Drug Prices, Profits Shown To Committee

OTTAWA (CP)—A firm manufacturing drugs under their generic names could make a higher percentage profit than the companies which discovered them, Dr. George F. Wright, president of Empire Laboratories Ltd. of Toronto, conceded under questioning here.

He told the Commons committee on drug costs and prices that $68 worth of a chemical would cost the consumer $5,800 in its final tablet form.

Bryce Mackasey (L.—Montreal Verdurin) suggested that allowing even the most generous margin for labor and marketing costs, the company could expect a net profit of more than $5,400. He quoted the figures from a submission by Empire Laboratories seeking a licence to manufacture a drug discovered by another firm.

Dr. Wright argued that the original firm sold the product at twice its price and challenged the contention that recouping the research and development costs should make that much difference.

MUST CONSIDER COSTS

He said he also had to consider royalties and legal fees in his costs, but admitted it was possible that his firm would make a bigger profit than the discoverers.

Dr. Wright said a drug which cost his firm 35 cents to produce was sold to pharmacists and wholesalers for $1.66 and to the consumer for $3.50. The same drug produced by two of the larger brand-name firms sold to the consumer for $6.50 and $10.30.

Mr. Mackasey said manufacturers applying for permission to manufacture tolbutamide under compulsory licence cited consumer prices ranging from $3.50 to $54.90 for 100 tablets. Empire's suggested list price was $23.

He suggested the drug manufacturers need to search their consciences.

"I will have to search my conscience too, but only half as much as some others," Dr. Wright replied.

BRAND NAMES A MENACE

Dr. Wright argued that brand names are a menace to the public because the company concerned becomes more interested in maintaining the name than in protecting the quality of the product.

He suggested the establishment of a Canadian drug institute operated jointly by the four professions: medicine, pharmacy, pharmacology and chemistry.

Its aim would be to examine areas of therapy in which new drugs are needed, regulate testing of drugs, correlate reports of side effects of drugs, establish official generic names for new drugs, accomplish research and promote preventive medicine.

Mixed Fish Catch Off B.C. Biggest Barrier To New Plant

VANCOUVER (CP)—With 4,000,000 pounds of processed and packaged fish sitting in his deep freezer, H. H. McLean is pondering the only barrier preventing his "custom-built" fish plant in nearby Steveston from being an ideal operation.

That is how to get his fleet of fishboats to bring in only one species of fish instead of mixed loads.

In its few months of operation, the Imperial plant of B.C. Packers Ltd., has surpassed all production records.

Mr. McLean, plant manager, and his associates are particularly pleased because the plant was built to their specifications.

Instead of accepting standard equipment, they drew on their experience in the fish processing business to tailor new machines and new ideas.

The result is a $4,000,000 original.

The plant is primed to handle 40,000,000 pounds of fish annually, but Mr. McLean says this figure could be increased if the plant did not have to handle mixed loads.

"A mixed catch means you have to move all the cod through first, then the sole and so on."

The problem is not unique to this plant and is one that won't be easily overcome says Mr. McLean.

The plant boasts what Mr. McLean bills as the "largest cold-wall room" of any fish plant in the world and it is bulging with 4,000,000 pounds of packaged fish ready for distribution.

Eskimo On Relief In Arctic Better Off Than One Trapping

By STUART LAKE
RESOLUTE, BAY (CP)—An Eskimo living on relief in the Arctic is better off than one who makes his living trapping in sub-zero weather, Duncan Pryde, the member for Central Arctic told the Northwest Territories Council here.

Using government figures to back up his argument, he said an Eskimo father with two children would collect $140 monthly in welfare payments. Average prices paid individual trappers came to $150 monthly. He said it was little wonder more and more Eskimos declined to go trapping and turned instead to government hand-outs.

Mr. Pryde said the answer wasn't lower relief payments but a subsidy on white fox pelts. The white fox is the most important of the fur-bearing animals trapped in the Arctic. Mr. Pryde said Eskimos should be assured of $25 a pelt, which would make the average trapper's income about $250 monthly.

Council supported the suggestion and instructed Commissioner Ben Sivertz to study the idea after Peter Baker, the member for Mackenzie North, suggested that if a subsidy is paid, it should be for all pelts.

Mr. Baker is a trapper.

Robert Williamson, the member for Keewatin, pressed for more trapping to an ordinance empowering the commissioner to engage in a program of emergency measures planning.

DISASTERS LURK

Mr. Williamson said the ordinance covered anticipated disasters but potential ones lurked at such remote Hudson Bay communities as Whale Cove, Eskimo Point and Chesterfield Inlet, which are cut off from the outside world during freeze-up and break-up.

He said that should an epidemic break out, there was no way for outside help to reach the communities.

Clare Bolger, director of the northern administration branch, said Ottawa is also concerned about the remote Arctic communities and plans are afoot to offset these fears.

He said the department is looking into the possibility of stationing helicopters at Resolute Bay and Churchill as one solution.

Mr. Williamson also criticized The Canadian Press and the larger daily newspapers for virtually ignoring the north. He noted that newspapers play an important part in making people aware of emergencies, but much of what is going on here is unknown.

He suggested that The Canadian Press should have men stationed at Prohiber Bay and Yellowknife.

PLAQUE MARKS CANADIAN VC

TORONTO (CP)—A historical plaque commemorating the first award of a Victoria Cross to a Canadian will be unveiled Nov. 15 at a busy intersection where the home of Alexander Dunn once stood.

The ceremony will be part of the annual memorial service of the Queen's York Rangers.

Alexander Dunn was born in 1833 in a home standing in what is now the middle of Richmond Street east of Spadina Avenue. He went to England in 1852 and became an officer in the 11th Hussars. He was 21 when he was awarded the Victoria Cross for his participation in the Charge of the Light Brigade near Balaklava Oct. 25, 1854, during the Crimean War.

He was killed 14 years later when a gun was fired accidentally while he was hunting deer in Abyssinia.

Kensington Men's Club, Hold Meeting

KENSINGTON—Richard Vessey addressed the Kensington United Church Kenonia Men's Club at the first meeting of the season, held on Monday, November 7 at the Murray Christian Education Centre.

Taking for his topic "The role of the Christian Layman in the home and in the world," he based his address on the text taken from Matthew 20: 25-27. A 34 clearly defined the real christian as a servant of the Master, serving the church, the community and the world; and showing a proper respect for his fellow man.

The guest speaker was introduced by Verdurin Paynter, and thanked for his inspiring words by Robert Carruthers.

The meeting followed a dinner served by the ladies of the Fellowship group. Grace was offered by Heath Reeves. The caterers were thanked for a delicious dinner by Harland Day, and Mrs. George Stewart responded on behalf of the group.

A sing-song was led by Verdurin Paynter with Rev. Gordon MacBeth at the piano.

The president, Fred Profit chaired the meeting. The worship service was conducted by Everett Donald and Crawford Sinclair. The minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary, Allison MacMurdo, and the financial report was given by Lindsay Seaman. Several items of business were transacted. Plans were made to convey the senior citizens to church on Sunday mornings, and two men, Bruce Howard and Frank MacEwen offered their services for the month of November. The association agreed to pay 50 per cent of the cost of sending a boy to Boy's Parliament at Sackville.

Twenty eight members and three guests attended the dinner.
