life.

In later years, the strain on his health took the form of frequent attacks of pulmonary ailments.
He took frequent trips in search of health, usually to Virginia and other southern resorts, during the spring.

He formed a close friendship early in life with the late Frank-was on a first name basis.

The late United States President called him "MacKenzie" and he called Mr. Roosevelt "Franklin." It is unlikely any other friend, except Sir William Mulock, ever addressed Mr. King so familiarly.

By 1947, Mr. King's health responding to the war and war's aftermath had taken their toll. He was seriously ill with a pulmonary ailment in the spring of that year.

It was then he began to think of retiring. Early in 1948 he had a Liberal convention called to pick his successor whom he hoped would be Mr. St. Laurent, the man he had brought into politics as Minister of Justice in 1944 with that end in view.

The convention chose Mr. St.
Laurent Aug. 7, 1949, just 29 years to the day from the time Mr. King had been chosen to succeed Sir Wilfrid Laurier. For the time, he retained the office of Prime Minister.

Mr. King then went to the General Assembly of the United Nations in Paris which he addressed, although the start of his last illness was already upon him.

He went from Paris to London for a conference of Commonwealth Prime Ministers, but became so ill that he was forced to remain in bed in his hotel for a month.

Urged To Relax
The King's physicians and other specialists told him he would have to give up active public life and take the best possible care of himself.

Mr. King travelled home by ship early in November, 1948, landing in New York. He remained aboard on the trip and was weak and wasted on arrival.

Back home he seemed to improve, but was finally convinced that he must shake himself free of all public responsibilities to regain his health.

Then nearly 74, he drove to Government House through the bleak winter chill of Nov. 15, 1948, to resign the office of Prime Minister he had held so long.

From then on, he lived largely in retirement, reading, resting and working on his official memoirs of a career that encompassed and often dominated the first half of Canada's 20th century.

The man who was born Dec. 17, 1874, at Berlin (now Kitchener), Ont., had a lot to look back on.

His was a political career that made him Prime Minister three times, saw him launch Canada towards the welfare state with broad social legislation, saw him lead the country through the Second World War and into the atomic age as a young, maturing giant accepted as a major partner by the United States and the United Kingdom.

He began to lead Canada in 1921, a 46-year-old Prime Minister who two years before had been picked by the Liberal party from among four candidates for the party leadership left vacant by the death of Laurier. The country was bucking the problems left by its first big war.

Rev. Templeton Concludes Services At O'Leary

Over one thousand people heard the noted Evangelist, Rev.
Charles B. Templeton, Minister of The Presbyterian Church of the Covenant in Philadelphia, in his closing service of his tour of Western Prince in O'Leary Church on Friday evening, July 21. There were 700 people in the church auditorium and from 300 to 400 outside in cars, listening to the service by means of loud speakers.

The Evangelist preached a powerful sermon on "Forgiveness," and at the close of his service spoke to those who had made decisions for Christ. During his campaign in Western Prince, where he twice in Montrose Church and once each in the Alberton and O'Leary Churches.

The minister, Rev. W. G. Dickson, presided, and in a few remarks thanked the speaker and his gifted wife, who is a talented singer for their outstanding contributions during the services of the past five nights and on behalf of the Clergy and Congregations asked Rev. and Mrs. Templeton to accept as a gift, a beautiful blanket. Presentation was made by Rev. B. B. Colborne of West Cape. Prayer was offered by Rev. J. M. Sheen of Elmsdale.

Artillery of the U. S. 1st Cavalry Division has been identified in the area southwest of fallen Taejeon, where one of Sunday's major engagements with North Korean armor developed.

Despite its name, the 1st Cavalry Division is a regular infantry division, officers at Tokyo headquarters confirmed.

Hopes soared that Major-Gen.
William F. Dean, missing commanding General of the U. S. 24th Division, may yet return safely to American lines.

A dozen American stragglers reached an advanced American command post with word that Dean escaped from burning Taejeon with them last Thursday but left the party in the mountains Friday to look for more stragglers. Contrary to earlier official reports, they said Dean was not wounded.

The developing battle between Communist tanks and co-ordinated American ground and air forces was reported by Associated Press correspondents.

One, Leif Erickson, said the tanks moved up without their usual support from Communist infantry.

