In Memoriam.

LINES WRITTEN ON THE DEATH OF MISS
H. PALMER.

Sweetly hast thou pass'd away
To the realms of endless night;
Gone into Eternal Day;
Gone, where all is peace and love;
Gone, where sorrow is unknown;
Gone to perfect bliss above;
Gone to the Redeemer's Throne,
Gone to live with God for aye,
In the "City," bright and fair.
Sweeter than the flowers of May Art thou, loved one!—ever there!
May the gentle zephyrs blow Mildly where thy ashes sleep;
—May perennial flowers grow,
Where the willows droop and weep.
Where the lily and the rose,
Nurtured by the rain and earth,
Shall their loveliness expose—
Emblems of departed worth.
There, in beauty, let them bloom,
Gladdened by the sun and shower;
Sweet companions for the tomb;
—Fit its treasures to embower,
Till the grave shall keep no more
That committed to its care,
When the loud, last thunder's roar,
Shall the coming Judge declare.
Then shall Jesus, from the skies,
Come with Majesty Divine;
And the ransom'd dust shall rise,
And eternally shall shine
With the spirit, then complete,
Ever to its form restored;
And for ever counted meet—
Meet companion for the Lord.

The President's Message.

President Arthur's suggestions have been well received by the Press of New York.

The Sun says:—"President Arthur's second message is made in the interest of honest and economical government. The message is most instructive and patriotic in spirit, business-like in form, and full of evidence of thorough study of the foreign and domestic business of the Government."

The World says:—"That part of the message which deals with the revenue will receive more attention than all the rest.
President Arthur plainly concedes that a radical reform of the revenue is needed, and yet the adoption of his recommendations would only obstruct and delay such reform."

The Tribune says:—"The message is a credible document, and deserves the careful attention of the public. If the President shall conduct the remainder of his term in accordance with the sentiments expressed in this message, he may yet quite his party, and thus secure for himself greater success than his ambition now pictures to him."

The Times, referring to the Civil Service section of the message, says:—"Let us hope Congress will show greater confidence in the President's sincerity than the assessors and assesses of the late campaign."

The Herald's Washington special says:—"The President's message was rather coldly received by the Republicans in the House.
Most sensible men on both sides, however, speak very highly of it as a document of unusual merit and importance. Most of the Republican Senators who listened to the reading of the message approved of the President's recommendations. The Democratic Senators are not disposed to express opinions, most of them saying they did not hear it read. Hiscock said:—"It is, as a whole, a document full of wise, judicious, and necessary recommendations. The only fault to find is that the session is too short to carry out many of the subjects of the message. With the views therein contained relative to Civil Service reform I am heartily in accord." Hiscock highly approved the suggestion regarding vetoing separate items to the Appropriation Bill without imperiling the whole."
