Education Essential To Gain Employment

George W. Cheverie, manager of the Charlottetown branch, National Employment Service, yesterday produced some hard facts to back up his statements that one of the greatest causes of unemployment is the lack of education.

The Commission recently conducted a survey of unemployed persons in the area who are at present listed as unemployed, only three are university graduates. Sixty-four have at least grade twelve education, 2,056 have grade ten or lower, and 1,561 have no more than grade eight.

For females, the story is much the same. Only one out of the 638 unemployed women has a college degree. Forty-six have a high school or higher, 878 have a maximum of grade ten, and 291 have grade eight or lower. In nearly all fields the educational limits are tightening up. Without sufficient education it is difficult for a worker to get a job. And without it, it is even more difficult for him to advance.

Most employers now set their educational requirements high enough so that any new staff are potential freshmen. Mr. Cheverie explained that the results of the Queen's and Kings County survey are much the same as those recently disclosed by the Prince County branch of the National Employment Service in Summerside.

These surveys in this province are part of a national report which will be presented later in the year.

Parking Ticket Violators Are Warned

In order to give motorists a chance to settle for parking tickets issued in 1963 without adding the court costs, Chief of Police Stiers Webster, announced yesterday that summonses are being prepared for serving of such violators immediately. With the start of the new year, he said, "one with as many traffic problems as Centennial Year will present" will simply have to get all last year's business cleared out of the way. While he said he regretted the action the police were forced to take at the same time their was no choice, if the people refused to come in voluntarily and pay the tickets.

He remarked there was a large number of them and a number of the police staff yesterday were checking licenses and addresses with the provincial registrar of motor vehicles in order to prepare the summonses.

Co-op Housing Group May Discuss Decision

Members of the North River Road co-operative housing group are expected to meet this week-end to discuss a decision by the tax appeal board. The board, more than a week ago, ruled against the co-op group. Board chairman F. A. K. Storey said the board found no evidence substantiating claims of unfairness by the City of Charlottetown.

A.E. Belliveau, a spokesman for the group, said that the group had not yet been advised officially of the board decision. He said they knew only what they had read in the newspapers. Representatives of the co-op group, formed in 1960, had met on Monday morning at the co-op house, 27 St. John's St., to discuss the board's decision. They had previously promised them their annual taxes would not exceed $125, and that the methods of assessment were fair.

Mr. Belliveau, of the provincial housing commission, had presented the case for the co-op group. Mr. Storey said that the group's claimed promise of taxes not exceeding $125 "could not be sustained in any way at all."

He said the board had searched all files thoroughly, and there were no letters promising fixed tax rates. Both Mayor Wathen Gaudet and city tax assessor Ernest Selzer said they have no knowledge of a verbal promise on the subject.

Mr. Storey said also that the minutes of the City Council meeting of July 20, 1960, when arrangements were made for preparing the land for the development, stated quite plainly that the council could make no arrangements for taxes for the co-op housing group.

The Guardian's report of that meeting accounts at least although "the group had asked that assessment be in line with developments of this nature under the Canada Housing Act".

Mr. Storey recalled that the city had done much to help the residents of the co-operative housing.

Development of their land, on the outskirts of the city, had cost Charlottetown's taxpayers approximately $150 per lot, he commented that to give the people a better deal, the co-op rate of taxation than that of other homeowners in the city would be to "provide second-class citizens."

Mr. Storey said the board themselves, he said, "found them to be 'exact in every detail'."

The material in the houses is good," he said, explaining that the houses had been built by qualified tradesmen.

The only thing not given consideration was the fact that each building was put together by unskilled people."

The board will allow "a slight deratification of property because of the unusual nature of the law," he added. The chairman added that the owners of the co-op "have a favorable outlook rate—they are not forced to pay the actual local Veterans Affairs, and management and staff of the Island Telephone Company. Fellow members were Hon. T.W.L. Prowse, Walter Fowler, Walter Alder, Lloyd Gillespie, Don Stas and Lloyd Weeks. Returns were placed in the Cutfills receiving vault.

Georgetown's Waterfront Busy As Pulpwood Is Loaded

GEORGETOWN — Georgetown's waterfront continued its busy morning with the sailing on Friday morning of the Liberator freighter San John P.

Loading operations were completed Thursday evening after approximately 600 cords of sappeled pulpwood had been loaded from the Henderson Lumber Company yard.

The freighter cleared here for Baddeck, N.S., where she will complete loading before proceeding overseas. The Canadian Coast Guard Ship Tupper left port ahead of the San John P. on her way to Charlottetown. The harbor at Georgetown is now almost completely ice-free.

The freighter was taken out of port by harbor pilot, James Ivelwey who returned aboard the pilot boat operated by Bill Llewellyn.

Immediately after the San John P. vacated her berth on the east side of the railway wharf the large Finnish freighter Atlas moved into the vacant berth from the west side of the dock where she had been since Sunday.

She commenced loading 2,200 cords of rough pulp. It is expected that she will take on an additional 1,100 cords in Souris before proceeding across the Atlantic.

She is the third freighter to load pulpwood at this port since Christmas Day when the three ships arrived in port.
