The early discovery of these lesions with their removal or correction means that these patients have a much more favorable chance for a long life than if these lesions had not been discovered until after the onset of symptoms...

Address and Presentation

On July 20th the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hammill, Central Bedeque, was the scene of a happy occasion when friends from the district and the members of the family gathered to extend congratulations to this venerable couple on the attainment of their 25th wedding anniversary.

Many and valuable were the gifts bestowed on them by members of the family and by their numerous friends. From the people of the district they received a beautiful chest of silver, a large table cloth and napkins, and a spring-filled mattress from the members of the family...

Music, dancing and singing passed away a delightful evening and a delicious lunch was served to all present.

The following address was read to Mr. and Mrs. Hammill by Mrs. Fred McCardie and the presentation of the chest of silver was made by Mrs. Bert McCardie.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Hammill, Central Bedeque, P. E. I.

Dear Friends: "Rejoice! Rejoice! It is a Jubilee!" Thus heralds proclaimed great occasions of joy among the early Christians. These same words echo the sentiments of us who have gathered to join with you, Mr. and Mrs. Hammill, in sharing the joy of your silver chain of wedded years...

Twenty-five years ago you were the blushing bride and the proud groom setting out together on the way of love and sacrifice with the solemn words of the beautiful ceremony reminding you that it was "for better or worse, for richer or poorer, in sickness and in health until death do us part."

As the way wound on, you can look back upon many special joys and happy memories that are particularly your own—your happy home, your lovely family. Many of these we have been happy to share with you, and we wish to express our appreciation of all that those twenty-five years have meant to us too. The fine Christian home that you have built up is one upon which we could well model our own, and in these days of threatening disasters to our civilization, such homes, like the "house built upon the rock", are the hope of democracy...

Even in the clouds of the trials and difficulties that you met along the way—for no lives are without some—you must have found the silver lining as you rode through them together, for we see little traces of worry or sorrow on your youthful, happy faces.

Today, as you reach the milestone of twenty-five years, your happiness must be even greater than it was on that blissful day of your wedding, for you share it with your very own, your son, your three daughters, and your little grandson. We offer all of you our very sincere congratulations in the jubilee of rejoicing that is yours today.

Instead of attempting to peer into that vast unknown we call the future, may we offer you our very best wishes for the years ahead. May you enjoy health and strength for many, many years! May your days be studded with jewels of gladness with your family! May God shower upon you with even greater abundance His choicest graces and blessings as the silver turns to gold! Just as the shadows lengthen and the end of the road appears, may your happy days together be crowned with the rich reward your noble lives deserve! May we ask you to accept this gift as a symbol of our desire to rejoice with you on this jubilee? Through it we wish to say more sincerely than words can tell how proud and happy we are to be here on this occasion to claim you as our friends, and to proclaim with gladness, "Truly, this is a Jubilee!"

Strange But True

Birds as well as men may be weather wise. Take for example, the seagulls; which flies over the land during bad weather. Snakes and lizards are alike in that both have scaly skins, a slender forked tongue, and no movable eyelids. Too, both have invisible ears and hear through the mouth.

The boiling mud pools at Ariki, New Zealand, are among the most interesting phenomenon of Mother Nature. This seething mass of bubbling mud is constantly shifting and changing its form and color.

Every time an officer or a man goes on the quarter-deck he salutes. Why? In pre-reformation days a crucifix, used to be carried on the quarter deck and all had to do reverence to it. A very old nautical law prescribed death as the punishment for anyone who desecrated the crucifix on the quarter-deck.

All skyscrapers are constructed on a framework of steel so that when the wind blows, say, at 70 miles per hour, the building will sway to and fro without falling down. Steel frames are really elastic.

The gilt knob and the colored stripes on a barber's pole are a relic of the days when barbers were also surgeons. The gilt knob represents the bleeding-dish and the stripes the bandages.

The name "Tithing Barn" carries us back centuries in history when the church got a tenth of the crops and one out of every 10 foals or sheep or oxen. One out of every sheaf of grain went to the church, and the priests. Collectively, this represented a lot of livestock and grain so the buildings built to store this wealth became known as "Tithing Barns."

This old custom went out of fashion in 1836. But many of the old barns still survive, and when we see them in the English countryside we are reminded of the wagons carrying sheaves, the harrow, the vest hands, etc. when William the Norman was king, and earlier than that.

The black-spined porcupine ant-eater of New Guinea lays eggs and hatches them in its pouch where the young live for some weeks before venturing into the outer world.

There are many ways in which the different peoples observe the world's greatest day—Christmas. In England, children drag the Yule log with great ceremony and mirth to its place on the hearth. In Denmark a great feast takes place on Christmas Eve, and in parts of Switzerland the family get together for the cutting of huge pies baked for the occasion. While in Australia everybody goes on a gala picnic. For the Russian Children Christmas means the coming of Baboushka with her gifts intended for the Christ Child whom she never seems able to find.

To us Christmas means more than these. There is a manger, a mother, a Holy Babe, shepherds, a star, Wise Men from the East, Christmas, chorals and so on.

The name "hard tack", for biscuits, originated with the navy. So did "a bloater" for a slice of steak. Salad is called "rabbit's food"; plum pudding is "tiddy duff"; a tin of sardines is a "tin of whales" and salted meat is "salt horse" or "salt pork." Quaint and amusing names are vogue aboard ship.

Charles Charlesworth of Stratfordshire, England, died of old age when he was only seven years the prower's cake frosting was old. He was born March 14, 1928 a failure.

At the age of four he grew white whiskers, had shiveled looking skin, knotted hands, the voice of a very old man, had a feeble walk and looked like a person who'd reached the century mark. Ref: "Premature senility" Medical Text-book. Savages of West Africa used to play football with a human skull.

IOWA CITY, Ia., Aug. 30 (AP)—A hungry prowler with a flair for cooking broke into the Iowa City Presbyterian Church, whipped up a dinner from canned goods found in the kitchen and topped off the meal by making a chocolate cake. Church officials, who discovered the dirty dishes yesterday, said the prower's cake frosting was old. He was born March 14, 1928 a failure.
