DREDGING FOR GOLD.

A Prosperous Business in New Zealand.

Some thrilling stories have passed comet-like through the columns of the Indian and the Australian press of late about the marvelous results that have followed gold-dredging operations in certain portions of New Zealand.

The real fact is this: Gold dredging has taken a firm hold on New Zealand, and dredges and dredgers are being sent from there to such distant countries as Siberia and British Columbia, and even India and Burma.

"Now," declares an old dredger, "the expenses including in running a dredge, costing, say, £7,000, including wear and tear, fuel, wages, etc., average about 13 ounces of gold, or £50 a week. Taking the actual working time at 125 hours a week, and the stuff hauled at 100 tons an hour, gives 12,500 tons per week for £50 a dredger per ton.

"The profits will be understood when it is stated that 13oz of gold a week won pays all expenses, and the dredger the writer was recently connected with won in one week in April last no less than 1,178 ounces, paying back in dividends for this week's work some 70 per cent of the capital, and this same dredger last winter, during sixteen consecutive weeks, won gold averaging 512 ounces per week, which paid for the formation of the company, cost of the entire plant, all outlay to the end of the year, and over 300 per cent besides in dividends for the four months' work!

"This record was a week later, however, beaten by another dredger, four miles distant, winning in five days 1,234 ounces, nearly 1 cwt of gold, valued at about £5,000.

A VISIT TO THE MANUAL TRAINING ROOM

As most of our readers are aware the first manual training room in Prince Edward Island is to be opened today at 4 o'clock, when the chairman of the School Trustees of Charlottetown and the members of the Board, friends and teachers will meet together at Queen Square School and formally declare the room open.

In view of the event, and in order to give such of our readers as will be unable to be present at the ceremony some idea of what has been provided for the purpose of teaching this new subject of school work it was our privilege and pleasure to pay an early visit to see for ourselves.

The room is situated at the top of Queen Square School, and is part of what was formerly the well-known hall. On entering, we fortunately found the director present. Although busy he was pleased to give many particulars concerning the arrangements; and from him we learned that the spacious, light and pleasantly-situated room in which we were measures over 41 feet by 21 feet; and leading out of it, a smaller one, which will serve as a store room.

The whole of the interior has undergone thorough repair and decoration, whilst in addition a sheathed partition has been carried up to the ceiling, both rooms relaid with new floors specially treated to be sound proof for below, and a wainscot put around the larger room.

The heating will be effected by a large-sized radiator in the workroom and a small one in the ante-room; whilst the lighting arrangement when completed will be by gas.

Placed in rows along the floor are 20 neat and serviceable looking benches, — 12 large and 8 smaller ones,—so that each of the 20 boys forming a class will have a bench to himself and plenty of space around it for free movement. These benches are firmly fixed to the floor by a bolt, and are surprisingly strong without undue heaviness. To each bench will be assigned a working set of tools comprising such as will be frequently required by each juvenile worker, whilst others for occasional use will have a place near at hand when wanted, being hung on the walls probably. It is quite evident that everything will have its proper place and be expected to be in that place.

Stepping into the store-room where the tools were we had an opportunity of seeing what they looked like, and must confess our-elves agreeably surprised to find them of quite a business-like appearance, and of a quality without doubt of the very best. On seeing such an array, and being told they included amongst them the latest and most improved specimens of their kind obtainable, it was clear to us that money had not been spared in their purchase; and we were naturally wishful to know the probable sum expended on them, but our courteous guide smilingly suggested that the tax our journalistic minds for an estimate. Our next question was "How would they all be kept in order and always be ready for use?" and we were told that most of them would be sharpened and kept good by the boys themselves,—they, as part of the work, being taught to do so; all of which made it quite clear to us that it was just as important to be able to put a tool in order as to use it.

Returning to the work room we glanced with increased interest at the useful-looking grindstone occupying a corner to itself, and found it not difficult to picture the same being vigorously revolved by a bearded knight of the bench whilst a comrade in arms wore the stone.

Judging by the blackboards, drawing is not to be forgotten by any means, and we enquired of our guide that all to be made has to be drawn as a working drawing to scale first. There is nothing haphazard about working drawing, we know, especially when you have to work from it. Then, too, sketches, illustrations, items of information and numberless other facts are to find their place on the blackboards.

"And what wood do you use, director?" we asked; and our reply were told, "Most kinds, with the exception of the very hard or difficult to get varieties, working chiefly in the commoner kinds, such as spruce, pine, whitewood and birch.

Having expended our own and our informant's time as well, we turned to go, full of reflection as we descended the stairs that here was a noble work indeed, nobly conceived and handsomely carried out; and our conclusion was that Charlottetown, and every place into which the movement was carried had need to feel the utmost gratitude and thanks to the donor, Sir William McDonnell, and to his pain-taking, far-seeing colleague, Prof Robertson.

WONDROUS REMEDY

Is What a London Doctor Calls Dodd's Kidney Pills.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—A large decrease in the number of cases of Kidney Disease has been noted in this city during the past year.

"Here's only one thing to be said about it," said a prominent physician, speaking on the subject to-day.

"This falling off is due solely to the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills by the people. Dodd's Kidney Pills are the most wondrous kidney remedy ever known. They are used in nearly every household, which accounts for the great decrease of Kidney Complaints."

LADIES' AID.—The annual meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the P. E. Island Hospital will be held in the Y. M. C. A. parlors next Tuesday morning, October 2nd, at 11.30 o'clock. The officers for the year will be elected at this meeting, and every member should make an effort to attend.

K. OF P. E.—An important meeting of branch No. 9 of the K. of P. E. will be held in Mechanics Hall on Monday October 1st at 7.30 p. m. As there is business of a political and financial nature to be transacted as well as new friends to be enrolled a large attendance is requested. John H. Hamill, Secty.

ON HIS OWN ACCOUNT.—Mr. Horace C. Brown, formerly of Charlottetown, has branched out in the tailoring business on his own account in St. John, N. B. his establishment being on King Street. Mr. Brown has been employed as cutter in one of the leading houses in St. John, and now that he has branched out for himself will doubtless receive a snug share of patronage.

AFTER DONOVAN.—A guard from Dorchester penitentiary is expected here tonight to take over Geo Donovan who was some time ago released on ticket-of-leave but has since been convicted of larceny. Donovan was sentenced to three years in Dorchester Penitentiary for receiving stolen goods and had served about half his term when released. He is being taken back now to serve out the balance of his term.

POLICE COURT.—This forenoon Ellen Essory confessed to an infraction of the Liquor Regulation Act and was fined $100 and costs or two months imprisonment. The hearing of the charge against John Gorman was continued for a week. Gorman was arrested on a charge of being drunk and disorderly. He claims that the charge is not true. The postponement is made to enable Gorman to produce evidence. A batch of poll tax executions were issued.
