Canadian Consumer News

We may not be credited with the stern thrift such as the average European housewife has practiced for generations, but many more Canadian women than you think are thrifty housewives. It's thrift to know what is your money's best buy and to know just what you want is the best possible approach to getting value. In this country of ours we have freedom of choice, we may look around at leisure and see what the stores have to offer and at what price. The Canadian Association of Consumers aims to help you make a more intelligent choice in your buying. Our income costs too much in work to be thrown around carelessly and we women who handle such a large percentage of the family income must smarten up and learn what is our money's best buy.

In the last Consumer bulletin we have some good advice and information on eggs and I am going to quote it here:

—That some consumers always insist on the largest size of eggs because they think they are a better buy?

—That the Poultry Products Institute of Canada Inc. advises that large eggs averaging 24 ounces to the dozen are no more economical than medium eggs of the same grades averaging 21 ounces to the dozen providing the medium eggs are one-eighth cheaper in price?

—That small eggs averaging 18 ounces per dozen are as economical as large eggs providing the price is at least one-quarter cheaper than the large eggs?

Mr. Fred Nash of the Federal Dept. of Agriculture, Poultry Division, who spoke to us at our May meeting of C. A. C. told us that any time a customer is not satisfied with a carton of eggs marked Grade A (either large, small or medium) she should take them back to the retailer and if he cannot make satisfactory redress, take them to his (Mr. Nash's) office and the men there will be glad to check them over to make sure the consumer is satisfied.

The day is past when we must put our "beats" aside and let them simmer by themselves, but we must take the initiative—

If the consumer buys intelligently, knowing what she wants and seeing to it that she gets fair value for her money, increased efficiency in production and distribution will result which should in the long run reduce the price of consumer goods.

Are you satisfied with the way our eggs are graded on Prince Edward Island? Are you satisfied that the producers are getting a fair price for their eggs compared with what we city consumers are paying for them?

Do you ever wonder when you see the price quotations why it takes so long to have the consumer price adjusted when the price to the farmer drops, but how quickly it is adjusted when the price goes up?

Evidently the stock on hand must be cleaned up before the consumer benefits on a lower price, but does this system work the same when the price goes up?

The National President of the Canadian Association of Consumers is slated to visit us in about two weeks time and I do hope as many as possible will be on hand to hear this brilliant Canadian woman. The date and place of the meeting will be advertised so please watch for it.

C. A. C. is helping you to help yourself and if you appreciate its effort your membership would be welcomed.

DOROTHY DIX'S COLUMN- Companionship Threatened

One Of Two Girls, Long Friends, Takes Dislike To Other's Mate

DEAR MISS DIX: This problem involves two lifelong friendships, so I hope you can offer some advice to solve them. My girl friend and I recently married two young men who had also been friends for many years. We were all pleased with the arrangement. My husband, Garry, and I thought we had the beginning of a pleasant social life. Lo and behold, however, Edith, my friend, suddenly took a terrific dislike to Garry, and is highly disturbed whenever the two men are together. She insists they are discussing her personal affairs, when nothing could be further from their minds. We have now reached the point where interfamily visits are matters of tension, instead of relaxation. Edith's husband seems afraid to be with us. He never calls my husband for lunch anymore, and almost seems to avoid him when they do meet accidentally. Have you any suggestions?

ANSWER: Time, that good old healer of wounds, will undoubtedly bring a solution—if you have the patience to wait. Edith simply has never learned to share. Infatuation is possessive. Anything that belongs to her must be hers entirely and exclusively. She looks upon her husband as a child does a favorite doll, and since he is HERE, no one else can snatch him for a moment. As time marches on, she may have the good fortune to see the error of her ways, to realize that her type of emotional greed repels, rather than helps, a man. When trouble enters the home, as it is certain to do, she'll have a great need for friends, since she is not the type to bear misfortune alone.

In the meantime, if you can possibly get to her and point out how dangerously she is living, some sense may percolate through her warped consciousness. Involved in an unhappy marriage, Edith's mind is bound to seek sympathy elsewhere, sooner or later.

DEAR MISS DIX: I have a friend who is married, has two children and is running around with a man who is also married and a father. It's terrible to see how they are disgracing their children. They don't sneak around, but meet quite openly. This has been going on for about five years. Can anything be done to bring them to their senses?

ANSWER: If anything is to be done, it must be done by the unfortunate husband or wife. Outsiders can do little in such matters. As the man and woman aren't even trying to be furtive about the affair, it can be no secret from their spouses, who should take the necessary steps to protect their respective children.

How Can I!!! By Anne Ashley

Q. How can I remove glue or mullage spots from non-washable materials?

A. Sponge the spot with water, then with a ten-per-cent solution of acetic acid (or vinegar).

Q. What can I do about white marks on my dining room table, caused by hot dishes?

A. Try rubbing lightly with a cloth dampened with camphor oil, peppermint oil or turpentine.

Q. How can I make laundered ribbons look like new?

A. After laundering dip the ribbons into gum arabic or gum tragacanth solution, and stretch them to dry over a smooth surface, such as the edge of the bathtub. Ribbons stretched this way do not have to be ironed.

BANTHINE GIVES SUCH QUICK RELIEF IN STOMACH AND PEPTIC ULCER

Physicians tell us that over 75 per cent of their patients consult them because they are in pain and wish speedy relief.

