FIND REMAINS OF SEAMEN ON CORAL ISLE

Three Unidentified Skeletons Found On Barren Booby Rock, Outer Bahamas.

(A. P. By Guardian's Special Wire) NASSAU, Bahamas, June 23—The story of a desperate, unsuccessful fight against death by three men marooned through shipwreck on barren Booby Rock in the Outer Bahamas was told today to colonial authorities here.

Still not known was the identity of the men who clawed tiny sea animals from crevices in the rock for food, but finally succumbed, apparently from thirst on that coral isle surrounded by the sea.

(At Belize it was believed the bodies were those of the captain and crew of the auxiliary ketch Rhonda. The captain's name was given as Hudson.)

At first it was thought the bodies were those of the crew of the Girl Pat now at Georgetown.

Capt. Cornelius Johnson of the sloop Dove, whose story in fragmentary form reached Nassau several days ahead of him, said today he first was attracted to Booby Key two months ago while sponge fishing.

Landing, Captain Johnson found the remains of a steamer's lifeboat. Across the rock, some 150 feet, were the skeletons, believed those of white men.

A pile of shells and an improvised flagpole told of the struggle to keep alive until the distress signal might be sighted by some ship, travelling in the seldom used waters far from the commercial lanes.

Striven about the skeletons, as though the men held them fast until the end, were pages of an Anglican prayer book and a Bible.

Captain Johnson believed the lifeboat split upon striking the reef, leaving the men with no means of getting off the rock.

Find Death Due To Own Negligence

(C. P. By Guardian's Special Wire) SAINT JOHN, N.B., June 23—Thomas C. Wiggins, Saint John, met his death from injuries received while attempting to evade Royal Canadian Mounted Police due to his own negligence was the declaration of a jury Saturday night after it had deliberated for 55 minutes on testimony presented at an inquest ordered by Dr. C. L. Emerson, county coroner, Saturday night.

Fifteen witnesses took the stand, among them Cecil Wiggins, brother of the accident victim and driver of the "death car" involved, and Constable Dudley R. Maffett, driver of the pursuing police car.

Wiggins, who with his brother was fleeing from the two constables assigned to liquor patrol, died early Saturday morning from a badly fractured skull and hemorrhage, after the door of his car was caught on a roadside power pole on Main Street, jammed back across his head and ripped off by the force of the impact. The victim was catapulted from the car for a distance of nearly 40 feet and a leg was broken when he hit the sidewalk.

RELIEF CAMPS CLOSE JULY 1

Over 8,000 Placed On Deferred Maintenance Work

OTTAWA, June 23—Labor Minister Rogers told the House of Commons Saturday 8,689 relief camp men have been placed on deferred maintenance work on the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific railways.

At the same time he said "some hundreds" of the camp-men had refused work on the railways.

The camps will be closed July 1 and at the present time there were less than 1,500 in them, including supervisory personnel. Several hundreds had been placed on farms.

Up to June 5, the number of men put to work on the railways was 8,689, the minister said. The following were drafted from camps in the various provinces: Nova Scotia, 232; New Brunswick, 642; Quebec, 1,699; Ontario, 2,938; Manitoba, 638; Saskatchewan, 912; Alberta, 952 and British Columbia, 676.

Besides the men given work on the railways, many others left the camps to work on their own homes, Mr. Rogers said. When the pay of camp men was increased from $5 to $15 a month last March, a general order was issued they must accept work or get out.

Genial Princess Was a Favorite of Loyal People

By THOMAS T. CHAMPION Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, June 23—(CP)—Princess Beatrice, youngest child of Queen Victoria, will be 80 years old next April. Time was when her Royal Highness was one of the most assiduous in performing the minor duties of royalty to the public at large.

For many years she was the constant companion of Queen Victoria. People of the mid-Victorian era took genuine pleasure in having "Princess Trixie" amongst them for flower shows, openings, foundation stone-laying, and the like. In her ability to create an atmosphere of easy good nature and unaffected geniality she resembled her august brother, the then Prince of Wales.

Princess Beatrice was married 51 years ago to Prince Henry of Battenberg. The British public had become rather tired of German princesses housing themselves in the royal palaces of England, but Prince Henry, after a time, earned the good-will of the nation. There was general regret in 1906 when he died at sea of fever after participating in the Ashanti campaign.

