AFTER 20 LONG YEARS.

FEELINGS OF MEN RELEASED FROM LONG IMPRISONMENT.

Everything New to Them—Gathered Flowers Like Children—Wonder Expressed at the Sight of Cows and Poultry—One of the Men a Canadian.

"Are those geese or ducks?"

That was a question asked by a man 40 years old in Lansing, Kan., last Sunday. It was Arthur Winner. Winner and McNutt were the two most famous prisoners in the Kansas penitentiary. These men were liberated on Sunday, after an incarceration extending over twenty years.

At 5 o'clock on Sunday morning Warden Chase unlocked the cells. He took Winner and McNutt to the prison barber shop, and after they were shaved gave them two Government suits, which did not fit at all. Winner, who worked in the prison shoe shop, had brought two pairs of patent-leather shoes. The men put these on. With the highly-japanned and stylishly-pointed foot-gear and the ridiculously-cheap and awkward clothes, they, in company with ex-Senator O. H. Bentley of this city, stepped outside the great stone walls.

For twenty years they had seen neither tree, shrub, bird, flower, grass nor domestic animal. Two of Warden Chase's daughters met them just outside the door and presented them with two beautiful flowers. Several trustees approached them, beaming, and presented them with bouquets as they went down the path.

Tears were in both men's eyes.

"See!" cried Winner, the most demonstrative of the two. "There is a town. There was no town here when I went in."

"That is Lansing," said Mr. Bentley.

"Let's not go there," said Winner. "I want to go over to those woods."

McNutt agreed, and they went over to a thicket by the roadside. The two came across a cow.

"Is that a cow?" said Winner, hesitatingly. "Don't go on. Let me look at at."

And he circled around the animal, much as a man examines a lion at Barnum's.

Then he approached her timorously, and laid his hand on her back. "This," he said "is the only cow I have seen in twenty years."

A little later they met a flock of geese. "Look, said Winner, again. "Tell me, I really do not know, are those geese or ducks?"

He was told they were geese and he tried to pet them.

"Winner," said McNutt, a moment later, "what is that scent? Do you smell it?"

"Yes. It must come from those flowers."

Both men descended upon an elderberry bush and stripped it of its blossoms. They were like two children. They picked every flower they saw and carried it with them.

"See here," said Winner, "here is a good old milkweed. How green and beautiful it is." And he plucked it and added it to his armful of variegated vegetation.

When they reached Kansas City they both began to place things that they had read about in the newspapers.

McNutt could not distinguish between a cable car and an electric car. He insisted on trying both, and finally got it into his head which was which.

In the evening they went to a park and saw an ice toboggan slide in action. Neither had read about this in the papers, and both were greatly excited over it. They also insisted on stopping and examining every high building.

"In these 20 years, said McNutt, reflectively, "the world has moved along a century."

McNutt's case is the sadder. Winner's folks are wealthy, among the most wealthy in Kansas City, and he went at once to their palatial home, where he was received with open arms, McNutt has no one to whom to go. His old mother still lives in Nova Scotia and is very poor. His wife is married to another man and lives somewhere in Missouri. Winner was 19 when he went to the penitentiary and McNutt 20 years of age. McNutt has secured a job of decorating in Leavenworth and will open a shop there.

Winner will go back to the penitentiary as general manager of the Burr Company's shoe business there, that company having the convict contract of the Lansing prison.

The young men began to serve their sentence on June 10, 1874, just 20 years ago. McNutt's wife secured a divorce and a few years later married again. She is now in Clay County, Mo., and has a family of growing children.

Nothing was done for five years in behalf of the young men. Then efforts for a pardon were made. Ex-Senator Bently finally secured their release. Both were good prisoners, neither having received a demerit mark in the 20 years.—Widita Eagle.

About Cactuses.

A writer in the Popular Science Monthly who is a successful grower of cactuses, says that if you ask that convenient fiction, the Man in the Street, what sort of a plant a cactus is, he will probably tell you it is a leaf and no stem, and each of the leaves grows out of the last one. Whenever we set up the man in the street, however, you must have noticed that we do it in order to knock him down again, like a nine-pin, the next moment; and this particular instance is no exception to the rule; for the truth is, that a cactus is all stem and no leaves, what looks like a leaf being really a branch sticking out at an angle. The true leaves, if there are any, are mere spines or prickles on the surface, while the branches in the prickly pear and many of the ornamental hot-house cactuses, are flattened out like a leaf to perform foliar functions. In most plants, to put it simply, the leaves are the mouths and stomach of the organism; their thin and flattened blades are spread out horizontally in a wide expanse, covered with tiny throats and lips, which suck in carbonic acid from the surrounding air, and disintegrate it in their own cells under the influence of sunlight. In the prickley pears, on the contrary, it is the flattened stem and branches which undertake this essential operation in the life of the plant—the sucking in of carbon and giving out of oxygen, which is to the vegetable exactly what the eating and digesting of food is to the animal organism. In their old age, however, the stems of the prickly pear display their true character by becoming woody in texture and losing their articulated leaf-like appearance.

560,000 Dogs in Paris.

Paris is interesting itself in a dog crusade. Some one has discovered that there are 500,000 dogs in that city, and that it costs $5,000,000 a year to feed them. This is one of those statistical fallacies that remind one of the discontented pendulum. No one calculates how much the dogs are worth to the owners in loyalty, affection and protection. All that is shown is the utilitarian aggregate of dog biscuit.

Of course no hope of his recovery could be held out. Within a month, the same friend has received a letter from Mr. Langley stating that he is completely cured of the supposed fatal disorder. Mr. Langley says no medicine did him any good until he began using Dodd's Kidney Pills. These helped him from the first and in the end restored him to perfect health.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ar.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

NAVAL MOBILIZATION.

Preparation for Tactics in the English Channel and Irish Sea.

A late London despatch says that the Admiralty has issued an order for naval mobilization. As soon as possible thereafter the ships will put to sea and practice tactics for about a week. The object is to enable the officers and men to get some experience of the ships put in commission for the manœuvres, and settle down in their quarters before hostilities are declared. The number of vessels of all classes will be more numerous than last or the previous year. Vice-Admiral R. O. B. Fitzroy, C. B., will command the combined "Red," and Rear-Admiral Edward Seymour (Admiral Superintendent of Naval Reserves) both divisions of the "Blue" fleet. The scene of the operations will be the English Channel and Irish Sea. Chief among the questions to be solved are means of preventing scattered squadrons from coming together and turning the tables upon an enemy only temporarily superior in force; and, on the other hand, of circumventing with a fleet weak in one class of ves-els only, an opponent strong in cruisers and battleships. This means that, besides the chances of heavy fighting between ironclads, there will probably be fierce conflicts, in which torpedo boats will be caught napping by their specially created enemies, the torpedo boat "destroyers." To secure occasion for the execution of the operations indicated, after the return from the week's cruise the fleet will be divided into four squadrons, one of which will be considerably stronger than the other three. The war operations will begin about August 3 or 4, after the ships have coaled, and hostilities will be allowed to continue ten days.
