IF WE KNEW.

Could we but draw back the curtains
That surround each others lives,
See the naked heart and spirit,
Know what spur the action gives,
Often we should find it better,
Purer than we judge we should—
We should love each other better
If we only understood.

Could we judge all deeds by motives,
See the good and bad within,
Often we should love the sinner
All the while we loathe the sin.
Could we know the powers working
To o'erthrow integrity,
We should judge each other's errors
With more patient charity.

If we knew the cares and trials,
Knew the efforts all in vain,
And the bitter disappointment,
Understood the loss and gain,
Would the grim, external roughness
Seem, I wonder, just the same?
Would we help where now we hinder?
Would we pity where we blame?

Ah! we judge each other harshly,
Knowing not life's hidden force;
Knowing not the fount of action
Is less turbid at its source,
Seeing not amid the evil
All the golden grains of good;
Oh! we'd love each other better
If we only understood.

THE YACHT RACE REVIEWED.

The Pall Mall Gazette of Friday presumes that the Vigilant has finished her season, and reviews the races. In the seventeen races in which the yachts have competed it says "luck" has undeniably helped the Britannia more frequently, but flukes come oftenest to the cleverest skippers. The Britannia has the same crew as she carried last season, while the Vigilant has a new skipper and many new hands in her crew. Nevertheless the yachts have competed under all conditions of wind and water, and the verdict rendered must be that the Britannia has avenged the defeats sustained by the Valkyrie in America. The question arises, however, was the Valkyrie sailing her best in America, or is the Vigilant doing herself justice here? We believe the Valkyrie did not sail in her English form in America except in her final race. The Vigilant's career over here has been similar, except that she has had ample time to recover her form." The Gazette expresses the belief that the yachts will meet again in the Mediterranean next spring.

ACROSS THE OCEAN IN TWO DAYS.

A Prescott, Ont., man claims to have invented a plan by which vessels will be enabled to cross the Atlantic from Canada to England in two days, and asks the Government for the modest sum of $50,000 to assist him in demonstrating its practibility. The model he submits shows a huge metal cylinder 150 feet in diameter and 1,000 feet long. Within this, slung on an immense steel rod, hangs the ship broadside forward. The cylinder, against the face of which huge paddles are fastened, revolves on this rod, thus propelling the whole thing at the immense speed of sixty miles an hour. The cylinder is divided into water-tight compartments, and at each end of this rod is a protection for the lookout. It affords a promenade for passengers 1,000 feet long. Great resistance to wind is offered by the revolving cylinder, but that is compensated for by there being no resistance to water. Steering is done from the sides. It would be like a huge revolving barrel with the ship hung inside and not coming in contact with the water. In clear weather it would go like a greyhound. The inventor submitted his idea to a nautical expert in England, who said it violated no principle of navigation.

WEATHER HINTS.

Watch the sky for what are called "mare's tails." These appearing after clear weather show the track of the wind in the sky. A rosy sunset predicts fair weather. A red sky in the morning foretells bad weather. A grey sky in the morning means fine weather. If the first streaks of light at dawn are seen above a bank of clouds, look out for wind; if they are close to or on the horizon, the weather will be fair. In general, soft, delicate colors in the sky, with indefinite forms of clouds, mean fair wrather: gaudy, unusual colors, and hard-edged clouds mean rain, and probably wind.

A dark, gloomy, blue sky is windy; but a bright, light blue sky indicates fine weather. Generally, the softer clouds look, the less wind (but perhaps more rain) may be expected; and the harder, more "greasy," rolled, tufted, or ragged, the stronger the coming wind will prove.

A bright yellow sky at sunset pressages wind; a pale yellow, wet; orange or copper-colored, wind and rain.

These are some of the most important points about weather which have been set down in the books by old and experienced sailormen. If the young yachtsmen will bear them in mind, and at the same time keep an eye on his instruments, he will not often be taken unawares by bad weather.

