

THE DAILY EXAMINER.

JUNE 17, 1884.

Editorial Notes.

In England, the people are discussing the prospects of a Ministerial crisis and a dissolution of Parliament.

The Suffrage Sisterhood, of England, have resolved to continue the agitation to obtain for women the right to vote for members of Parliament.

The Bar of Winnipeg object to the appointment of Mr. Smith as Judge in Manitoba. They would, no doubt, feel better about it, if it were likely that a Manitoba lawyer would soon be appointed Judge in Ontario or Quebec.

It is reported that in the rural districts of France the belief is growing that Gladstone has practically outwitted the French Cabinet, and secured an alliance for conference purposes, which is certain to be resented by Germany and to bring new troubles upon the Republic.

The mails did not arrive last evening until five minutes past ten o'clock, or two hours behind time. We hope this will not occur again. No good excuse can be offered for disappointing the community in this way—except a storm or an accident. The mails must be delivered on time.

Excavations near the spot prove that dynamiters made an attempt to blow up the Emperor of Germany, the Crown Prince, the Imperial Chancellor, and other mighty men, on the occasion of the unveiling of the colossal statue of Germania in September last. Heavy rains came—to the confusion of the dynamiters.

The main point in the Patriot's screed about Mr. Hackett is that the C. P. R. "gives him employment." As this is not true—as Mr. Hackett has never been in the employ of the Canada Pacific Railway—the Patriot's attack goes for nothing. Still there are, no doubt, some persons who will regard it with approbation; for there are still some men whose delight is in lies.

Congress is considering a new policy with respect to the treatment of Indians. This policy includes (1.) never breaking faith with the Indians, (2.) not holding the tribe responsible for the guilt of a member thereof, (3.) having a civilian Secretary and an Indian Department; (4.) giving absolute and liberal salaries to Indian agents to the exclusion of all speculation and experimentation, (5.) doing away with monopoly trade, (6.) absolutely prohibiting the liquor traffic, (7.) keeping soldiers and Indians apart, (8.) civilizing and teaching the Indians, (9.) and giving the rights of citizenship to all who support themselves in a civilized way. This is a good policy. But it is late in being propounded. Well, better late than never.

How is the President elected? This question we often hear. The following is a short description of the mode:—

The President and Vice-President are elected for four years by a College of Electors. Each State returns by a popular vote as many electors as it has Senators and Members of Congress. At first these electors were chosen by the Legislatures; but now they are chosen by direct vote of the people. The election is held on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in November, every four years. On the first Wednesday in December thereafter these electors meet in their own States, and vote for President and Vice-President. On the second Wednesday of February following, the certificates of these votes are opened, in the presence of the two houses of Congress, by the President of the Senate, and the votes are counted and the result declared. Of course the result is known long before the votes are thus finally counted. Thus, the State elections determine the political character of the vote for the presidential election long before that vote takes place. Then again the vote for the electors in November quite settles, beforehand, the action of the electoral college in December. And the meeting of the college at that date, and the counting of the votes in February are merely matters of magnificent routine.

Tilden Declines.

MR. TILDEN has declined to be again a candidate for the office of President of the United States.

Mr. Tilden retires with dignity. The letter in which he declares his intention to retire from public life sets forth that—

"For fifty years as a private citizen, never contemplating an official career, I have devoted as much thought and effort to the duty of influencing aright the action of Government institutions of my country, as to all other objects. I have never accepted official service except for a brief period, for a special purpose, and only when the occasion seemed to require from me that sacrifice of private preferences to the public welfare. I undertook the State administration of New York as it was supposed in that way only could the executive power be arrayed on the side of the reforms to which, as a private citizen, I had given three years of my life. I accepted the nomination for the Presidency in 1876 because of the general conviction that my candidacy would best present the issue of reform which the Democratic majority of the people desired to have worked out in the Federal Government as it had been in that of the State of New York.

