"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. TWO PRETTY FROCKS.

Summer Dresses For Little Girls in Chambray and Foulard.

Here are two pretty little frocks for two pretty little maids, from the June number of Goodie's Magazine. One is made of striped pale green and white chambray. The plain skirt has a deep hem. At the top, close under the arms, it is gathered into a plain band of the material, above which is a full box-pleating of the same. Wide sash could be made in large bows, secure the dress over a full-sleeved guimpie, which is made of white mull and is detached from the skirt.

The other gown is of cream-colored foulard, showing a design of pink rosebud. Cut in V shape at the neck, it is gathered into a plain band of black velvet ribbon, which is tied at each shoulder in a careless knot. The wide flowing sleeves are lined with pale green India silk, and are so arranged as to display the full under-sleeves, which are attached to the guimpie. This is made of white silk mull with frills of lace finishing the neck and wrists.

"Fallen Asleep."

We garner memories rich and rare,
Fool's paradise, from that fair
We pluck and twine in clustered wreaths,
When a fragrant memory sweetly reaches;
But, ah, too soon these drop and fade
And lose by Time's sure frost are laid—
In valleys solemn, low and deep,
We hear that "Some Have Fallen Asleep."

A Paris Walking Dress

WALKING DRESS.

Aubergine bengaline skirt with deep lace collar. Bengaline jacket with lace collar and facings. Mauve gauze chemise.

Awa Cloth for Petticoats.

Awa cloth is the latest material for a summer skirt. It is a cotton cloth with a crimped surface, and comes in shades of dark blue, gray and black. The skirt, when made with a full ruffle, is stiff enough to dispense with the crinolines lining of a gown. It washes well and does not need to be ironed. Ready made it costs $5.

Strawberry Acid.

This will make a most refreshing drink for the sick as well as for the table.

To one quart of good clear vinegar add a quart of indispensable of butter. The cream should not be chilled, and the butter soft, not melted. Stir the salt in, then the butter, and you will have a nice product of butter in considerably less than ten minutes. I get mine every time. This should all be put in a mixing bowl and stirred rapidly with the back of the spoon.

This is a simple recipe and I, who have often tried to get a little butter from the savings of one cow's milk and worked till tired and vexed over it, have wished I had known it earlier. These proportions may be increased and larger quantities of butter made.

General Grant's Granddaughter.

Miss Vivian Sartoris, the 16-year-old granddaughter of General Grant, will go on the stage next season. It is said that her father's aunt was Fanny Gambie.

Found a Rich Gold Mine.

LOWER JORDON BAY, N. S., July 3.—Mr. Samuel Locke, of this place, has just discovered a gold mine here that pans out 100 per cent of pure metal to the ton. It was a rich vein of sound lead, to which he was restored by the use of Dodd's kidney pills, and which he would not exchange for any other mine in America. All last winter he suffered from kidney trouble which would not yield to the prescriptions of several doctors. A few months ago Mr. Locke heard of the good work done by Dodd's kidney pills and tried them with the invariable result. Today he is well and thinks no praise too great for this wonderful remedy. His neighbors are much interested in what they describe as a marvelous cure.

CASE OF A BASHFUL LOVER

And a Maid Who Was Not so Bashful and Helped Him to Come to the Point.

It was the hour of sunset in the United States of America. In front of a picturesque log cabin situated in the state of Tennessee two people sat on a log.

They were male and female, both round and full of life, and both loved before. He owned a cog and a mule, and she could read, write and cipher," he said, breaking a long silence.

"Yes, Tom."

"Any 'sketers hit yo' yet?"

The sun disappeared behind the Racoon hills, and twilight fell. Insensibly the girl critter heaved a long, quivering, tremulous, trembling sigh. Insensibly the man critter hitched toward her on the log.

"Jen, 'sposin'?" he queried as he looked straight into the gathering darkness.

"'Sposin' what, Tom?" she answered as she clumped the life out of a mosquito which was trying to carry her off bodily.

But he stuck there, white the darkness grew deeper and the old man Shepherd trotted by on his mule and an owl in the swamp gave utterance to his lonely cry. Her heart was beating wildly, but a girl critter must wait for a man critter to ask her. Insensibly, however, they hitched in unison toward the center of the log.

"Jen, 'sposin' yo' pop was to be eat up by a bat?"

"Yes."

"And yer man was to git the break-bone fever and die?"

"Yes."