There had been no major infantry clash by Sunday night, Erickson said, but the Korean Reds were believed to have suffered heavy losses. Artillery from American lines and strafing planes found their hideouts in villages and mud huts east of Taejeon where they were forming for an attack.

The Communists stepped up pressure in the central front, where a drive has been under way to try to cut the main supply line running from Pusan in the southeast to Taejeon and thence on by road and rail to Yongdong on the western front.

Communist artillery and troop movements were reported near Hamchang, 35 miles northeast of Yongdong.

The U. S. 25th Infantry Division, supported by allied planes, have slowed the enemy assault in the central sector.

More fighter plane support was also in immediate sight. A 27,000-ton U. S. aircraft carrier (identified in San Francisco as the Boxer) arrived in Japan Sunday with a record load of planes.

The air force took time out from its busy ground support missions to squash an unanticipated report that 15 Russian-built Yak fighters had strafed American air base positions in Korea. A spokesman said that fifteen B-29's briefly were thought to be enemy planes, but their identity was cleared up after an alert.

Well Attended Tignish Meeting

An enthusiastic meeting of representative citizens was held in the Canadian Legion Hall at Tignish, on July 19th to make arrangements for a Red Cross Blood Donor Clinic to be held in Dalton High School on Thursday, August 3rd in the morning. The meeting was called by the local Chairman, Mr. J. J. MacIsaac who is the Manager of Tignish Co-Operative Store and was attended by representatives of the Catholic Women's League and the Tignish Branch of the Canadian Legion, Dr. J. P. O'Riordan, Medical Director of the Maritimes Depot, Canadian Red Cross Blood Transfusion Service, of Halifax, N. S. and Miss Iphigenie Arsenault, Provincial Red Cross Commissioner, were in attendance and outlined plans for organization of the forthcoming Clinic. This is the first time citizens of Tignish and the surrounding districts have been given an opportunity to donate their blood towards the free Red Cross Transfusion Service although many people in this section have benefitted by receiving transfusions.

The quota for Tignish and that area is 100 donors and every candidate was expressed that the objective would be reached. One person in each of the stores in Tignish was appointed to canvass customers from the outlying districts.

The Curran & Briggs baseball team added to their lead in the Physical Fitness League by defeating Charlottetown Falcons 7 to 1 at the C & B ball park yesterday. Merlin MacKenzie pitched brilliantly for the losers for four innings but was less effective in the latter stages of the game.
His mates didn't help his cause any by committing 6 miscues to the C & B fielders' two. Cecil Powell pitched for five innings and got credit for the win but was forced to give way to Finn in the sixth because of a sore arm.
Buck Whitlock led all batters with three hits in four trips. Of the home forces Paul Schurman hit two for two, one a triple, and Jamie Grady got two bingles in three tries. Williams' running catch of Allen's fly to left centre in the fourth inning and Des Trainer's one-hand stab of Stewart's foul fly in the fifth were the fielding gems of the game.

Que., when the news reached him.
He immediately ordered a state funeral and made plans to return to Ottawa.

Mr. King's death, he said, marked the end of a period which historians will certainly describe as "the Mackenzie King era."

He added: "Today the government of our country has lost its wisest counsellor and the people of Canada their greatest public servant."

The state funeral will be held Wednesday afternoon with services in the church where Mr. King always worshipped, St. Andrew's Presbyterian.

Tuesday, his body will be taken from Laurier House to lie in state in the hall of fame of the Parliament buildings for 24 hours preceding the funeral.

It will then be taken to Toronto by special train for burial Thursday morning in Mount Pleasant cemetery beside the graves of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John King, and his brother, Dr. J. MacDougall King.

In a public career of nearly 50 years, Mr. King left an imprint on Canadian life that only history will fully reveal. But he was a modest, lively, lonely and somewhat aloof man. His actions were unostentious.

Since Christmas, he had been in failing health and seldom left Laurier House, where for much of the time he was confined to his bed.

Last Public Appearance His last public appearance was in mid-June during the Imperial Press conference of the Empire Press Union which brought to Ottawa newspaper publishers from all parts of the Commonwealth.

Mr. King attended the state dinner given the delegates by the Canadian Government, but remained only for the pre-dinner reception, meeting all the delegates, many of whom were old friends.
It was noticed early then that he had fallen greatly and that his appearance was achieved only by great physical effort.