Twenty years of continuous maladministration, under the demoralizing influences of intestine war, and of bad finance, have infected the whole governmental system of the United States with the cancerous growths of false constructions and corrupt practices. Powerful classes have acquired pecuniary interests in official abuse, and the moral standards of the people have been impaired. To redress these evils is a work of great difficulty and labor, and cannot be accomplished without the most energetic and efficient personal action on the part of the chief executive of the public. At the present time the considerations which induced my action in 1880 have become imperative. I ought not to assume a task which I have not the physical strength to carry through. To reform the administration of the federal government; to realize my own ideal, and to fulfil the just expectations of the people, would indeed warrant, as they could alone compensate, the sacrifices which the undertaking would involve. But, in my condition of advancing years and declining strength, I feel no assurance of my ability to accomplish those objects. I am, therefore, constrained to say, definitely, that I cannot now assume the labors of an administration or a canvass."

Mr. Tilden having, in these terms, declined the candidature, it is believed that Governor Cleveland will be the Democratic candidate. It is considered a great thing in his favor that he is a man of irreproachable character.

Prince Albert Victor's first Speech.

Prince Albert Victor of Wales—brother of Prince George, who is now here—spoke for the first time on the 24th May last, at a meeting at Cambridge in aid of the establishment of a University movement in East London for improving the social condition of the working classes. On rising, His Royal Highness was received with loud cheers. He said:—

GENTLEMEN,—I think myself very happy in having been able to be one of those who this evening have had the pleasure of hearing what has been done for the settlement of Oxford men in the midst of Whitechapel. I am sure Cambridge men will be glad to bear a hand in this good work, more especially as it is to help those who are wishing to help themselves. (Cheers.) All such help given in a brotherly spirit not only blesses him who receives, but also him who gives, and this work done by University men in Whitechapel and Stepney thus induces the sympathies and opens up a broader view of life to those engaged in it than is possible for us to obtain while living in the West-end of London only. I have heard to-night of the many ways in which, this help may be rendered. It is not for me now to dwell upon any of those in particular, but we must all see, I am sure, that nothing is more necessary for building up a healthy commonwealth (than that all classes or parties, whether political or religious, should join and unite together in the attempt to better, not only each other, but the whole. (Cheers.) It is because the present movement, started by the University of Oxford and now to be joined by the University of Cambridge, endeavours to do this, and to help in the physical, moral, political, and intellectual bettering of our fellow-countrymen in the eastern parts of London, and to make them thus worthier citizens, not only of the great metropolis, but also of our wider England, to which we all alike feel such devotion, that I, for one give them my heartiest sympathy. (Cheers.)

A Fig for the Country's Interests!

(Montreal Gazette.)

The Hamilton Times, which approved of the abolition of canal tolls until the government inclined to the policy, and then became a bitter opponent of relief to the shipping trade, declares that "we in Hamilton do not care a flip of a penny whether our grain goes to Europe by way of Montreal or by way of New York. If a Montreal man offers to carry it for 10 cents and the New Yorker says 9 1/2, the New Yorker gets the job every time. The same rule holds with regard to imports." That is the true free trade principle. A fig for the country's welfare, for the community of interests for national considerations, say the free traders. Build up American ports, let the carrying trade enrich foreign vessel-owners, if a modicum of expense to the producer can be saved. Yet all the while the producer is ruining the home market upon which he largely depends, cutting away the reliance of a free outlet the maintenance of the Canadian water-way affords, and destroying important interests contributing to the aggregate prosperity of the people. But the free-trader is ever selfish, moulding and defending his principles from the narrow ground of individual interest.

A German writer says that Abdul Hamid the present Sultan of Turkey, leads an almost ascetic life. He abstains wholly from alcoholic liquors, is pious without being a zealot, economical without being stingy, generous without being a spendthrift. Abdul Hamid II., who has presided personally over the sittings of the divan. Although a man of peace and as much opposed to war as his ancestors were fond of it, he is not without military ability. He clearly showed this during the late Eastern war by the instructions sent to his generals.
