A THREE BOTTLE COMEDY

By W. E. NORRIS

"How would you smell a rat? once and then off the paper before I could stop her," the unhappy lady reflected. "No; I must get hold of that bag of hers somehow or other if I have to kick her legs from under her as she is leaving the carriage to do it."

The fates were not cruel enough to drive Mrs. Alston to the employment of such desperate methods. When the train stopped at Northampton, Sir

Thomas jumped out, and, to her great joy, he was at once followed by Mrs. Naylor, who remarked that she wanted to speak to her maid. An opportunity like that was not to be thrown away out of pique or mere reluctance to address a young man who merited snubbing. Mrs. Alston immediately bent over toward the remaining occupant of the compartment, thrust the bottle which was not hers into his hand and said:

"Lord Arthur, put this into Mrs. Naylor's bag and fish out the one which Sir Thomas was stupid enough to give her. It belongs to me."

"Now Lord Arthur had a grudge against Mrs. Alston, and her agitation was evident. "Oh, well, I don't know about opening other people's traveling bags," said he, with provoking deliberation. "Hadn't we better wait until she comes back?"

"Certainly not! It's my medicine, and she is quite sufficiently ill bred to examine it before she hands it over. One doesn't want everybody to know what medicine one takes. Please make haste!"

"Hm! I'm not sure that I am justified in doing this," the young man observed slowly. "Bill, to oblige you, I might perhaps stretch a point. Only I shall expect my services to be recognized. What should you say they were worth, Mrs. Alston? A couple of dances at the ball, for instance?"

"Oh, ten dances—20 dances, if you like! Good gracious, here she comes! Do be quick!"

Alas, it was not in the nature of that leisurely life guardman to do things quickly. He did indeed just contrive to slip the bottle that Mrs. Alston had given him into Mrs. Naylor's bag and to withdraw the other, but there was not time—or else he pretended that there was not—to restore the latter to its owner. He popped it behind his back as Mrs. Naylor stepped in, and immediately afterward the train resumed its northward course. At the expiration of five minutes or so Mrs. Alston saw him drop a newspaper over her property and transfer both articles to his own bag. While carrying out this maneuver he gave her a slight, reassuring nod, by which she was but partially reassured.

"If only I had had the sense to keep upon good terms with him!" she reflected with tardy remorse. "It could have been done so easily too!"

Well, at all events he was not a woman; so that the hair dye was surely safer in his possession than it would have been in that of Mrs. Naylor. He did not find an opportunity of deciphering it up honorably when the travelers quitted the train—and unfortunately he did not—he would doubtless manage to do so, as they descended from the omnibus which had been sent to meet them at the station.

But the luckless lady was doomed to a prolongation of suspense, for Peaceable men don't like to carry weapons, but there are times when a weapon saves a man's life. Sensible people don't like to be always taking medicine—it is like flourishing fire-arms on every needless occasion,—but the right medicine at the right time is often a genuine life-saver.

When your constitution is over-taxed by worry or extra work, or weakened by an attack of indigestion or biliousness, or whenever your natural energies are not quite up to the mark and fail to respond to the demands upon them, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will meet the emergency promptly, and save you from dangerous or perhaps fatal illness.

It wards off disease by acting directly upon the vital organs where disease originates. It restores the liver's capacity to filter poisonous impurities out of the blood, and empowers the digestive organs to extract from the food those nourishing vitalizing elements which drive out disease germs, repair wasted tissues and build up healthy flesh and muscular force.

It is the most thoroughly scientific and effectual alternative remedy ever discovered in the whole history of medicine, and one of Dr. Pierce's most valuable contributions to Materia Medica during his thirty years service as chief consulting physician to the Truvels' Hotel and Surgical Institute of Buffalo, N. Y.

Mrs. A. I. Gibbs, of Russellville, Logan Co., Ky., writes: "I can heartily recommend your 'Golden Medical Discovery' to any one who is troubled with indigestion and torpid liver. I was so bad I could not lie on my left side and could scarcely eat anything. I had a dull aching and pain in my stomach all the time. Now it is all gone after taking one bottle of your 'Golden Medical Discovery.'"

Constipation is the commonest beginning and first cause of many serious diseases and it should always be treated with Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets used in connection with the "Discovery." These are the most perfect natural laxatives and permanently cure.

she reached her destination those officious, overhospitable Longworths must needs come tearing down the steps to welcome their guests. There they all were—tall, cruddy Mr. Longworth, with two huge hands outstretched, his comely, middle-aged spouse, who was far too fond of alluding to the circumstance that she had been at school with Mrs. Alston, and their yellow haired slip of a daughter Annie, and goodness only knows how many grinning children and hobblerheads in the background!