CURED TO STAY.

DR. E. A. ROSE DISAPPOINTS THE DOUBTERS—HE ONCE HAD DIABETES BUT HAS IT NO MORE—ATTENDING TO HIS BIG PRACTICE.

Portland, Ont., Aug. 20.—The account which appeared in many Canadian papers a few months ago of Dr. E. A. Rose having been cured of diabetds by Dodd's Kidney Pills, attracted widespread attention at the time. Many doubters, though, protested that the cure was not a permanent one. The best proof that these doubters were wrong is the fact that for a year back Dr. Rose has been attending to his practice, which was always a large one, in this village and the surrounding country, and has never had any return of the disease. His health is first-class and the doctor is not compelled to take any of the precautions as to diet or otherwise, that are always orderse for people threatened or troubles with diabetes.

The New York World started a discussion on suicide, and among others who gave opinions was Ingersoll, the well-known agnostic. He took the view that suicide was a commendable way of escaping from the cares of life, and since then there has been a marked increase in the number of suicides. As a power for evil Ingersoll is still eminent.

Plain Living and High Thinking.

The two go together. But high living cannot be associated with high thinking. It utterly deranges the system and makes mental labor of any kind an effort. It leads to dyspepsia, which, however, may be completely cured, as it has been in hundreds of cases, by a systematic course of Hawker's nerve and stomach tonic and Hawker's liver pills. They are sold by all druggists.

It is now said that British Government officials are watching carefully all firms that are fitting out ships and manufacturing ammunition. Many firms which have been warned against working for either Japan or China have denied invariably that they intended to undermine the Government's policy. Those who acknowledged that they were dealing in materials or vessels of war protested invariably that the materials and vessels were to be sent to South American countries. In hardly a case has a firm stopped its suspected activity on account of the Government's warning.

The Colonial Secretary has forwarded to the Governor-General of Canada, under date of Aug. 8th, copies of Her Majesty's proclamation of neutrality on the occasion of war between China and Japan, together with the copy of the letter from the foreign office embodying the rules which Her Majesty has directed to be observed on the same occasion. Lord Ripon says: I have to request that you will cause both documents to be immediately published throughout the colony under your government and that you will not fail to conform to Her Majesty's commands. The documents appear in extenso in tomorrow's Canada Gazette.

THE MAN IN THE IRON MASK.

The Most Recent "Discovery" of This Mysterious Personage.

There are some historic mysteries that excite increasing interest the more the attempts to solve them are baffled. The last word has not yet been spoken in regard to the authorship of the celebrated letters of Junius. Notwithstanding the concurrence of Macaulay, Sir James Mackintosh, De Quincey and other eminent critics in fixing "Junius" upon Sir Philip Francis, the claim of France has been well nigh abandoned in recent years. Aside from certain facts and dates that go to overthrow the claim of Francis, his identity with "Junius" can be maintained only at the complete sacrifice of his character; and Francis was by no means a bad man.

Another historic riddle which for nearly two hundred years has defeated the guesses of the curious is the Man in the Iron Mask, who was imprisoned for so many years in the Bastile. The Duke of Monmouth; Fouquet, ex-Minister of Louis XIV; and Count Er'cole Antonio Matthioli, the Italian traitor and spy; Oldenburg, the poison mixer, and several other personages, have in turn worn the mask of iron in various accounts and traditions. But the latest and apparently a successful attempt to discover the secret has been made by Emile Bargand and Bazieres in a work entitled "Le Masque de Fer, a Revelation of the Cipher Correspondence of Louis XIV." The authors fell upon their discovery in a curious way when editing the correspondence of the famous Marshal Catinat. The Marshal had preserved only his papers relating to the campaign of 1686, but among these were accidentally saved two letters in cipher, dated July 8 and 9, 1691. Bazieres found the key to the cipher, and found also, to his great surprise, that it solved the mystery of the Iron Mask.

