THE ASYLUM ENQUIRY

At the afternoon session Dr. Blanchard gave further testimony. To Dr. Conroy he said: Premier Farquharson engages the male attendants now; witness is not consulted in the matter, He had a sole control of engaging the attendants up to the time the McLeod Government went out. The females are generally engaged by Mr. McPhail. The trustees do not visit the asylum as often as they formerly did. The present trustees do not take the same interest in the institution as their predecessors did; at least they don't manifest the same interest. Formerly the trustees made at least two visits a week. There were 119 visits made in 1883; the visits for the year 1896 outnumbered 14. To get this information he opened the trustees book at random. He had represented to the government that the building was too small for the number of inmates. This would be for a long way back. Before the number of inmates became so excessive they were fairly well classified. He is only expected to spend a part of his time at the asylum; the government understood it to be because hed did not get more pay that he was not spending more time there. He had made an application for an increase of pay but it had been refused. It is a great hardship for sick inmates to be confined in cold rooms. There is no hospital or infirmay in the institution. When a patient has consumption they manage to give him a single room.

To Mr. Rogers—He could not say that the hospital room was ever really used for that purpose, as they had no hospital appliances. At present the building might accommodate 150 without too much crowding. There were somewhere about 111 to 118 patients before the attic was fitted up. He came to town to live in 1889. The trustees then understood that he should devote what time he thought was right to the institution, and that he would have the rest of his time for private practice. This arrangement was only thought to be temporary, as it was understood a cottage was to be built. Efficiency was sacrificed to cheapness. He noticed that the institution suffered by reason of his non-residence in it. He brought this fact out in his report in 1890 and since. He never had any formal conversation with the trustees regarding the heating, but knew of Mr. Macpherson making application for an improvement. Application for a new boiler was made about two years ago, but it is not in yet The building is cold. He believed the patients suffered from the cold at times. Male ward 2 has been improved, it has been heated by direct radiations. The temperature is taken morning and evening. The fires are on then. The temperature is not taken in the night. He thought the temperature often got below 55 well on towards morning. The house would be fairly warm by the time the temperature is taken.

Hon. J. R. McLean here explained that a new boiler was put in in 1894. The boiler the doctor referred to was the second one.

To Mr. Rogers.—He had no doubt but the decrease of cures was largely the result of his non-residence in the building, There is undoubtedly a worse class of patients admitted now.

To Dr. Conroy—Have no control over the admission of patients.

To Mr. Rogers—He held that all lunatics, no matter how hopeless their case, should be under the care of a specialist, While a resident of the hospital he gave all his time to the patients, always seeing them before going to bed no matter what how it was. He thought that since he left there he spent all the way between one hour and five hours a day in the asylum. When a patient is ill they either telephone or write to his relatives. He had spoken to Mr. Peters and Mr. Farquharson as to the question of salary. He could not say he had pressed the matter of the cold building upon the present board. The fires should be kept up through the night in cold weather. It has always been an understood fact that fires were to be banked at certain hours at nights. No matter how cold the night—the fires would be banked at a certain hour at night.

W. L. Cotton, editor of THE EXAMINER said he took an active interest in public institutions and had visited the Asylum on several occasions. The building is kept very clean, but sometimes a slight order was noticeable in some rooms. He never visited the asylum at night; it was generally in the afternoons. He tasted the bread and it was good. He never noticed how the food was cooked; but saw some of it on the tables. He knew nothing of the conduct of the officials. A letter was received at the office during his absence and when he returned it was handed to him. After enquiring into the matter he decided to publish the letter in THE EXAMINER. He knew nothing of the charges personally. As far as he knew the correspondent is of good character. He thought the correspondent knew a good deal about the asylum. He did not know where she is now He had given the names of witnesses to the chairman of the Commission. Some of these came into his office of their own accord. Minnie Dogherty's name was given when the letter appeared in June last. He objected to giving the name of the correspondent. The name was included in the list he gave Mr. Rogers and one of those on the list was employed in the institution at the time. He thought others had left the institution.

Mr. Farquharson said that he would like to say that in THE EXAMINER newspaper Mr. Cotton had taken him [Mr. Farquharson] to task and said that perhaps he would try and fix up the report of the Commission. He thought Mr. Cotton as editor should aid the Commission in securing all the evidence possible.

Mr. A. Peters said that he thonght it most an extraordinary proeeedtng for a witness not to answer the question asked. Mr. Cotton had no more privileges than any other witness.

Mr. Rogers.—You must leave this matter with us the Commission.

Mr. Peters afterward said it was a burlesque and an injustice. He (Mr. Cotton) has no more privilege than any other man. He has no privllege and has got to tell the truth and the whole truth.

To Mr. Rogers—Mr. Cotton proceeded to state that the first letter came when he was away in the country. The second letter was not inspired by him. He had given all the evidence possible.

