Isaiah Horne's Famous Remedies.

MR ISAIAH HORNE.
Dear Sir, My son strained the muscles of his arm some time ago, and suffered violent pain until treated with a rubbing of your "Age Discovery," when gave relief at once. Also my other son struck his knee against a log and it pained him so that he could not walk. He got out of bed and rubbed his knee with the remedy and it set up and was all right in the morning. I think it a grand treatment.
Yours truly,
WILLIAM NEIL,
Rustico Road.
Mrs Mary Webster, of Bay Fortune, who for ten years past has been lame with Rheumatism, reports to Mr. Horne that she is now cured and her complaint by using his Rheumatism Cure. W. N. August.

Tired but Sleepless

Is a condition which gradually wears away the strength. Let the blood be purified and enriched by Hood's Sarsaparilla and this condition will cease.
"Two or three years I was subject to poor spells. I always felt tired, could not sleep at night and the little I could eat did not do me any good. I read about Hood's Sarsaparilla and decided to try it. Before I had finished two bottles I began to feel better and in a short time I felt all right and had gained 21 pounds in weight. I am stronger and healthier than I have ever been in my life." JOHN W. COUGHLIN, Wallaceburg, Ontario.

MARVELS OF THE IDIOSCOPE.

Unlimited Range of Usefulness in Professor Latham's Invention.
Idioscope is one of the wonders of the age. It is as marvelous to-day as the telescope, the microscope and the kinoscope combined would have been a quarter of a century ago.
It is the invention of Woodville Latham, a Mississippian by birth, who has been known as a scientific genius as a man of the highest order of attainments. He held the chair of physics and chemistry in the University of Mississippi, and has held various other positions in different parts of the world. He has always been an investigator and experimenter, and many of the most useful inventions in everyday life originated with him.
The idioscope is his crowning achievement. Its possibilities are beyond all computation. In its present stage of development it reproduces all moving objects and their every motion with absolute fidelity. No motion of living objects is too swift for its lightning-like powers of reproduction. It consists of two instruments—the idioscope, which is composed of taking 120 pictures, perfectly, in a second, or 7.200 a minute, and the idioscope, which projects them, life sized.
It will take a great horse race, with every movement of horses, jockeys, judges, and the crowds on the grand stand and field, so that the whole race is absorbed in the eye of the spectator as distinctly and vividly as if he were on the ground.
It will give a prize fight, with every movement and look of the fighters. So that you can see the crowd of lookers-on as true as life, as if the whole were reflected in a vast mirror. Every feint and blow, every dodge and clinch, every movement of the referee, and every wave of the towels and fans of the seconds are absolutely true to life. Every gesture and glance of the looker-on, and every puff of smoke from his cigar is exactly reproduced. So everybody can now attend a prize fight without any real attendance.
The idioscope will exactly reproduce an ocean scene, giving the motion of every wave from the sky to the forms far out at sea till it breaks in spray and foam upon the shore, with every movement of every vessel in sight and of every person on board.
It will take two flying birds, or two hundred from the time they come in sight until they disappear, reproducing every motion of every feather in their wings and on their bodies. This can be thrown upon the screen so slowly that the whole philosophy of flying birds can be studied at leisure.
It will take any walking upon a pane of glass, and project it upon the screen, magnified, if need be, a million times, so that every movement of the foot and every step of the air-pump legs and feet can be examined.
Instances of its wonderful powers and possibilities might be multiplied to fill columns of space; but it may all be briefly summed up by saying that there is no object or motion on earth, in air, or sea, that it is not capable of reproducing absolutely true to life. So that you can see the world as it is, such as it is, and stand in regard to love, we touch the essential point of her dissimilarity to the woman of the past. If a vein of romance runs through her and the modern woman is often romantic enough to be never sentimental—love is still in her estimation the best thing in life. Bearing, nevertheless, about the same relation to it as a fanatic does to an opera. To her it is a luxury, inseparable though delightful, bringing with it the keenest of human sensations and the most ephemeral. And this perception of the poignancy and the evanescence of sexual affection lies at the very gate of desire, at once quickening it and quenching it.
But that sublime faith in love which has been a living spirit in the soul of "Eve throughout the ages," has gone down before the eyes that are at last unshaded and the mind whose perceptions have been widened by education into seeing life steadily and seeing it whole. In the love of the modern woman there is no such thing as a passion. Even at white heat she has never fair to cohere a son-bonheur. For the difficulty of believing in her lover, which wrings the heart of Marianne and her sisters, has vanished before the much greater difficulty of believing in herself.
As a matter of fact, the instincts of fidelity are not in her. She is not like her grandmother, a fixed quantity, in whom the prepossessions of youth depended as the years passed. In the good old days life moved on laden feet and love kept pace with it. A girl then embarked on her first passion with the firm conviction that it was going to last her life time, and as a result it frequently did. To her she was practically the same creature as at 20, and the same love sufficed for both decades. She was faithful by nature as well as by obligation, and knew as little about her own creature as a cat does about its growth. Love was to her merely the ante-chamber to marriage, and this idea of pursuing it for its own sake never entered her mind. Her plan of love was to marry, and her plan of marriage was to have a family. Her life was not longer sluggish and unshaded, and she was practically whipped to it by the stream of life. It has washed many new things within her reach, new perspectives, new aspirations, new ways of life, and nature blossoms it hangers for each food at every stage of its development—interests with a pulse in them love, it is not longer sluggish and unshaded, and she was practically whipped to it by the stream of life. It has washed many new things within her reach, new perspectives, new aspirations, new ways of life, and nature blossoms it hangers for each food at every stage of its development—interests with a pulse in them love, it is not longer sluggish and unshaded, and she was practically whipped to it by the stream of life. If You're the Beautiful Word.

