INDIRECT LIGHTING — The walls in the building are not plastered except those dividing the individual classrooms and the ceilings are left bare.

The classroom floors are constructed of conglomerate but the corridors are made of terrazzo. The new High School consists of 24 classrooms, principal's and teachers' rooms, lunch room, library, health department, bus driver room, gymnasium, washrooms and sufficient space provided for laboratories.

Most of the rooms in the building are centered around 1,000 sq. ft. a courtyard which permits light to enter the various rooms and corridors which not only serves as a natural source of light for the building but adds to the beauty of the building itself.

THE LOCKERS, which are located in the main corridors, are set into the wall which gives students ample room for changing classes.

HOT LUNCH — It is believed that this is the first high school here to have a hot lunch program. Meals will be prepared by "Dutchie" Teleman Erickson and staff of three. A cafeteria which is located west side of the gymnasium has a seating capacity of 200.

Beside the regular courses given in high school, the rural regional has four special courses supplementary to the regular program. These special courses are music appreciation, art, elocution and Latin.

There are 20 Island teachers including the principal, Frank J. Costello. Pupils are transported to and from school by 13 passenger buses which are capable of carrying 60 pupils each and two larger passenger buses, which can handle 48 passengers each.

Nasser Bristles Over W. German Offer To Israel — CAIRO (AP)—President Nasser of the United Arab Republic, bristling over West Germany's offer to establish full diplomatic relations with Israel, denounced the Bonn government Monday as "liars," "deceivers" and "the world's worst imperialists."

Hitchhiker Reprimanded

Stiff fines face persons convicted in the future of hitchhiking. Magistrate A. J. Haslam, QC, told a student accused of the charge in city police court yesterday.

The student, charged with hitchhiking on Elm Avenue, was given a severe reprimand by the magistrate.

Patrick DesRoches of Charlottetown was fined $50 and costs for theft under $50 value from the Co-op. Lester P. O'Donnell, counsel for the accused said the value of articles taken was only one dollar, but added that he realized such occurrences were a nuisance to the store.

James Arnold Moore and Paul Denner, Charlottetown, were each fined $5 and costs for going through stop signs while Layton Thompson, North Wiltshire, was fined $15 and costs for speeding on Longworth Avenue.

On a charge of break, entry and theft Harold Douglas Hagan, Charlottetown, was remanded to Friday. He was represented by Gordon Tweedy. A charge of impaired driving brought Margaret MacDonald, Charlottetown, a fine of $125. A vagrant was sentenced to a fine of $20 or 20 days and two men charged with being drunk and incapable were fined $20 each.

By LORNE YEO. Is it the tip necessary? It is if you want to get good service. A proper tip will give you attentive service every time you visit a restaurant.

In a recent interview with waitresses of some of Charlottetown's most popular restaurants, I concluded two things. The first is that Prince Edward Islanders are not heavy tippers. In fact, Islanders generally do not tip at all.

The second conclusion is a courteous customer gets quicker, more efficient service than a less courteous one. A waitress employed for five years with a Charlottetown restaurant stated she usually gets during the summer months. These tips are usually left by people vacationing on the island and not the residents of Prince Edward Island themselves.

In the winter months, when restaurants are less frequented, average tips per day would only amount to $2 at the most, and the majority of these tips are left by Islanders.

TAKE TIP FOR GRANTED — Another restaurant employee said some people expect a waitress to make three or four unnecessary trips for the same customer who could order everything in one or two trips. It seems to be a tendency for some people to take a waitress for granted. Waitresses will be the first people to tell you they are human beings, not machines.

Tipping tends to influence service. Admittedly, human nature being what it is, a known tipper will probably get a little better service from his waitress. This does not mean that a waitress will not give you good service if you are not in the habit of leaving tips, but she will make the little extra effort to make your meal more enjoyable if you're the tipping type.

ON LOOKOUT — Waitresses tend to look for the regular customers who tip. Some claim they can spot a tipping customer even if they haven't seen that person before. Some even go so far as to say they can tell what a regular customer will eat before they take the order. Not everybody will tip and everybody will not eat the same food; however, there seems to be a relationship existing between tippers and the type of food they eat.

However, after carrying luggage and answering room service, 30 cents is considered proper. Waiters are also included in the tipping world. My favourite barber said that generally only three out of every 100 customers may tip in the run of a day. This would only amount to about 30 cents. The local barber works an approximately 65 percent commission and he depends on the regular customer, who probably doesn't tip, rather than the less frequent customer who has the habit of tipping.

A smart haircut adds to the appearance, and if you are impressed, others will be too, but your barber know this by leaving a little extra next time. Newspaper delivery boys generally do not get tipped. They have regular customers who show their gratitude at Christmas time by giving a bonus. The newsboy, who has no regular route, will get tipped because he sells to the general public from the street corners and among moving crowds of shoppers.

However, don't go spending that 'tip' money before you receive it, you could be badly disappointed.

P.E.I.'s Most Modern School Officially Opens

Five hundred and four students from Prince Edward Island attend the most modern high school on the Island.

This is the recently-completed Charlottetown Rural Regional High School located outside the city limits west of the Malpeque Highway which officially became an integral part of the educational system of Prince Edward Island at the official opening last evening.

The school was erected to serve high school students from an area covering a radius of some 15 miles from the school, with the exception of those residing in Charlottetown, who are already accommodated in Birchwood and Queen Charlotte high schools.

Currently only grades nine and 10 are being taught, but it is expected that after the Prince of Wales College Act has been proclaimed the curriculum will be extended to cover grades 11 and 12.

The actual ground area is 21,260 square feet with a total floor area of 42,400 square feet. The gymnasium alone has a floor space of 5,520.

Russians See Yanks Planning To Widen Southeast Asia War

LONDON (AP) — The Russians expressed belief that the landing of U.S. marines in South Vietnam Monday shows Washington has decided to widen the war. And some West Europeans agreed with that assessment, presented by the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia.

"A new phase in the aggressive policy of the U.S.A. in South Viet Nam" was Izvestia's label for the air-sea operation to land some 3,500 marines. "American imperialism again stands before the peoples as an impudent aggressor," the newspaper said. "The Pentagon has taken this provocative step, crudely violating the demands of peace-loving humanity."

The Paris Gaullist newspaper Nation reflected European nervousness. It said the landing is a new step in "the policy of escalation." In Britain, The Guardian suggested the landing would provide propaganda for the Communist Viet Cong guerrillas in South Viet Nam.

Leaders of the left wing of Britain's ruling Labor Party joined in the outcry. Especially vehement was Keesi Zilliacus, chief of a group of 45 House of Commons members who have demanded that Prime Minister Wilson cease supporting American policy in Viet Nam.

London's morning Daily Telegraph likened the marine operation to Britain's defence of Malaysia against Indonesia. It said the Kremlin's ambassador in Kryn handed a note to the Italian government protesting "American aggression" and calling on Italy—an ally of the U.S. in NATO—to take a stand in the Viet Nam crisis.

There was no immediate word of similar notes being handed to other NATO countries. London's morning Daily Telegraph likened the marine operation to Britain's defence of Malaysia against Indonesia.
