Ottawa Comment On Deadlock On Potato Support

OTTAWA, Nov. 28 - (CP) - An agricultural expert discloses that the Federal Government and two Maritime Provinces are deadlocked on the issue of granting price support for Canada's potato growers.

Spurred by a slump in potato exports to the United States, the industry, led by badly-hit Maritime growers, have appealed to the Federal Government for a support price of about 56 cents a bushel, on the basis of potatoes in the bin on the farm.

The expert said that the Federal Government has replied to the effect that consideration would be given to such a request should the Provinces be willing to share the financial cost on a 50-50 basis.

The problem was further discussed within the last fortnight when Premier McNair of New Brunswick and Premier Jones of Prince Edward Island met with Agriculture Minister Gardiner and other cabinet officials.

The expert said that at that meeting the Provincial Premiers made clear they had no funds available to contribute to a price-support scheme and asked that the Federal Government consider carrying the load alone.

The Government so far has not been inclined to do this, but a final decision has been made. The door still is open for further negotiations—if the deadlock is broken.

The expert hopes that this may be done at the three-day annual Federal-Provincial agricultural conference which opens here Thursday. Agricultural Ministers and their deputies from all Provinces will attend.

Meanwhile, Canadian potato exporters are finding the shipments path fairly rough. Exports since the season opened in August have reached about 1,300,000 bushels—only about one-third of the 3,800,000 bushels exported in the same period last year.

Most of these exports are going to the United States. Canada's best foreign potato market. However, since the United States Government has reduced the revamped potato price-support program, some of the states have decided to withdraw from the scheme and market potatoes on their own initiative. Prices have taken a decided drop.

In past years, Canadian exporters have sold about 7,000,000 bushels a year to the U. S. market. With the U. S. market at a low ebb, it now appears doubtful whether Canada will fill the half-rate tariff quota granted by the U. S.

Under this arrangement, Canada may ship 2,500,000 bushels of seed and 1,000,000 bushels of table stock at a half tariff rate of 37 1-2 cents a hundredweight. Shipments beyond that amount bear the full rate of 75 cents a hundredweight.

Feasibility Of Canso Bridge Plans Questioned

OTTAWA, Nov. 28 - (CP) - The feasibility of plans for a projected bridge across Nova Scotia's Strait of Canso is being reviewed, an informed source said today.

The informant said the $13,500,000 undertaking has not been shelved but a definite snag has developed in progress towards the start of construction.

The bridge, to link Cape Breton Island with the Nova Scotia mainland, has been authorized as a joint Federal-Nova Scotia project. It would carry both rail and highway traffic across the three-quarter-mile-wide Strait.

The new obstacle, it was stated here, has cropped up over the question of feasibility of engineering designs for the structure. No final decision on the design of the bridge has been reached.

The plans will have to receive the eventual O.K. of the Federal and Provincial Governments and the Canadian National Railways, whose main line in Nova Scotia will cross the bridge.

There was some expectation here that an official statement on the future of the project might be made in the near future by Transport Minister Chevrier, now on his way back to Ottawa from a western trip.

Destructive Fire At North River

The woodworking shop and forge of Roy Bruce at the intersection of the Hampshire and Kingston roads at North River was completely destroyed by fire early yesterday morning.

The building, which was approximately 60 feet long by 30 feet wide, contained planes, saws, drills, forges, $700 worth of seasoned lumber and other valuable equipment, all of which was lost.

The Charlottetown Fire Department was called but was too late to save the building or its contents. Loss is estimated at between $7,000 and $8,000 and was partially covered by insurance.
