HASZARD'S GAZETTE.

Saturday, April 15, 1854.

We have noticed a series of articles in the Examiner headed "The New Cabinet," in which there has been an attempt on the part of the editor to get up a sort of tableaux vivants — of course, in the caricature style—of the members of the new Executive Council, and we should have passed them over with the contempt that they deserve—for we have long since known the little credit that is to be attached to the assertions of the proprietor and editor of the Examiner — were it not that it has been our good fortune to fall in with a picture, by the same hand, of the second of those who are thus honored, under the title of "The Leader," — not "the counterfeit presentment of two brothers," but of the same identical person, not much above six years since, and it is amusing to observe what a difference there is between the two likenesses, drawn and painted by the same hand, and after the life. Ludicrous and provocative of laughter as the thing is, it is nevertheless attended with a degree of disgust and abhorrence amounting to loathing, at witnessing the utter want of principle and disregard of the common decencies and amenities of life displayed by the author of these articles. We hear a great deal of the versatility and venality of lawyers, of their saying one thing at one time, and turning round and asserting the very reverse at another, as they are retained; but in these cases the lawyer is neither deceived himself nor does he deceive others. He openly states, that he is of counsel for plaintiff or defendant, and that he is instructed to put his client's case before the court and jury, and trusts to substantiate it by evidence, by which last the case is or ought to be decided. Very different, however, is the position in which the editor of a leading journal is placed. He is the historian of the day; and though he may be the advocate of a party, and may reasonably be supposed to take a one-sided view of the facts, as they pass before him, still he is bound to keep to the rule laid down by Cicero, "not to dare to say anything that is false, and not to be afraid to say anything that is true." We fear, however, that the Honorable Editor of the Examiner has either never heard of Cicero's definition of the duty of an historian, or conceives it to be a most heathenish doctrine; for, generally speaking, his practice is the very reverse,—for he dares to say everything that is false, and is extremely reluctant to say anything that is true, if it in the least makes for his opponent. There is another saying, fully as old as the times of the Roman orator, and so well esteemed as to become an English proverb, intimating that those who deal in fiction should have good memories. It is extremely awkward to have one's own previous sayings and writings on former occasions quoted in contradiction to those made at a more recent period; but it is a circumstance that often occurs in the career of men of the character of the editor of the Examiner. In 1847, when the Hon. Mr. Holl was appointed to a seat in the Executive Council, the appointment was thus characterised in that journal :—

"The Honorable John Myrie Holl was, on Tuesday last, sworn in a Member of the Executive Council, in the room of the Honorable John Brecken, deceased.

"Mr Holl is likewise a member of the Legislative Council, and has often distinguished himself in that Body, by his active and well educated mind, and by his liberal and statesman-like principles. His standing and respectability are sufficiently well known to preclude the necessity of remark on our part, or cavil on that of our opponents."

It was the interest, at that time, of those with whom Mr. Whelan was connected, to endeavor to attach Mr. Holl to their party, and to secure the aid of his talents and influence in the Legislative Council; and the editor for once felt the necessity of adhering to the truth. He could not have drawn a more correct portrait of the hon. gentleman; and it is with much pleasure we rescue it from the oblivion into which it was fast descending, and present it to our readers as equally applicable to the same gentleman on his reappointment to the Executive Council in 1854. How the writer of the above paragraph could, only a few days since, make the following statement concerning the same person, will elicit some surprise in those who are not acquainted with the lengths to which party spirit, unrestrained by principle, will carry their possessor :—

"Mr. Holl has been many years in the Legislative Council—having been placed there shortly after his arrival from England, not because he is a man possessed of brilliant abilities or extensive influence in the country, but because, we believe, he was known to entertain at the time of his appointment opinons favourable to the party then dominant and to the proprietary class—sorely menaced at that time by the Escheators,—and to be well disposed to promote the interests of the proprietors was an infallible guarantee that he would not turn his back upon the designs of the family compact who held the reins of office. Of Mr. Holl's antecedents before his arrival in the Colony, we have no authentic information. We are informed, however, that his credentials of character to Sir Charles Fitzroy—the Lieut. Governor of the Colony at the time of his arrival—were drawn up by a Metropolitan Tailor of some repute, and that the honorable gentleman's family, or some of them at least, were in one way or other, at no distant period, connected with the honorable and ancient trade of habit making. A little wealth, however—whether acquired in this or any other way is of no consequence now—enabled Mr. Holl to assume all the airs, all the pride and pomposity of a little Colonial aristocrat, who worships nothing so devoutly as a balance at his banker's."

We will leave our readers a little time to compare the two, and to reflect on the credit due to the assertions of a person capable of acting thus. We have not done with Mr. Whelan yet, nor with the rescued Examiner of 1847, but reserve them for a future number.

The shew of Meat in the Market of to-day, is beyond all comparison, the finest we have ever witnessed. Want of time, prevents our doing justice to the subject—to all an interesting one—and for this reason we shall postpone it to our next issue.

The Rev. Mr. Sutherland will preach in the Temperance Hall on Sabbath first, April 16th, at 11 o'clock, at 3, and half-past six, in the evening.

The Reporter has furnished us with a summary of the proceedings in the Assembly up to Thursday night, which we are unable to publish in this issue.

Died,

Yesterday, Elizabeth, wife of Mr. Thomas Walsh, formerly of York River Ferry, aged 72 years. She was a very charitable and benevolent woman, and has left a large circle of relatives and friends to lament her loss. She was a native of River John, N.S., and emigrated to this Island in 1806. The funeral will take place to-morrow at 3 o'clock from her sons residence (Capt. John Walsh's). When friends and acquaintances are requested to attend.

To the Editor of Haszard's Gazette.

Sir,—Allow me to state, in answer to the Hon. Mr. Hensley's charge of making an annonymous and personal attack on him in the remark made by me on his speech on Savings Banks, that nothing was further from my wishes or intention than to attack any one.

My letter in your paper of the 5th April, was written in defence of the institution of Savings Banks, so generally and beneficially established in Scotland, and if I made observations in disparagement of his speech, they were made necessarily, consequent on the subject, and certainly were not meant as a personal attack on him, which I could have no possible motive in making, and which I utterly disclaim.

I shall offer only one observation on his explanation—Had the hon. gentleman applied a little of that modesty to himself which he so gracefully lavishes on me, and given, as quotations from Lawson, that part of his speech which is reported as delivered of his own knowledge, he would have enabled me at once to apply to his author those remarks which he is pleased to construe as personal to himself, for he could hardly have suspected me to detect the plagiarism.

To prevent me being charged with another annonymous attack on my hon. friend, if he will still allow me to call him so, I subscribe myself

W——w.

Falconwood, 14th April.

If Lawson's Book on Banking is as far voide of the truth generally, as the quotations referred to, the following lines from Burns may be well applied to it :

"Some Books are lies, frae end to end,
While some great lies were never penned."
