A SUNLESS MONTH

When Old Sol Never Shows His Face in Dawson City.

Faith Fenton writing from Dawson City to the Toronto Globe says:—We have entered upon the sunless month of the sub-Arctic. Through the November days we watched the sunrise, or rather the reflection of it, around the mountain tops at 10 o'clock in the morning. There would be a yellow flash upon a southeastern peak, the clouds about the heights grew rosy and lit the snowy crests into a lovely glow. Then a rim of gold, lifted itself above the lofty horizon, just a rim, like the arc of a time-worn wedding ring. It would slip across the southern horizon—a little journey of two hours or less duration—then drop down behind the mountain peaks. Its day's work was done, and only the dying crimson flash remained.

With early December days the golden rim disappeared. Only the yellow and gold light upon the peaks told us that the sun was shining somewhere down below the mountain. Now in mid-December, we do not see it at all, and the light upon the peaks is very faint and brief, a touch of rosininess at midday and then the afternoon greyness.

But this sunless month is not one of continued night, as we imagined in our school days. It is grey, as a cloudy day may be. Dark until 9 a. m., twilight until 10, then a grey midday, followed by twilight at 2 p. m., that deepens into night darkness at 3. A grey and white world we are living in just now, but it is only for a few weeks. Early January will bring the yellow light and rose-tint to the mountain tops again, and when the new year is one week gone the yellow rim will slip softly up, just to peer down at the little cabin city in the Yukon Valley, then drop in content. But after that it will rise each day higher and higher, until the rim envelops the full golden ball, and the season rolls rapidly on to the June days when the sun never sleeps.

The English war office has inaugurated a measure of considerable importance. It provides that in future every cavalry regiment shall comprise a certain number of trained telegraphers, and, inasmuch as increased pay and brighter prospects of promotion are to be accorded to troopers and non-commissioned officers who have mastered the science of telegraphy, the result will be that in course of time nearly every cavalryman will know how to telegraph. In modern warfare cavalry is used almost exclusively for reconnaissance, and the idea is that each trooper shall be sufficiently expert, not only to be able to tap wires with the view to obtaining valuable information regarding the enemy, but shall be able to send important news which may be secured. It is known that both Germany and Russia keep large bodies of cavalry on either side of their long frontier with the main purpose of cutting and tapping the enemy's telegraphic wires just across the boundary line for the purpose of interfering with the mobilizing in case of the outbreak of war. It will be seen, therefore, that a knowledge of telegraphy is indispensable to the cavalrymen of the future, and in view of this fact the new rule inaugurated by the war office excites universal approval.

ABBIES STILL CHAMPIONS.

A Large Crowd and a Splendid Game at the Rink Last Night.

The Abegweits still hold the championship of P. E. Island, and they owe their last night's victory solely to their superior weight and strength of their forwards. In the first half the Victorias forwards played together better than the Abbies. They kept the puck in their opponent's territory nearly all the time, and tried time and again to score; but the splendid defence of Jost, Bethune and McMillan kept them from doing so. The first half was probably the fastest and most tightly fought half hour's playing of hockey ever witnessed in Charlottetown. But in the second half the superior weight of the Abbies' forwards began to tell. They indulged in body-checking to a large extent and could toss the little Vics around almost as much as they liked. This, of course, was bound to tell on the Victorias, and before the half was nearly over it was plainly seen that the Victorias were beginning to flag. The defence put up by both sides was splendid. Ham Bethune is undoubtedly the best cover point the Abbies have yet had; and McLean did some of the best playing at point ever seen in Charlottetown. In the first half neither side scored; in the second half the Abegweits scored three times and the Victorias once.

A Mistaken Idea

Some persons have an idea that the TALCUM POWDER we are selling at 10c a tin is no good on account of the low price. This impression is speedily removed the first time it is used. It is good Talcum Powder in every respect, and we are giving our customers the benefit of the low price we obtained by buying a large quantity of it. Think of it as a 25c package for 10c.
