A paper was read on behalf of Karl Karlsen, president of Karl Karlsen and Co. Ltd., of Halifax, N.S., who was unable to attend the conference. Mr. Karlsen's paper described the operation of a new stern trawler his company had recently received. This is to be used for sealing, whaling and trawl fishing.

The cost of the ship, including equipment, was about $400,000.

USE FOR SEALING
In March and April it will be used for sealing and the gross total value of the catch is expected to reach $75,000.

From May to September it will be used for whaling, and the gross catch is expected to be $100,000.

From September to January the ship will be fishing, with a gross catch estimated at $80,000.

John Prossie, an economist with the federal department of fisheries, said his studies show the optimum fishing vessel size is 90 to 130 feet and that this would give the most favorable catch per dollar.

He said the optimum size of vessels is the one which has the most favorable productivity-to-investment ratio when related to particular fishing grounds and ports.

This did not mean that it was the most profitable vessel.

Mr. Prossie said a 115-foot vessel studied over three years made an average 39 trips a 365-day period. It spent 255 days at sea, 36 days in refit, 74 days in turn-round time and other delays.

With gross receipts calculate at $204,044, the net boat earnings were $20,864 after deduction of all expenses.

A 141-foot trawler whose costs also were studied showed gross receipts of $205,980 and a net boat loss of $2,363.

REHANG PAINTING TORONTO (CP)—A large oil painting of Queen Victoria that was hung on the wall of the old City Hall council chamber for 67 years has been taken down and will be placed in Osgoode Hall where the Ontario Supreme Court sits. The painting, executed 120 years ago by Franz Xavier Winterhalter, is valued at $6,000.

High school students who had an urge to go to sea should be encouraged and must be made to feel that "fishing is one of our great heritages." They should also have part of their school study time given over to the study of "navigation, electronics, sanitation of personnel and fish and other pertinent factors."

Mr. Comeau said regional training schools for fishermen are "urgently required." If the industry disregards the fisherman so as to "make him feel he is in the very low bracket of workers and tradesmen, within a few years we will be drastically short of fishermen."

Sea Food Co. President Says Fishing Big Industry

By DAVE MacDONALD. MONTREAL (CP) — Ben Comeau, president of Comeau Sea Foods Ltd., Sault Ste. Marie, N.S., has lashed out at what he called the "general view" that fishermen are "school dropouts, unsociable, dirty, smelly, wine-and-women individuals."

"This is not the general case," he said.

He was speaking at the closing session of the Canadian Atlantic offshore fishing vessel conference, attended by about 400 delegates from Quebec, the Atlantic provinces and overseas.

Mr. Comeau said fishing is becoming the most important industry in Canada's coastal provinces.

Better vessels were being built with the needs of the crew in mind.

"Let us not fool ourselves," he said. "The fisherman has a place in this society of ours and he must be assisted in various adaptations in view of present-day requirements."

"It is getting more and more evident that for the benefit of Canada, the federal and provincial governments must co-operate with the fish firms and fishermen to promote the industry and upgrade the standard and training of fishermen."

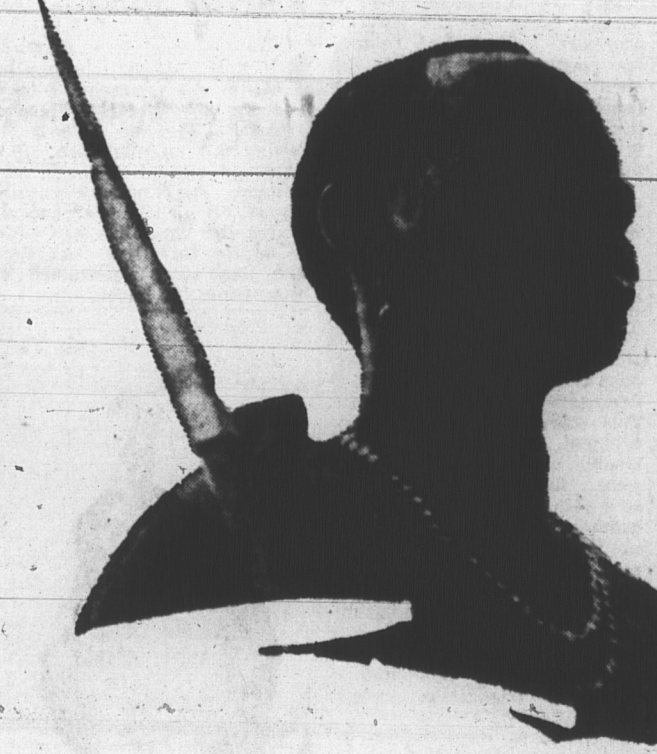

High school students who had an urge to go to sea should be encouraged and must be made to feel that "fishing is one of our great heritages."

They should also have part of their school study time given over to the study of "navigation, electronics, sanitation of personnel and fish and other pertinent factors."

Mr. Comeau said regional training schools for fishermen are "urgently required." If the industry disregards the fisherman so as to "make him feel he is in the very low bracket of workers and tradesmen, within a few years we will be drastically short of fishermen."

DANCE DANCE DANCE

While he strives to build a united, modern nation, Jomo Kenyatta of Kenya is also trying to preserve what is best in African culture. To commemorate the 2nd anniversary of Kenya's independence, celebrating Kenyans from the country's 40 tribes put on a magnificent show in Nairobi. Weekend Magazine Staff Writer Philip Smith and Photographer Bert Beaver were there to record this colorful event. Don't miss this week's Weekend Magazine.