Dr. Conroy then stated that the duty of the Commission was to enquire into the state of the institution. Politics would have nothing to do with the work of the Commission, at least so far as he was concerned. The duty of this Commission is not to confirm statements made by Mary Jane McInnis and as far as he was concerned it would be conducted in that manner, or he would retire from the Commission. The letter in the Examiner is not mentioned in the scope of their enquiry.

Mr A Peters said he admitted that Dr. Conroy understood his position as Commissioner. But here is a charge made by a person who is presumed to know and you have the very man on the witness stand who can give you the name. That woman should be got and brought before the Commission. If her sworn statements confirm the statements made in that letter the institution needs renovating.

To Mr. Rogers.—Mr. Cotton said that he had given all the information on the list furnished.

Mr. S. Blanchard.—I suggest that you ask Mr. Cotton if Mary Jane McInnis wrote that letter.

Mr. Rogers.—Did Mary Jane McInnis write the letter?

Mr. Cotton.—No!

Mr. Rogers.—Did Matilda write the letter?

Mr. Cotton.—Yes!

Hon. Jas. R. McLean said he supposed that the Commissioners knew that Miss McInnis applied for the position of matron.

Dr. Conroy.—That will come out in the evidence and we will find that out before we get through.

Mr. McPhail, re-examined by Dr. Conroy: He could not say whether the meat was tainted when it came to the asylum or became so afterwards. There is one meal each day of meat, excepting on two fish days. He believed the refrigerator would keep the meat fresh in summer because there is ice in it. The large reservoir has not been cleaned for some time. He remembered its being cleaned several times. The sewage from it was carried down the fields in buckets and put on the land. The sewer pipe never got choked up that he knew of; the sewage is not carried further than the bank. He noticed a smell from it as far as the house on warm days. There are no special facilities for cases of general paralysis.

To Mr Rogers—There have been no cases of cruelty in late years. An attendant who dragged a woman across the room by her hair had been promptly discharged. This was after the Manson trouble. When an assistant was wanted Mr Peters suggested the names of one or two men.

Richard Smith, secretary of the board of trustees, said: The board meets at the call of the chairman. They investigate complaints and pass bills. The supplies are let by tender and everything is supposed to be of the best quality. The price very often has something to do with the quality. The trustees sometimes meet and accept tenders themselves.

To Dr Conroy—He thought a person weak in body or mind should have the best food

To Mr. Rogers—There is no quantity specified; only deliver such as is required. He presumed the storekeeper regulated the quantity required. He believed the trustees wished to procure good supplies and not to sacrifice quality to price. The trustees always go through the institution and sometimes examine the supplies.

To Dr Conroy—The beef is supplied by William Balls, who gets six cents a pound. The acceptance of meat is left with the storekeeper or Mr. McPhail.

Mr. McPhail (re-called)—Did not know about any meat being sent back because it was tainted; but had sent two carcasses back because it was bull meat. Attendants sometimes complained to him about the food and he had spoken to the storekeeper regarding it. He had no reason to think the matron would go into the rooms and excite the patients. The present matron is kind to the patients and is doing the best she can for them. She had given Mrs McGougan extra food to win the woman over. The female patients are no more unmanageable now than they were formerly. The matron seems to be getting on very well with the attendants. There is one of the attendants who cannot write. The matron reads and writes.

Mr. S. Blanchard said to Mr. Rogers: Have been a trustee about five years. The first years he visited the institution once a month, and sometimes twice. He went through all the wards and talked to the patients. Also spoke to Mr. McPhail or Mr. McDonald as to the food, asking them if they were satisfied with it. He never heard that the windows were open till the jury reported it last winter. Had examined the food and never heard a complaint regarding it. He had complaints about the tobacco, and it was sent back. He thought the reports made by a correspondent of THE EXAMINER were unfounded. He thought the patients should be classified—the curable patients separated from those who are incurable, and those who can be cured given better food than the incurables.

To Dr. Conroy—He thought the meat supplied was good and wholesome. He was present when tenders were received every year except this year. The tenders were always close and the lowest was invariably accepted. Provision was made for a supply of good wholesome food for the the patients. He, as one trustee, never knew the building was uncomfortably cold or the fires banked at night until it came out in this investigation.

To Dr. Conroy—The chairman of trustees gives an order for the admission of patients. Two years ago the relatives of idiots in the asylum were asked to come for them and take them away, as the medical superintendent said they might safely be sent home. But he did not hear that any of them were removed.

To Mr. McEachern—Miss Matilda McInnis was an applicant for the position of matron, but the trustees did not think her capable. She had been an assistant there for some years.

The enquiry was resumed this morning when Mr. McPhail and Dr. Blanchard were further examined. Premier Farquharson was also examined at this session.
