

Queen Speaks At Special Session Of U.N. Assembly

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (Reuters)—Queen Elizabeth said Monday the United Nations is "still far from the achievement of the ideals" of its founders, but she expressed confidence that the peoples of the world expect it to persevere in its efforts.

Addressing the General Assembly in special session for the occasion, she pledged the Commonwealth to "continue to add to the United Nations a tried element of strength and of accumulated experience."

The text of the Queen's remarks was made available to the press in advance of her UN appearance.

She said the countries of the Commonwealth regard their "continuing association with one another and joint service to their high ideals as still an essential contribution to world peace and justice."

The 10 Commonwealth countries that were members of the United Nations formed a free association of fully independent states which had widely different histories, cultures and traditions.

Common hopes, "Common ideals and hopes, not formal bonds, unite the members of the Commonwealth and promote that association between them which, in my belief, has contributed significantly to the cause of human freedom."

The Queen, first British monarch ever to address the assembly, said the United Nations' future will be determined not by the degree to which its members observe strictly the provisions of the charter and co-operate in its practical activities, but also by the strength of its peoples' devotion to the pursuit of the ideals she had mentioned.

"When justice and respect for obligations are firmly established, the United Nations will be able to achieve the goal of world at peace, law abiding and prosperous for which men and women have striven so long and which is the heart's desire of every nation here represented."

"I offer you my best wishes in your task and pray that you may be successful."

The Queen said the assembly was "born of the endeavors of countless men and women from different nations, who, over the centuries, have pursued the aim of the preservation of peace between nations, equality of justice for all before the law and the right of the peoples of the world to live their lives in freedom and security."

The charter of the United Nations was framed with a view to giving expression to these great purposes and so forming a fitting memorial to the men and women whose toil and sacrifices turned those ideas into articles of faith for the nations of today.

"Time has in fact made the task of the United Nations more difficult than it seemed when the terms of the charter were agreed at San Francisco 12 years ago. We are still far from the achievement of the ideals which I have mentioned but we must not be discouraged. The peoples of the world expect the United Nations to persevere in its efforts."

It is understood that all 10 Commonwealth governments approved the speech.

President (Dr.) H.B. MacNeill presided at the regular monthly meeting of the Summerside Branch (No. 5) of the Canadian Legion B.E.S.L. held last evening in the Home.

Several recommendations put forward by the Lobster carnival committee of the branch of which Com. Ben Champion was chairman, were approved by the meeting and were as follows:

(1) That the Summerside Branch No. 5 Canadian Legion B.E.S.L. participate in the 1958 carnival, if one is held.

(2) That the lobster carnival be held for a period not exceeding four days.

(3) That the midway be smaller and that no admission be charged for it, that is, at the entrance to the midway.

(4) That horse racing be dispensed with unless some club would take this on as their project. Your committee feels that the weather was the cause of the loss this year, and that the races are a drawing card to the carnival.

(5) This year the track and field meet operated at a loss, but again your committee thinks it should be carried on, as we feel this is one of the types of sport in which our youth should participate.

Com. Lorne Monkey reported briefly for the roadside table committee, during which he stated that more concrete information regarding a roadside table site will be forthcoming at the next general meeting.

Com. Les Jenkins told the meeting that a membership campaign for A.P.E.C. is being held around the first week in November and gave a brief outline of the aims of this organization, which is now in its third year.

Secretary-manager Jim Hogan reported that the flood lights that are to be installed at the foot of the Cenotaph in Memorial Square have been ordered and will be installed and ready for Remembrance Day, November 11.

Com. Tanton MacNeill reported the present paid-up membership of the branch is 470. Three new applications for membership were approved.

Husband And Wife Team Thrills Concert Audience

Two of Canada's most outstanding artists, the husband-and-wife duo - pianists, Margaret Parsons and Clifford Poole thrilled a packed auditorium in Summerside last evening at the first Community Concert of the fall and winter season.

Before the recital the two artists were introduced to the large assemblage in Civic Auditorium by Mr. T. Earle Hickey, C.A., and shortly after this energetic and versatile couple opened the program with "Sonata in B flat major" by Mozart, followed by "Prelude in B minor" by Franck.

At the conclusion of the program the talented artists were brought back to render two encores. Parsons and Poole have been making an extensive tour of the United States and Canada and leave Summerside today for St. Stephen, N.B. They then return to London, Ontario where Mr. Poole is principal of Music Teachers College, University of Western Ontario and Western Ontario Conservatory of Music.

On "Focusing on Essentials" in the Y.P.U. purpose, leading to loving and serving God.

National president Walter Morris of Comber, Ont. was present and also spoke to the group. Sessions were conducted by the president, David MacDonald of Charlottetown.

