Uranium Reserves Will Be Used Up In 25 Years

TORONTO (CP)—In the light of anticipated long-term requirements, currently known economic reserves of uranium may not be adequate for demand, Robert H. Winters, president of Rio Tinto Mining Company of Canada Ltd., said Monday at the company's annual meeting.

Mr. Winters—heading a company whose group in Ontario's Blind River area has contracts for delivery of more than $630,000 worth of uranium oxide by March 31, 1962—made his comment after reviewing various factors which have had a depressing effect on uranium stocks.

"If total free - world reserves are compared roughly with total free-world mill capacities, existing and planned, these reserves will be exhausted in 25 years," Mr. Winters said.

"Of course, world reserves will not decline at an even rate by countries.

"Canada's reserves, which are probably the largest in terms of contained uranium oxide, will almost certainly outlast the century, while United States known reserves could be exhausted in a decade.

"There has been no news to date to counter original forecasts of a very substantial build-up of uranium demand over the coming years.

"Military demand, which is preponderant at the moment, is unlikely to be reduced much below the present level. Of significance in this respect are current United States naval programs, which may lead to a completely nuclear-powered fleet. And Britain is taking bold strides toward use of nuclear power for nautical propulsion.

"At the same time, civilian demand for power reactors and the generation of electricity is growing in relative importance and it can be foreseen that civilian requirements will one day dominate the market."

Mr. Winters said that among depressing factors for uranium stocks were "some rather gloomy forecasts," most of which assumed a state of over - supply once present sales contracts expired in the early 1960s.

Much, he said, had been made of a policy declaration last October by the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission, which said that U.S. mill capacity was to be held at the level of mills then in existence, or planned, and approved. "This declaration," said Mr. Winters, "was widely interpreted as an indication of over-supply. But another part of the same declaration warned that exploration

Seek To Hold Down School Building Costs

HALIFAX (CP) — Education Minister Leonard said Tuesday in the Legislature his department is doing everything possible to see school building costs are kept within reasonable bounds.

Mr. Leonard was replying to questions of Ronald M. Fielding (L-Halifax Northwest) regarding recommendations made Monday in an interim report of a royal commission studying school construction costs.

9 reasons why

the Daily Newspaper gives you more for your advertising dollar

1. Newspaper advertising reaches more people than any other medium. Canada's 4,069,000 families buy newspapers every day. Every one of these people has the opportunity to see every ad in the daily newspaper. Only a small number of these people could be reached with any TV, radio or magazine ad.
2. People like advertising in newspapers better than in any other medium. People feel friendly toward advertising in newspapers. Surveys show that far fewer people want advertising in any other media. An advertiser wants his customers to like him, so it stands to reason he will benefit if he runs his ads where they please instead of annoy people.
3. Newspapers deliver more "ready to buy" prospects than any other medium. Newspapers offer something for everybody — information, entertainment, editorials, advertising. And the reader is attracted to the ad that interests him. This means that readership ratings on ads represent live prospects for the advertiser. These people are easy to sell because they have a product interest. On the other hand broadcast ratings indicate people with an interest in the program, not necessarily a buying interest in the product.
4. Newspaper advertising gets more action than any other medium. As a news medium, the daily newspaper gives advertising an atmosphere of action and believability. People have confidence in and believe in newspapers. This prompts action on the part of the reader.
5. Newspaper advertising offers more local selling flexibility than any other medium. Advertisers can use newspapers market-by-market — to protect strong markets, to bolster weak markets, to vary advertising where potential varies, to meet competitive attacks, to get better timing with their sales and merchandising programs than is possible in any other medium.
6. Newspapers give more flexibility in selling copy than any other medium. An advertiser can tell his story in the size that suits his needs. He can use a two-page spread to tell a detailed copy story, or he can tell his story in the same or smaller space with just a few words. He can run a 100-line or a 1,000-line ad, depending on his budget and strategy. A newspaper offers advertisers more physical and creative flexibility than any other medium.
7. Newspaper advertising offers better retail merchandising than any other advertising. Canadian Retailers insert 82% of their advertising dollar in the daily newspaper—more than they spend in all other media combined. No other medium has as close a relationship with retailers as the daily newspaper.
8. Newspaper advertising is a safer and surer investment than advertising in any other medium. In some media a good percentage of the results are affected by the variables of the medium and by the medium's own competition. In newspapers, the advertising stands on its own two feet unaffected by such variables. Newspaper advertising is always ready and waiting to suit the time, place and pleasure of the consumer. The daily newspaper is always selling.
9. Newspaper advertising produces more sales per dollar of advertising cost than do other media. The cost of an advertising medium depends on a combination of two things: First, how much it costs to reach a person with a sales story. Second, what action that sales story causes the person to take — or, how much it costs to make a sale. The best figures available indicate that the newspaper delivers a message to a person for a typical advertiser at a cost at least as low as the cost of delivering the message through television or magazines. And the other eight points guarantee more sales action per message delivered.

THOUGHTS FOR OUR TIME

BY HIS EMINENCE CARDINAL McGUIGAN

TWO WAYS TO BE LIKE GOD

Pain from an injury can be very distressing; but our condition is worse if we are hurt, yet feel no pain. Again, those who suffer from a mental disorder and do not know it, are in a worse condition than those who know their trouble.

So, too, in the realm of the spirit, although it distresses us to think of the justice of God in punishing angles and men, it is certain that they are in more serious trouble who rid themselves of this anxiety by any means other than the love of God.

Those who deceive themselves habitually, who defile all things in their own minds in order to maintain their own importance, those who give to others only their misery and never themselves, are the ones who tend to look upon the devil and his punishment as quaint superstitions.