If one can utter the word hope to the valid, that is the most beautiful word in the world. While the impossible is not claimed, it is well established that Wilson's Invalid's Port, taken regularly by weak and debilitated persons, produces gratifying results, giving tone to the system, brightness to the eye, hope to the spirit, and above all making by its fine qualities new blood which gives fresh life to the enfeebled and dependent. Unquestionably the best tonic on the market. Pleasant, a beautiful rich oil wine which gives back appetite, aids digestion, and is highly medicinal in its effects. Sold by all dealers at $7.50 per case of 12 quart bottles, half case $4.00 or 75c per bottle. Address—Bordeaux Claret Co., 30 Hospital St., Montreal. 246 w

"If You Should Die To-night"

Well, it would be your own fault, if it was consumption that took you off, and you refused to take Miller's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, which has been pronounced by all authorities to be a positive cure for that disease. If you have any lung trouble, if you are threatened with consumption, lose not an hour in obtaining a supply of Miller's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil. It is the great blood maker, and blood is what is needed by the consumptive. Miller's Emulsion is the great nerve strengthener and blood-maker, and cures Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Scrofula and Lung affections. In big bottles, 50c. and $1. at all drug stores.

"Lame Back of 20 Years Cured."

MRS. P. CLONEY, of Charlottetown, formerly of Cardigan Bridge, P. E. I., writes: "I have used PRUSSIAN OIL for Lame Back that I have suffered from for twenty years. I have also used it for Dyspepsia, and in both cases it has given me the most wonderful relief. I can cheerfully and sincerely recommend it."
"USE IT AND PROVE IT."

A Wide Range.

A preparation which enriches and purifies the blood and assists nature in repairing wasted tissue must have a wide range of usefulness.
Such a preparation is Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda. The uses of Scott's Emulsion are not confined to wasting diseases, like consumption, scrofula or anemia. They embrace nearly all those minor ailments associated with loss of flesh.

WORD HISTORY.

Some of Them Have Almost Outgrown Their Original Meaning.

Villa formerly meant a farm and not a house.
Daisy was originally the eye of day.
Girl formerly signified any young person of either sex.
Flag once meant any old person, whether male or female.
Gallon was originally a pitcher or jar, no matter of what size.
Voyage was formerly any journey, whether by sea or land it did not matter.
Good-bye is an abbreviation of an old English form of parting, "God be with you until we meet."
Polish means to be polished, and was applied to any smooth, shining surface.
Adieu formerly signified to God. It was an abbreviation of a benediction used by friends when parting.
A vagabond was originally only a traveler or person who went from place to place, with or without a definite object.
Shrewd once signified evil or wicked.
Thomas Fuller uses the expression, "a shrewd fellow," meaning a wicked man.
Moonstruck is borrowed from astrology. It formerly described one who was driven mad by sleeping in the rays of the moon, that means, perhaps, to stare.
Peck at first meant a basket or receptacle for grain or other substances. The expression at first had no reference to stars.
Starve was once to die any manner of death. Wycliffe's sermons tell how "Christ starved on the cross for the redemption of men."
The word miscreant formerly signified only an unbeliever, an infidel. Joan of Arc, in the literature of her time, was called a miscreant.
These once meant any field. It is still used with this significance by the Germans, who speak of God's acre, alluding to the cemetery.
Mince means any kind of food. In one old English edition of the Lord's prayer the well-known petition is rendered, "Give us this day our daily mince."
Town originally signified a farm or farm house. It is used in Wycliffe in this sense, "and they went their ways to the little town, another to his merchandise."
A saunterer is believed by some etymologists to have originally signified a man without lands, such a person naturally endeavoring to and fro in search of employment.
Tariff was the name of the Moorish chieftain, Abou al Tarifa, who had a fortress near the Straits of Gibraltar, and levied toll on ships and merchandise passing through.
Libel once meant any little book, but as many small tracts in the early days of printing were personal and offensive in character, the word acquired its present significance.
Imp once meant any stick, rod or pole. The expression is still used with this meaning when applied to various parts of a ship's equipment, as yard-arm, sail-rod and the like.
Imp once meant a child, Shakespeare, speaking of the children in the tower calls themimps. Jeremy Taylor, in one of his sermons, speaks of "the beautifulimps that sang hymns in the Saviour in the temple."
The expression blackguard originally indicated the scullion, kitchen boys and pot washers, who brought up the rear when a great man's household was moving from place to place. As these persons were by no means choice in their manners or elegant in their deportment, the word was soon applied to those who, in speech or action resembled them.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Ghost Stories in England.

England still begets ghost stories. The exceedingly sober Ream relates that not long ago, in a country seat in Hampshire, famous for its port gallery, a visitor was hastening down the main staircase. Suddenly he felt his progress arrested by two strong arms grasping him by the shoulders. On turning around he saw no one, but at that moment a large heavy picture fell from the wall directly in front of him, with force enough to demolish the very substantial stusters. The ghostly arms had saved his life. An Englishman's ghost is his castle—don't you know.

Mothers-in-Law. Attention.

It would be a good idea for mothers-in-law to let their daughters-in-law alone where domestic matters are concerned, unless their advice is asked. This sounds harsh, but it is meant to be sensible.
The husband's mother, as a rule, is too fussy about her son.
Of course it is difficult for her to realize that another woman and a comparatively stranger, can know as much about "my boy" as his mother does, but it's very often true.
So that chery and wid-awake mothers-in-law, who in smiling, makes no suggestions, offers no criticisms, thinks everything splendid or says she does—and isn't full of tireless reminiscences of "how she used to do," is likely to be the power behind the throne if she covets that position.
