For many years past it has been known that large sums of gold are lying hid in Egypt. It is calculated that about £40,000,000 in bullion has from time to time been imported into the country. About £6,000,000 of this is in circulation, and it has recently transpired that during the viceroyalty of Ismail Pasha, another £6,000,000 was secretly transported to Constantinople. This leaves £28,000,000 unaccounted for, and this sum must either have been absorbed in the gold ornaments of the country or must be hidden away. Should good government bring peace and security to Egypt, this or a considerable portion of this sum will return into circulation and assist in the development of the country.