Mr. MacLean Hospital Administrator said engineers objected to the location of the powerhouse at the south west corner of the building. They point out that the majority of steam used would be in the kitchen, the laundry and the operating room. The said the loss of heat in transmitting the steam for long distances was too great. This, he said was the reason for shifting the power house to the new wing.

Mr. MacLean said the provision of extra beds in the new wing will release 36 beds in the main hospital for the chronically ill, something for which the present hospital has no actual provision.

It will also make room for a large paediatric department on the second floor of the main building. The main hospital, basement will contain a complete new laboratory and will have X-ray and out patients departments on the main floor.

HOSPITAL GRANTS Speaking of hospital grants, Mr. MacLean said the combined federal and provincial grants would be $3,000 per bed. They would also pay for additional X-ray and laboratory space on the basis that 300 sq. ft. equals one hospital bed.

The Hospital Administrator said it was hoped that the steel will be ordered very shortly with building to commence in early spring.

Andrew Likely, Secretary Treasurer of the Board emphasized the importance of providing proper care for the sick. He said, "We have a splendid staff of doctors and in order that our people may receive specialized treatment without having to go outside the province we must provide the most modern equipment possible."

FINANCING METHODS Mr. Likely described the method which the Board hopes to use for the financing of the project.

He stated that the 1956 campaign realized $300,000. Of this amount, $192,449 has already been paid into the building fund and is now yielding over 5% per cent.

The Hospital has available $200,000 representing an accumulation over the years.

Mr. Likely estimated that in the final program, government grants would be in the vicinity of $200,000. "These and other sources make about $700,000 which means that the balance of $300,000 has to be financed by one means or another such as a bond issue."

Rocket Ready For Firing

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U.S. satellite rocket Vanguard apparently is poised for a test firing today.

Meanwhile, North American scientists and amateur observers now are getting evening glimpses of the Russian rocket which hurled Sputnik aloft some 18 days ago.

Official sources at the missile test centre in Cape Canaveral, Fla., said a planned test firing of the Vanguard rocket's first stage engine was called off Monday because of a high wind whipping from the Atlantic. They said the firing probably wouldn't take place until today.

The firing of the 72-foot missile is a test only for the first stage of the engine planned to hoist a U.S. satellite into space. A three-stage test is not scheduled until next December.

"Space Rabbit" Starts Mystery

LONDON (Reuters)—A rabbit found on the doorstep of a Dublin house led Monday to a spate of rumors that the animal might have fallen from an exploding rocket.

The London Star says the "rabbit" found on the doorstep of a Dublin house led Monday to a spate of rumors that the animal might have fallen from an exploding rocket.

The newspaper says that soon after an aerial explosion had been heard over the city, a woman found the rabbit.

It was still alive though badly injured in the legs and was quite dry although heavy rain had fallen.

Police examined the ground nearby but could find no footprints or bloodstains and it was suggested the rabbit which died later, must have been dropped on the spot where it was found.

Dublin police dismissed the space suggestion as "nonsense." They said the reported explosion might have been the sound of a foghorn.

AMMAN, Jordan (AP)—A government source said Sunday Jordan has complained to UN truce supervisors that an Israeli jet fighter plane attacked a Jordanian civilian airliner Saturday. Jordan also considering diplomatic action, the informant said.

The American pilot of a Jordanian transport plane said in Cairo an Israeli jet fired on his craft five times as he flew over Jordanian territory. None of the shots hit, he said, and the plane went on to Cairo.

In Jerusalem, the Israeli army issued a statement saying the Jordan plane was ordered to land after being spotted by an Israeli Air Force craft over the Negev desert 20 miles inside Israel. It said the Jordan plane refused and escaped across the border. Israel also lodged a complaint with the UN mixed armistice commission.

The official Jordan account of the incident said the airliner, with 14 passengers and four crew, was on its normal daily flight from Amman to Cairo when it was attacked over the town of Aqaba, Jordan. The plane sent an SOS and Jordan land forces at Aqaba drove off the Israeli jet with ground fire.

Two Israeli fighters returned later and fired on the ground positions but withdrew under anti-aircraft fire.

The planners are Sir Richard Powell, permanent secretary of the defence ministry; Sir Edwin Powell, chairman of Britain's atomic energy authority, and Sir Patrick Dean, a deputy undersecretary at the foreign office who is charged with political aspects of Britain's atomic energy program.

Macmillan's party also includes Sir William Hayter, former British ambassador to Moscow and now a general political director at the foreign office. Under Macmillan's plan, the two allies would co-ordinate their scientific effort through a joint planning directorate with headquarters in Washington.