Louis XIV at the period in question was at war with half of Europe, and Marshal Catinat, in command of the French, confronted Prince Eugene in Northern Italy. After several successes of Catinat, Louis set his heart on the capture of Cuneo, in Savoy, and gave orders for its immediate investment. The siege operations were intrusted to a veteran campaigner, Lieutenant General Vivien Labbe, Seigneur de Bulonde. Instead of taking the fortress, Bulonde was completely routed by Eugene, and retreated with the loss of his artillery and munitions of war. This disaster in the midst of a career of victory deeply incensed Louis, who attributed it to the cowardly conduct of his General. In the cipher letters Louvois, the Minister of War, tells Marshal Catinat that the King is greatly offended at the behavior of Bulonde in abandoning the siege of Cuneo, and orders that he be arrested and conveyed to the neighboring citadel of Pignerol. Minute orders were given at the same time concerning the treatment of the distinguished prisoner. He was to be locked in a cell of the citadel at night, but to be permitted to promenade the walls by day.

Should this be the true solution of the mystery it explains the command of Louis XIV. to provide a prisoner by day with a mask. The correctness of the key to the cipher of the year 1691 is established by the later discovery of a letter (not in cipher) of Louvois to Catinat on the same subject and corresponding with the cipher dispatch. Whether these revelations agree with the subsequent career of Bulonde remains to be determined. The Mask, whoever he may have been, was removed to the Bastile in 1698. The authors describe him from the accounts of contemporary observers as a man of fine presence, with white hair. Although closely guarded, he was treated with great respect, and sat at the table with the governor of the prison. All this better fits Bulonde than little Matthioli, who has been regarded by some investigators as the wearer of the Iron Mask. For the rest, the mask was not of iron, but of black velvet, and was designed merely to prevent his recognition. Voltaire, who first spoke of the Man in the Iron Mask, says he was an eminent personage. Was that personage Count Vivien Labbe Bulonde? The evidence points strongly in his direction.—Philadelphia Record.

Odd Effect of a Strike.

Among the greatest sufferers by the cab strike are the parliamentary pigeons in New Palace Yard, which always found an abundant supply of corn from the nose-bags of the horses on the cab-rank at the entrance of the House of Commons. For years the spot has been, during the parliamentary season, a happy hunting ground for hundreds of these birds. They never hang around the doors of the House of Lords. Peers generally walk to parliament, or if they drive it is invariably in their own carriages, the horses of which would disdain to eat in public.

No corn is ever to be found at the Peers' entrance; therefore it is that the pigeons all flock to the House of Commons. But since the commencement of the strike the birds have become quite demoralized. They know it is not the recess, because the light on the clock tower is there at night, and they cannot make out what has become of their friends the cabmen, the horses and the corn.

For some days their lamentable "cooing" from the pangs of hunger was distressing to hear, until the happy idea came to Superintendent Horsley to institute a kind of pigeons' soup-kitchen, or free breakfast table, every morning. A plentiful supply of crumbs and corn is scattered on the ground, and the pigeons show their gratitude by flapping their wings and cooing in the major key. The superintendent's charitable exertions are admirably supported by the members of the police force on duty at the House of Commons.—London Telegraph.

Elections in Greece.

In Greece elections are held in churches on Sunday. In the church to which I succeeded in gaining access on one election day there were ranged around the walls forty-two boxes, that being the number of candidates to be voted for. These boxes were about the size and shape of a cracker box, one-half painted white, with 'Yes' on them, and the other half black, with 'No' on them. Beside each box stood a representative of the candidate, and over the box was hung the candidate's picture. Each voter, as he entered the church, had his name registered and a check given him. In passing around the church the voter is given a bullet, or vote, by the representative standing beside the box of each candidate. Negative votes, as well as affirmative, must be cast, that is, if a voter objects to a candidate he must cast a negative bullet. Great care is exercised by the representatives of the candidates that there is no stuffing of the ballot boxes.—New York Tribune.