Two of the commonest ailments of mankind are arthritis and stomach ulcer and, fortunately, physicians have drugs that can give relief. In the case of arthritis, the two new wonder drugs, cortisone and ACTH give relief, and for stomach ulcer any food or the old-fashioned baking soda give relief from pain.

A new drug for relief of pain of stomach ulcer that is receiving much publicity is Banthine, a patient being able to get relief in a very short time.

However, your physician will tell you that while the patient wants relief from his pain immediately, this quick relief often masks or hides the cause of the pain and it may take some time and investigation to find what is the underlying cause or causes of the symptoms.

In the Journal of the American Medical Association, Dr. Paul Hecht, of Denmark, and his colleagues report the effect of the drug Banthine in the treatment of 34 patients, 29 with stomach ulcer and 5 with duodenal ulcer (first part of the small intestine into which the stomach empties its contents). Their symptoms lasted at least two years and all of them had already had at least one course of treatment without becoming free of their symptoms. In fact, they were considered ready for operation as a last resort. With a dose of 50 mg. of Banthine four times daily, freedom from pain was soon achieved, notably freedom from both hunger and pain. After three months, two-thirds of these patients were still free from pain and one-third showed healing of the ulcer by roentgen.

But after a year only one-third were still free from pain and only one-fifth showed healing by roentgen. During the same year, 10 of

Modern Etiquette By Roberta Leo

Q. When taking a girl to a night club, should a man escort her first to her table before excusing himself to go to the men's room and "brush up"?

ELLEN'S DIARY By An Island Farmer's Wife

It will be a strange dusk that comes in from the hills this evening, one sober and full of mystery, somewhat frightening to those who are young. The sun himself as he descended the golden stairway which takes him to his rest, did he not smile solemnly and nod knowingly in token of queer happenings to come? And did not his beams of today scurry home at a sign to the west, fast, without so much as one look behind? Hastening to be safe before that peculiar air of eeriness should take over the things of earth?

Last evening, was it not? they had lingered a while as if loath to go playing last games in western windows, forgetting brightly in nooks of fields, skimming gleefully over the surface of that wide pool of stream beyond Sam's Bridge. But exactly on time to day they scampered home at a first summons from their father. Old Sol. To go to bed somewhere back of the gates of the afterglow, that in clouds of strange shapes and colors, violet and scarlet, deep purple and smoky-flame moved quietly away from the sunset.

There presently dark-cloaked witches will ride tonight, sharp-chinned figures of femininity, on dark straw besoms, on this their one festive night of the year.

"You'd think they'd take off now on a vacuum cleaner" James suggested with a broad smile to Gage one evening.

But no—on this night, old customs will prevail. On brooms as always these ladies of the Hallowe'en will ride high over houses and those trees where in the moonless dark, perched on a limb, an owl will look with round eyes at the sight and nod and smile, pleased with it all.

A black cat on furtive mission will slip by you into the shadow of lane, or roadway. It was a feline creature, was it not? Or maybe of the little folk of Hallowe'en: a goblin, a pixy, a gnome, a brownie, an elf in the flesh an echo of its laughter drifting back to you where you stand. And that sound a bit gruesome? Is THAT the wind? Last night's was not like that. It chuckled happily but this one threatens...what? Some mysterious happening to come, half-good, half-bad.

And safe within walls shall the young join in the practices of tonight's sorcery—the lassies seeking to read their fortunes in symbols? In the fall of an apple peeling, in roasting seeds, in the light, safe, but if required to enter a dark

Candied Apples For Hallowe'en

Hallowe'en is always a night for gaiety and parties for the youngsters! And for this bewitching time there are the much-enjoyed foods to go with the fun of the evening. One of the most colorful and easy-to-make novelty food is apple-on-a-stick. They are especially good at this time of year when red, juicy apples are available in most island stores. So, here is the recipe for—

APPLES-ON-A-STICK

Two cups sugar, 1/2 cup light corn syrup, 3/4 cup water, 12 apples, 12 skewers, red coloring, few drops flavoring oil.

Select well-flavored red apples. Wash thoroughly and insert skewers in the blossom end.

Put sugar, corn syrup and water into a saucepan and cook, stirring until sugar is dissolved. Continue cooking, without stirring until temperature of 300 degrees is reached. Any sugar crystals thrown on the sides of the pan should be washed away with a wet cloth. Cooking should be slow so that syrup will not darken.

Remove syrup from fire and set the saucepan into boiling water so the syrup will not cool and thicken. Add enough coloring to make the syrup a bright red. Add flavoring oil; peppermint, clove or cinnamon may be used. Holding the apple by the skewer, plunge it into the hot syrup, drawing it out quickly and twisting it until the syrup runs down to the stick and spreads smoothly over the apple. Stand the skewer in a small rack or vase so the apple does not touch any thing while hardening. A flat bottom can be made by putting the apple in a bowl or cup, where only the bottom touches. Rapid dipping is necessary or the syrup will become too stiff for coating. Make plenty!

Beautifully Horrible

—This spine-tingling hairdo and make-up is guaranteed to make you the Ghoul Friend of the Sorcerer's Apprentice at Hallowe'en. Buy a costume wig, place it on your head backward and trim, not too neatly, just below your eye-line. Paint eyes on your cheeks and you'll be—(ugh)—bewitching.
