the home of Emerson when in the United States and wrote the following description of his drive to Walden Pond, for an English newspaper: "We drove in Emerson's 'carry-all' through the wild pine woods to Walden Pond, the spot of all others dearest to his heart, and that where he was accustomed to meditate day after day, trading the league of sandy road thither and back again. It is in truth, a unique spot, wild as when Red Indians alone trod it, where the deep lakelet slumbers under the boughs of beech, hemlock, and 'savage maple,' and the solitude-loving Thoreau was content to build himself a hut. We sat under the white pines where Emerson was wont to pass the lonely hours, and then drove the sure-footed American horse up and down neck-breaking woodland alleys over tree stumps and hollows full of wild asters and yellow 'touch-me-not,' to each point of the sequestered pool which had been his favorite haunts, and evening came upon us before we could return from the fascinating influences of the place, to the little white wooden house with green shutters consecrated by the genius of America's chief thinker and teacher."

THERE is no more fruitful source of disease than vitiated blood. It involves every organ and function of the body, and if not immediately corrected by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, sooner or later leads to fatal results.

The man who went out to milk and sat down on a boulder in the middle of the pasture and waited for the cow to back up to him, was the eldest brother of the man who kept store and did not advertise, because he reasoned that the purchasing public would back up to his place when it wanted something.—St. Louis City Tribune.

The Cronin Murder Trial.

COUGHLIN AND BURKE TURN PALE AT THE TELLING TESTIMONY.

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—In the Cronin murder trial to-day clerk J. P. Hatfield, of Revell & Co., identified the frame work of the satchel found in the Lake View sewer containing Dr. Cronin's clothes as being the frame of a satchel identical with that which he sold to J. B. Simonds on February 19.

Mrs. Pauline Hoerbal swore that she saw a man resembling Dr. Cronin enter the Carlson cottage on the evening of May 4. She was passing the Carlson cottage between seven and eight o'clock that evening when she saw two men in a buggy drive up to the cottage. One of the men got out and went up the steps. He knocked at the door and it was opened, and he went in. The man was big and broad shouldered and carried something like a satchel in his hand. It might have been a surgeon's case. The horse that drew the buggy was white. When the man entered the door of the cottage it was closed immediately and the witness heard sounds as though heavy blows were being dealt and there was a noise of a great struggle. The witness stopped and heard some one cry, "Oh my God." There were a few more voices as of some one struggling and then all was still. The witness gave her evidence with much straightforwardness. Coughlin and Burke turned pale and a look of blank despair came over their faces. The witness said she went around on Roscoe street, where she saw a man standing between the cottage and another house, in the shadow. This was near a real estate office, where another witness yet to come will testify that O'Sullivan was on the watch while the assassins were at work. The evidence to-day furnished the last link in the period between the decaying of Cronin from home and finding the body in the catch basin. The defence always maintained that Cronin could not be traced to the cottage, but that contention exists no longer.

Henry Piuselle, a salesman in a shirt store, testified that on the morning after the murder two men came into the store to buy shirts. They had their coats buttoned up to the tops, and seemed anxious not to show the shirts they had on. The witness identified Burke and Cooney as the two men.

Thomas Ryan, a laborer, testified that he boarded with Kunze in May or June. Kunze was anxious to read the papers, and said he was afraid he would be arrested in connection with the Cronin case.

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—The first matter before the court at the opening of the Cronin case to-day was Judge McConnell's ruling as to the admissibility of the evidence relating to the internal quarrel of the Clan-na-Gael. He decided that the evidence was not admissible.

This afternoon State's Attorney Longenecker said that in view of the court's ruling in the matter of evidence as to the past doings of the Clan-na-Gael, the State would only put one more witness on the stand, a man named Clancy from New York, who, he said, was not now in the city. He suggested, in view of this announcement, that the court adjourn until Monday, in order to give the defence time to prepare its case. It was finally decided to adjourn until Saturday morning, which was accordingly done.

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—The Inter-Ocean says that the police are making strenuous efforts to locate an Irishman named McDonald, a former resident of Lakeview, who, there is good reason to believe, is implicated in the Cronin murder.

The News says the lawyers for the State feel that a good case has been presented to the jury so far—one without a material flaw—and which bore strongly against all five of the accused. Judge Longenecker says there are five men at large who should have been co-defendants with Burke and his fellow prisoners. J. B. Simonds, Pat Cooney and the man who drove Dr. Cronin to the cottage were admitted as three of these.

It is understood the lawyers for the prisoners will endeavor to prove alibis. O'Sullivan, the iceman, will have seven witnesses that he was not away from his home on the night of May 4 after 7.30 o'clock. Coughlin will stick to his original story and attempt to prove it was not Dillon's white horse that drove Cronin to his death. Martin Burke's defence will be that he hired the Carlson cottage for Patrick Cooney, not knowing what it was to be used for. He will have several witnesses that he was in the town of Lake on the night of the murder. When arrested at Winnipeg he will show he was on his way to England to do "active work" for the Clan-na-Gael. Kunze will deny everything.
