Hopalong Cassidy Creator Dies

PORTLAND, Me. (AP) - Clarence E. Mulford, 73, creator of the fictional cowboy "Hopalong Cassidy," died Thursday. The author's death came two days after a major chest operation.

Mulford's "Hopalong Cassidy," central figure in a series of western stories about a mythical "Bar 20" ranch, was turned into a motion picture and television hero by actor William Boyd.

Mulford's production - More than 100 western novels and short stories - stopped some 20 years ago. He took umbrage at high federal income taxes and refused to do any more writing.

Many critics considered Mulford's western stories as second only to those of the late Zane Grey.

Mulford never lived in the west and did little travelling there. Much of his writing was done in an apartment in Brookline, N. Y. But he was a thorough researcher and a painstaking craftsman.

More Immigrants Than Last Year

OTTAWA (CP) - Canada welcomed 18,963 immigrants in the first quarter of 1956, an increase over the 1955 flow but still not up to the movement pattern that produced almost 150,000 immigrants in 1954.

Immigration department figures for the January-March period, issued Friday, showed that 18,963 compared with 17,627 immigrants who came to Canada in the same period of 1955.

British immigrants in the January-March period totalled 4,912 compared with 4,356 in 1955; German 2,317 compared with 2,112; Italian 1,558 compared with 1,418 and Netherlands 1,050 compared with 1,122.

Immigration flow to Canada for the whole of last year was 109,946, the lowest figure in many years.

Officials said the decline in the number of immigrants was due mainly to a shortage of immigrant pools abroad because of better economic conditions and job opportunities in such countries as Britain, Italy and the Netherlands which have provided Canada with most of her immigrants in recent years.

Inside the rooming-house slept 70-year-old Mrs. Margaret Lighthouse, her two married sons and a number of boarders. The sons each have five children.

Police Chief Lewis Elliott described the bomb as "the work of the devil - only luck saved a score of people from being killed."

"We know whom we are looking for," he said.

The bomb was discovered by Mrs. Lighthouse, owner of the 10 room house at 4.30 a.m. She said she wasn't feeling well and got out of bed to make a cup of tea. The shed is connected to the kitchen by a screen door.

"I saw the thing and I didn't know what to do," she said. "Then it came to me that this was a bomb - I just screamed and screamed."

Flames were licking around the coal-oil can, she said, and "the whole works was set to blow us all to kingdom come."

Police chief Elliott said the fuse in the bottle "had burned down to within a quarter of an inch of the detonator."

"One minute more and there would have been a terrible tragedy," he said.

"Underneath the carton was a railroad torpedo which would have blasted flames all over the house."

Mrs. Lighthouse, discovering the bomb, aroused her son, Earl Nobes, who beat out the fire and caused the bottle of explosives.

Near the contraption lay a carton of bottles filled to the brim with more coal oil and wrapped in oiled rags.

Police are investigating what fire chief John McAllister called "planned murder." He said a bottle of unidentifiable explosives with a fuse attached was found taped to a five-gallon can of coal oil in a small shed adjoining the house.

Churchill Gets Warm Welcome In Germany

By GEORGE BOULTWOOD BONN, (AP) - Sir Winston Churchill Friday visited the West German capital amid mixed reactions to his proposal for a Grand Alliance between the West and Russia.

The 81-year-old former British prime minister received a warm personal welcome from the Germans and their leaders. There were cheers in the streets and President Theodor Heuss and Chancellor Konrad Adenauer were genial hosts at lunch and dinner.

But the government, through Foreign Minister Heinrich von Brentano, threw cold water on Churchill's proposal in Aachen Thursday "in the spirit of NATO" the West "in the spirit of NATO" here and for us all, to digest the result of a little bit to see where

While overseas as an NCO, Bob's duties on contracts and procurement of supplies took him as far as Rabat and Casablanca in North Africa. Also active off-duty he was a member of the local married quarters community council.

Married to the former Edith Peterson, of Fort Frances, Ont., FO Mokler is accompanied here by his wife and two children, Marilyn, 11 and Alan 8. They will soon return to Canada, where he will attend the RCAF Officers' School at London, Ontario, and flying control instruction at Centralia, Ont.

LONDON (AP) - Miss A. I. Gordon, 46, Friday became the first woman minister of the Presbyterian Church of England. Miss Gordon was formerly a missionary in Manchuria. She finished her training for the ministry about 10 years ago.

The new club was chartered through the efforts of Vernon Pelton, extension director of the Halifax Club. The banquet meeting was attended by the Mayor of the Town, I. W. Akerley and G. Stevens, M.L.A. for Halifax East.

The guest speaker of the evening was Henry D. Grimes, International Secretary, Treasurer of the Associated Y's Men's Clubs. He dealt mainly with conditions of the Association in European countries and his proposed visit to South America.

He emphasized the enormous development of the Y.M.C.A. service club, not only as a great service to the "Y" but as a powerful agency in cementing the bonds of true Christian brotherhood among nations.

"I've Been Here Before", Says New P. E. I. Flying Officer

METZ, FRANCE - It's the second time around for R.V. (Bob) Mokler, former RCAF flying officer whose commissioning as a flying officer in the air force's flying control branch has just been announced.

Bob, the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Mokler, formerly of Charlottetown and now of Belmont, Mass., U.S.A. has been serving since October 1954 with Canada's NATO Air Division headquarters here as a supply superintendent.

First joining the RCAF in 1940, he has worked in the supply branch throughout his service, and was commissioned flying officer from the rank of flight sergeant in 1943.

Leaving the service for two years after the end of the Second World War, he returned as a leading air-craftman, again reaching the rank of flight sergeant before being granted his second commission last month.

While overseas as an NCO, Bob's duties on contracts and procurement of supplies took him as far as Rabat and Casablanca in North Africa. Also active off-duty he was a member of the local married quarters community council.
