against the wall, and tried to tie the wrist to it.

This, however, was not easy, the hand struggled so desperately.

However, pulling is a matter of weight rather than muscle; and the weight of the two women pulling downward overpowered the violent struggles of the man; and the mite contrived to tie the poker to the wrist, and repeat the ligatures a dozen times in a

Then the owner of the hand, who had hitherto shown violent strength, taken at a disadvantage, now showed intelligence.
Convinced that skill as well as force were against him, he ceased to struggle and became quiet.

The women contemplated their feat with flushed cheeks and sparkling eyes.

When they had feasted a reasonable time on the imprisoned hand, and two of them, true to their sex, had scrutinized a green stone upon one of the fingers, to see whether it was real or false, Nancy took them by the shoulders, and banded them good-humoredly out of the room.

She then lowered the gas and came out, and locked the room up, and put the key in her pocket.

'I'll have my supper with you,' said she.

'Come, Jenny, I'm cook; and you make the kitchen as a body could eat off it, for I expect visitors.'

'La, ma'am,' said the mite; 'he can't get out of the chimney to visit us through the street door.'

'No, girl,' said Nancy. 'But he can send a hussaband; so show her eyes and plague her art, as the play says, for of all the dirty kitchens give me hers. I never was there but once, and my slipper come off for the muck, a sticking to a body like bird lime.'

There was a knock at Nancy's street door; the little servant, full of curiosity, was for running to it on the instant. But Nancy checked her.

'Take your time,' said she. 'It is only a lodging-house keeper.'

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

North River Bridge.

DEAR SIR,—Your correspondent—Dr. J.

T. Jenkins—has called attention to a matter of much importance, and, if his valuable suggestions are acted upon, the productive capacity of the many farms lying upon the North River—above the bridge—will be materially increased, by having the bridge so reconstructed as to prevent the lands adjacent to the river from being inundated by the tidal waters of the harbor. It is easy to perceive that many acres of valuable land would be reclaimed; and, as the additional expense of having the new structure built as a dyke, with suitable tide gates, cannot be very large; and, as it did not appear that any injury would be done, it is to be hoped that the Government will take this matter into serious consideration, and so modify their plans as to have the new bridge serve the double purpose of a highway, and a dyke as well—sufficiently staunch and compact as to prevent the injury of the salt water.

Hoping that this matter may receive the attention it deserves,

I remain, yours truly,

HABITANT.

North River, March 11, 1884.

Winter Communication.

SIR,—The speeches delivered in the Senate upon this important subject are very good. Most of the information given, except that relating to a new steamer, those who study the matter, are already acquainted with. We want something more practical; the present route of the "Northern Light" has been tried long enough, we must say it is a failure. And Why? Because of the extra and unnecessary distance she has to travel, and that through the heaviest ice fields. We ask why could not the boat cross in nearly a direct line with Picton? You may urge there is no landing place, but there might be if individuals were not so selfish at Charlottetown, Summerside, Georgetown, and other places. For instance on the 27th of Feb., 1884, a sailing vessel could have crossed to Picton Island, and several other times it could have been done this winter if there had been a wharf at White Sands, Murray Harbor South, or Little Sands. The expense you may say would be too great for the Government, but what are the losses to our tradesmen and to the public in general? When necessary articles become scarce, immediately a high price is imposed upon what is left, and the inconvenience to wait for a newspaper published in the cities of St. John, or Halifax, ten days after date, are great. It is time the inhabitants of P.E. Island roused themselves and demand what they have a right to, and that is winter communication with the Mainland daily when possible. Why could not the inhabitants of Murray Harbor have a branch railway like other parts of the Island? It is not very pleasant in the depth of winter to have to drive twenty miles to a railway station before daylight.
Surely our present representatives in the Dominion Parliament might at once see to this much-needed accommodation, which is already paid for, and the people's just rights.

Yours, etc.,

A FRIEND OF THE PRESENT GOVERNMENT.