"He got stuck again. He picked up a chip with his naked toes and worked it about in a nervous manner, while the owl whooped it up for the next five minutes for all there was in it. She could hear his heart thumping, and he knew that she was red clear to her shoulder blades. Insensibly they drew together.

"And 'sposin' yo' brudder Jim should git snake bit and expire?" he continued as he dropped his voice to a whisper.

"Yes, Tom."

"And the cabin should burn down?"

"Yes."

"W'at would yo' do then?"

"Reckon I'd go over to yo' house."

"W'at fur?"

"To ax yo' man if—"

The owl stopped his comarined hooting to listen, and Tom worked his toes under a root and queried:

"To ax yo' man if what?"

"Yo' won't be mad, Tom?"

"Reckon not."

"And yo' won't get up'n run away?"

"No."

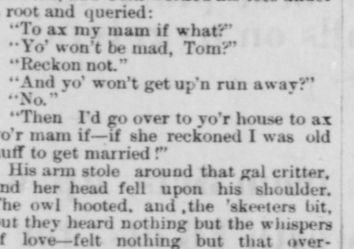

"Then I'd go over to yo' house to ax yo' man if—she reckoned I was old nuff to get married!"

His arm stole around that gal critter, and her head fell upon his shoulder. The owl hooted, and the 'sketers lit, but they heard nothing but the whispers of love—felt nothing but that overpowering sense of happiness which comes to calves who bite each other's ears for the first time.

Women Graduates.

Of the 341 graduates of the London University who took the degree of B.A. 80 were women. In the honors list in mental and moral science, a woman stood first, as also in that of English and French. In the very difficult faculty of science, 12 out of 84 were women. In the M.B. examination, 7 out of 50 were women, and in medical faculty, 3 out of 50 were women.

Light and Darkness.

A New York electrical journal some time ago told of an incident which occurred in the fitting up of a new office building near the New York end of the Brooklyn Bridge. The engineer who had charge wished to wire the office throughout for the electric light in addition to the gas pipes on which the conservative proprietors insisted. But all his arguments were in vain, and the apparently useless extravagance of electric wiring was obstinately vetoed. Suddenly, however, a happy thought struck the venerable owner. "Why," he said, "if the wires carry electricity, can't you make them carry gas, too?" A counterpart of this story is now told of a shipyard carpenter, a native of Troon, on the coast of Ayrshire, Scotland. When the contract for lighting the first three steamers fitted with electric light at the Troon shipyard was completed this man formed one of a social party gathered to treat the electricians who had made the installation and otherwise celebrate the event. In a burst of candor and comradeship, he was overheard saying to one of the women:

"Man, Peter, after workin' wi' you, ye boats I believe I could put in the electric light myself, but there's only as thing that hales me." "Ay, what is that?" said his interested companion, willing to help him if it lay in his power.

"It's this, man: I dinna ken hoo ye get the fle a-lang the wires!"

Had Him There.

Ferdinand—What do you suppose would have happened if Eve had said to Adam: "No, Mr. Adam, no; I cannot be your wife, but I will always be a sister to you."

Isabella—Well, Adam couldn't have gone to his club and said: "Ezekiel is a nice girl—a duced nice girl, and say, chappies, do you know I fancy she is quite stuck on me, but, fellows, I couldn't think you know of marrying a girl that hadn't any family, now, could I?"

Her Point of View.

Husband—Do you know that every time a woman gets angry she adds a new wrinkle to her face?

Wife—No, I did not; but it is so I presume it is wise provision of nature to let the world know what sort of a husband a woman has.—New York Weekly.

Mothers, Does the housework tire you? If so, ask yourself the reason why.

Is there a means by which the WEARINESS and the WEARINESS and the DREAD can be removed? Do the words of friends and the experience of others influence you? There is reason why they should. They are constituted as you are. Relief to them is relief to you.

The case of Mrs. Elizabeth Hamilton, of Milford, St. John, has many a parallel.

Consider it.

This lady, whose portrait appears above these lines, suffering four years from that common complaint, Dyspepsia—accompanied, of course, by its train of ill-flattulency, constipation, nervousness, loss of appetite.

And she tried eight physicians during that time.

Last autumn she was induced to "experiment" with a popular local remedy—"Groder Syrup." Of this medicine she says: "It has helped me as nothing else ever did; it made my work lighter and easier because it regulated my stomach and GAVE ME NEW LIFE.

Does such evidence appeal to you? It should. There is health and healing in this remedy for Dyspepsia. Distorted stomachs are the direct cause of countless ills that kill.