His brother, Prince Louis of Battenberg, who came to England as a mere boy, rose to be First Sea Lord. He was holding this office when the Great War broke out, and it was owing to his prompt initiative that, following the test mobilization in July 1914, the ships of the navy were ordered to remain at their stations. Following the outbreak of war there was a campaign in a section of the English press against the Prince's so-called "German origin." Prince Louis once more proved his patriotism to the country of his adoption by resigning in October, 1914. The family name was changed in 1917 to Mountbatten.

Princess Beatrice's only daughter, Victoria Eugenie, was married to King Alfonso of Spain in 1906. There was an outcry at the time from a considerable section of the public here against a British Princess marrying a Catholic King and abjuring Protestantism. The opinion of those immediately in the neighborhood of the Court was, naturally enough, not openly voiced at the time, but the recent publication of the Life of the Late Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Randall Davidson, shows that objections to the marriage were raised in the highest quarters in England.

Army Seizes Control In Bolivia

(A. P. By Guardian's Special Wire)

BUENOS AIRES, June 23—The army assumed complete control of the Bolivian Government yesterday after a plot was discovered, said advices today from La Paz. The subversive movement presumably was headed by former President Bautista Saavedra.

An army manifesto said it would govern the country with the collaboration of Chaco war veterans, organized workers and "the ablest men in the country morally and intellectually."

Former President Saavedra, chief of the Republican Socialist party, was arrested and deported to Arica. The revolt, officers said, had been set for early in July.

The reports added that complete order prevails throughout Bolivia.

U.S. STATE TROOPER MARRIES INTO SOCIETY

NEW YORK, June 23—A romance culminating in the marriage of a New York State Trooper who has continued his highway patrol duties, and a member of Long Island's more exclusive social set who has won attention as a skilful horsewoman was disclosed today.

Confirmation was obtained from the home of Mrs. Crowley Backwell of East Northport, L.I., that her stepdaughter, Beatrice Black-

King Performed Regular Job as Junior Officer

Emphasizing the dissimilarity between members of the British royal family and their German cousins, King Edward had to do his turn "in the line" like other regimental officers when, as Prince of Wales, he served in the war.

As a Second Lieutenant in the Grenadier Guard's his duties were no different from those of platoon commanders of other battalions. He had to ensure the comfort of his men, see they were issued with dry socks, were paraded regularly to the divisional baths and issued with clean underwear. If "trench feet" bothered the platoon, his Majesty's job was to get an issue of whale-oil from the Quartermaster with which to massage the affected extremities.

The rifles of his platoon had to be as speckless as those of any other; and his Majesty was responsible for that. If his men lost parts of their kit, it was Lieut. H. R. H. the Prince of Wales' job to parade the delinquents and demand the reason why. He had to keep tabs on trench stores—that is the number of rounds of ammunition in his trench section hand-grenades, Verey lights, gas gongs, blankets saturated with chemicals to protect the entrances of trench shelters against gas, wire cutters, rubber boots, picks, shovels, petrolins for the carrying of fresh water, sniperscopes, trench periscopes and fixed rifles. Amid all this overwhelming routine, his Majesty, like his brother officers, found time in which to prosecute a war.

His favorite pursuit was to visit the front line in the early morning, just after "stand-down." As often as possible he strove to escape from the inevitable accompaniment of other staff officers, so that he might see for himself what was going on and mingle with the front-line troops to his heart's content.

Later in the war, when the Prince was a staff officer, many a Canadian sentry, seated in lonely discomfort on the firestep of a trench, was surprised by the sudden appearance, round the traverse, of the slim "brass hat" and was quite unaware of his identity until long after. On such occasions, his Majesty was wont to hear many searing comments and a great deal of undiluted truth.

Noyes Candidate For U.S. Senate

(A. P. By Guardian's Special Wire) STONINGTON, Me., June 23—Dr. B. Lake Noyes, 66-year-old advocate of Father Charles E. Coughlin's monetary principles, yesterday announced his candidacy for the United States Senate in an independent ticket in the September elections. He will be the third candidate.

Other candidates will be Governor Louis J. Brann, (D.), and United States Senator Wallace H. White, (R.), nominated in last Monday's primaries without opposition.

Besides his agreement with Father Coughlin's national union for social justice 16 point platform, Dr. Noyes said he was "sincerely in harmony with the Townsend plan."

Dr. Noyes has attended to the ills of simple fisherfolk and farmers in this little island town for 40 years.

Canada was second in hardwood with 1,482,000 cu. ft., United States being first with 2,011,000 and Poland third with 608,000.