"You're just in time," Mrs. Longworth announced cheerfully. "We are having tea in the hall; so that you can refresh yourselves while your things are being unpacked."

The servants, of course, had seized the hand bags and had made off with them. The only thing to be done was to practice the patience recommended by Madame and be thankful that tea was not being partaken of without the removal of a gauze veil. Mrs. Alston pushed herself up, so as to conceal her fringe, took possession of an armchair close to the blazing wood fire, by which the great entrance hall was barely warmed, and kept an anxious eye upon Lord Arthur, who did not appear to think that any apology or explanation was due to her in respect of his remissness.

Some measure of consolation was in the meantime to be derived from watching the assiduity with which he placed himself at the orders of Annie Longworth, who was pouring out the tea. Annie was a mere child, and in the character of a rival would have been beneath contempt, but Mrs. Alston had ceased to be a competitor for Lord Arthur's affections, and it was amusing to note the displeasure of Mrs. Naylor, a jealous and exacting woman, whose flirtations were always conducted upon the crudest and most inartistic principles. It was, however, a matter of comparatively trifling consequence whether that lady was pleased or displeased. Mrs. Alston had much more important things to think about, and when Lord Arthur approached her with a cup of tea in one hand and a plate of small cakes in the other she took occasion to whisper to him under cover of the loud conversation which was going on all around her:

"What have you done with my bottle? I want it at once, please."

"Your bottle?" he returned composedly. "By George! I forget all about it. It's in my bag, unless my fellow has taken it out by this time. Shall I go and get it?"

"Yes; fetch it immediately, or, rather, no! Don't bring it here. It isn't a cordial to be handed round for everybody to taste. I'll tell you what you must do if you really want me to give you those two dances that you spoke of—only I thought you had quite given up caring to dance with me. You must slip up stairs as soon as you can and join me presently in the library, bringing the bottle with you. You know the geography of the house, I suppose?"

Lord Arthur signified that he did, and in a few minutes she had the satisfaction of seeing him make his way up the broad, shallow staircase. She herself contrived to edge adroitly away from her hostess, and was soon in the library—a vast, dimly lighted chamber, which, as she knew, was seldom invaded by any member of the household.

She was kept waiting a long time—so long that she had worked herself up into a fever of alarm and apprehension—before at last the door was opened and the other party to the assignation advanced toward her with leisurely steps.

"Where's the bottle?" was her first question, for indeed that was the first thing to be ascertained and the rebuke which he had earned could wait.

Instead of producing her property or replying to her query that exasperating young man raised his forefinger and shook it at her with arch reprobatation. "Oh, Mrs. Alston," said he, "this is too bad of you! You shouldn't go in for that sort of thing—you shouldn't really, you know!"

"You wretch!" cried the justly incensed lady. "How dared you examine what doesn't belong to you? No gentleman would have behaved in that way, and the very least you can do now is to keep what you have found out to yourself."

"Oh, I'll keep it to myself!" answered Lord Arthur coolly. "In fact, I may say that I have kept it to myself, and, of course, I shan't split. As for examining the bottle, that I couldn't help, because my man had taken it out of the paper, and there it was upon my dressing table as plain as a pikestaff, but I didn't think it would be right to hand the stuff over to you. You may take my word for it, Mrs. Alston, that all those expedients are a snare and a delusion."

Mrs. Alston was too infuriated to argue with him. "Go and get that bottle instantly!" said she. "When I want to be favored with your advice, I will not fail to let you know."

He remained calm and immovable. He made some remarks, which seemed to her irrelevant, about "Dutch courage" and the folly of imagining that anything save a clear head can enable man or woman to ride straight to hounds, but she was not concerned to dispute with him. When commands and entreaties alike failed, she had recourse to tears.

"Dear Lord Arthur," she sobbed, "I know I haven't treated you very well, but you can't wish to punish me so cruelly as this. Only give me my bottle and I will do anything—anything for you that you like to ask of me!"

Lord Arthur shook his head solemnly. "I foresaw this," he remarked, "and being a very soft hearted fellow I was afraid I should yield. So I determined to put temptation out of your way and my own. I can give you your bottle, Mrs. Alston, but I can't give you the liquor because I've drunk every drop of it."

"Good heavens!" gasped Mrs. Alston, sinking back into a chair. "You never did that!"

"I did, though, and I'm bound to say that it was excellent—a little sweet perhaps."

"But it's deadly poison—at least I should think it was. What in the world did you imagine that you were drinking?"

"It—it tasted like curacao," the young man answered, looking a little staggered. "I supposed that you had taken to nipping on the sly to keep your courage up."