It is true that the images which come to mind on this subject are ridiculous, because a pure spirit cannot be imagined. It can only be understood in terms of the activities of our minds. There we possess a freedom which does not exist in the world of material things, a freedom which is an image of God's freedom in the work of creation and restoration.

ALL CAN SHARE
We know that God is all perfect and has no need of creatures. He creates them out of pure benevolence. So generous is He that He created all intellectual creatures in a condition in which they can share in His freedom. They can co-operate with Him in the work of their fulfillment; they are free to accept His embrace or to reject it.

Now, if there are intellectual creatures which have no body and the many actions which the body requires, the drama of their choice takes place as soon as they are created. All the vital decisions of a whole lifetime are concentrated in one tremendous act of choice. They can choose to be like God through sharing in His knowledge and love; or else they can try to be like God in His primacy and independence.

The intellectual creatures which choose the second alternative deceive themselves deliberately. They cannot be like God in His independence but they can pretend to be like Him in this respect. They can put God out of their minds and when they do this, all creatures appear to be meaningless and void. They can God they can nothing, they can make evil out of good.

In this way, the intellectual creature can make itself most important in a world of nothingness; but it cannot get away from the fact that all that is good in itself speaks to it of God. Thus, it must force itself to hate all that is good within itself and to love what is evil. This frustration of its basic love of good is the self-deliberate punishment of its deliberate self-deception.

PREFERS MISERY
Nevertheless, although such a creature is miserable, it prefers to be the way it is. Since it knows its own mind thoroughly, the only way it could be moved to change its mind would be by the light of God. . . which is precisely what it rejects, considering any help from God as a violation of its independence.

As intellectual creatures, we can be affected by the temptation of the angels but we are intellectual creatures with bodies, and our temptation is more properly presumption in the order of action. We become filled with our success in controlling the things which are beneath us, and we assume that we are able to cope with spiritual matters in the same way.

Even when we acknowledge that we need the help of God, we are tempted to put conditions on that help, to think that God owes it to us to help us in the way we think best. We presume to dispute the wisdom and freedom of God. Moreover, after we come to have some insight into the wonderful generosity of God, we are tempted to presume that the mercy of God will save us even if it is against our will.

However, God respects our freedom and, though we can change our minds and our hearts in this life, after death we become like the angels. The presumptuous join the lying, disobedient spirits, while those who have respected truth in this life, will join the angels of God.

BRISTOL

We regret to announce at this time the passing of our good friend last week, Mr. Louis Drake at the early age of fifty - two and a life long resident of this vicinity. Mr. Drake was one of the outstanding fishermen and at the time of his passing had his fishing gear, including a new boat, all ready for the opening day when he was stricken. Besides his wife the former Emma Blaxland, and one married daughter in Toronto, he is survived by one sister, Mrs. James Blaxland here, and two brothers James and Bob, in western Canada, where they have resided for many years and owing to illness in their families were unable to come home. Lou Drake, will long be remembered as one of the finest young men this vicinity ever had and the sincere sympathy of this vicinity is extended to his relatives.

Mrs. John J. Perry, entered the Charlottetown Hospital on Sunday, where she will undergo an operation. We all hope her recovery will be speedy with much better health to follow.

The Misses Sheila, Cathy and Reta Gauthier, have taken positions in the busy Town of Souris. Mr. and Mrs. Anselm Lapierre, have moved to Red Head shore here they will operate the 'cook house for the spring and summer months. Last season they catered to more than a hundred people daily. Fishermen workers and everyone who wanted meals were served at the busy cook house. Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Burns, have arrived from Hamilton, Ontario on vacation, and will spend part of the time here and in Charlottetown. Mr. Burns was a Charlottetown, police officer before going to Ontario, to accept a position on the force there. His wife comes from Holland and they have visited most of their friends here and have had some good fishing days.

Big trout are again being hooked in the Morell river, and last week a city merchant landed a four - pounder, and those who watched the battle with the big fish, said it's no wonder so many are lost, we don't know how to play them in. Last spring and summer some dandies were landed along the river. One resident of the village says there are trout in the river drawing old age pensions, they are there so long.

Mrs. Vincent McGrath, Mrs. Ted Anderson and Mrs. Patrick Baker, were visitors to the city on Friday along with Mrs. Ernest Baker.

Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Nolan, are leaving this vicinity to take up residence in Scotchfort, where they have purchased the lovely farm property of Mrs. Saie MacDonald, known as the little Jack property. This farm has been idle for some years since Mr. MacDonald passed on, but will soon be back in condition again, says Mr. Nolan is a good worker. We wish them success in their new home on the main highway, nearer the city.

The sisters from the Welfare department were in this vicinity last week on business. There are a number of welfare children in this vicinity, in homes.

No doubt the oldest fisherman to visit the shore here this spring, for opening day, will be Mr. Stan Lapierre, who is nearing eighty; retired many years ago M. Lapierre says the call of the sea never fades, and you have to go back again. He can still show them how to mend their torn nets, as few of the younger fishermen know how.

Mr. and Mrs. John Daveaux, former Bristol residents residing in the city, in retirement for quite a number of years, will leave shortly with their daughter and son - in - law for a long motor trip to many Canadian parts. They will spend some two to three months visiting friends and places here and there, at leisure time. Mr. Daveaux who informs us he is ### seventy - eight now, enjoys good health and recalls his many years at the shores as lobster factory foreman, in the old days when the going was tough when oans were covered by hand, and hand sealed, with the old soldering irons and long hours after the days work was done, the soldering men worked far into the night to finish their end of the work.

They were the days he says when we ate five meals a day and drank good rum and danced to the fiddle music. It is interesting to visit those old timers and hear their stories of other days gone by.
