Make Progress On New School At Murray River

During the past week considerable progress has been made on the construction of the new school at Murray River. Having completed the asphalt roofing last week, the carpenters have now almost completed laying the grey insul-brick siding. After finishing this work the eaves and windows are next on the schedule, after which the carpenters will move inside to put on the Ten-Ten, the lower part of which on the walls will be covered with masonry. Hot air ducts have been installed in the walls, which will be piped to the electric oil furnace in the basement. The new school is adjacent to the old one, which has been in use for over sixty years. The new one, of the Southport type, is 100 feet long and 28½ feet wide, with three classrooms and basement, running water and indoor plumbing. The rooms will be occupied by grades one to three, four to seven, and eight to ten. The total cost is estimated at $20,000.00. The large spacious grounds have been levelled by bulldozer and maintainer, and will be seeded out at a later date. Mr. William Whitway, contractor, expects to have the school ready for occupation in about four weeks.

Dredging Of Montague River Nears Completion

...With only 1,200 feet on the last course left to dig out, the dredge 115 is expected to finish the great task of cleaning out the Montague River in another three to four weeks. This project was undertaken in 1950, when dredging operations were begun at the Montague bridge, and continued to the end of the first course at MacEachern's Point, and part of the second. Approximately 120,000 yards of mud were removed during that year. This year the 115 has removed approximately 160,000 yards to date, and Captain Keddy feels that over 300,000 yards will have been removed before the job has been completed. At present only the tug boat

Pugwash is servicing the 115, the Glen Livett having left for Charlottetown. However, the tug boat Canso is expected to arrive momentarily to replace the Glen Livett. An average of 14 feet of water predominates the whole winding length of the river which has been dredged, sufficient to allow any boat of heavy draught to reach Montague port without any difficulty. This will be a great boon during the fall shipping season which will shortly get under way, and a greater benefit to the farmers who will find a means to a ready market for many of their products through shipment by water.

Island Livestock Moving Shortly For Winter Fair

The movement of livestock from P. E. Island for exhibition at the Maritime Winter Fair in Amherst will commence on Saturday, Oct. 27 for those breeders who are showing on the opening day of the Fair, it was learned yesterday from Mr. S. C. Wright, agricultural representative with the Department of Agriculture. The largest movement of livestock, however, from this Province will be on Tuesday, Oct. 30, when the Livestock Special will again be operated. It is expected that between twelve and fifteen cars will be leaving. Mr. Wright said, and the C. N. R. are again cooperating in making this as convenient as possible for exhibitors.

New York Dock Strike Continues

NEW YORK, Oct. 24 —(CP)— Rebel dock strikers refused to go along with their leaders today in a plan to end the east coast's crippling waterfront strike. Rank-and-file wildcat strikers tossed a monkeywrench into the scheme to end the 10-day-old walkout with a new vote on a bitterly disputed contract. Instead, they stood firm in their demand the new contract be junked and another one negotiated. Their decision came as the city's Commerce and Industry Association estimated $250,000,000 worth of goods were stalled by the strike. The figure is climbing at the rate of $25,000,000 a day, the association estimated. A new appeal to President Truman to "stop the strike" was voted by business, shipping and civic representatives at an emergency meeting.

ANSWERS CHARGES—Ambassador-at-Large Philip Jessup, testifying before the Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee considering his nomination to the U. N. General Assembly in Paris, accused Harold Stassen of leaping like a "grasshopper" from one "misstatement" to another. Stassen had criticized Jessup's role in formulating U. S. Far Eastern policy.

New Drainage System In Murray River

A new culvert line to effect better drainage has been installed across the main street in Murray River, immediately above the railway line to the station. This area has provided a great many headaches to engineers in the past owing to the presence of small springs which prevent the proper settling of the road bed. During the past two weeks the road extending from the railway line to a distance of 150 feet towards the town has been excavated to a depth of five to six feet, and carried in an angle across the railway line near the station to a run off ditch. This area was then filled with rock which, it is reported, will facilitate drainage of the spring water away from the road bed. This, together with the new culverts above the railway line, is designed to drain off most of the water in the area, and so retain a firm road surface. Mr. Bill Ward, engineer on the location, stated that this type of drainage was designed for such trouble spots, and would prove to be a permanent job. With the completion of this project, the road from Murray River to Murray Harbour may be considered to be ready for paving if, and when, it is decided to do so.

11 CZECHS FROM

Continued from page 1 political reasons, was told by "an underground friend" to board the train at Prague. The next day the handsome student bought a ticket for Asch. Snug in his overcoat was a pistol. At Pilsen, Garel Truksa, a veteran railroader, boarded the train. He, too, had a pistol. "Trobi stationed himself in the baggage car behind the locomotive. My job was to keep anyone away from the cab," he said. Konvalinka was at the throttle. Next to him was his fireman, a Communist. At the little town of Prazenbad, the engineer stepped down from his post and cut the air-brake. This made it impossible to stop the train by yanking the emergency brake. At the same time, Truksa jumped in the cab and ordered the fireman at pistol-point to lie face down on the floor. The train with its 100 passengers was scheduled to stop at Asch. But it didn't. Konvalinka pushed the throttle wide open. Truksa shoved coal. The train shuffled forward, gathering momentum. In the coach, the conductor grabbed the emergency cord, nothing happened. A Red policeman ran for the hand-operated brake. Blocking his way was Karel Ruml, the student. "I stopped him with my pistol," he said today. "He was no hero." Two minutes later the three-coach train with the big Red star on the boiler was standing in the German town of Wassenberg. Seventy-seven passengers wanted to go back to their homes. But 31 asked to stay in Germany. "We didn't do it for the spirit

Jet Engines Make World's Worst Noise

CHICAGO, Oct. 24 —(AP)— The worst noise in the world, from jet engines, was described to the American Acoustical Society today. These noise scientists were told that the jets make noise that endangers health, is almost unbearable, and that if not shielded, would slow the aviation program for defence. These noises are not from jets flying, but on the ground, where they are bolted down for hundreds of hours for full-scale testing of their power and stamina. This, said Richard D. Lemmermann, vice-president of Industrial Sound Control, Inc., Hartford, Conn., endangers the health of the aviation personnel because the testing has to be done in closed buildings. The jets cannot be tested out in the open without spreading their terrible shrieking for miles about. The noise, he said, is above 160 decibels—which means it causes actual pain to some persons. A decibel is the amount of sound you

Road Improvement In Belfast Section

Work is now in progress on the road from Eldon to Belfast which will remove the sharp curve at the foot of the hill below the historic Belfast Church, and will result in the widening and grading of the road. The new road will go directly up the hill to the Church. A considerable part of the work on the eleven mile stretch of the Trans-Canada Highway between Wood Islands and Pinette has been completed and it is hoped to pave this section next year.
