FAIR WOMAN AS A BEAT

RAILROAD COMPANIES AND RESTAURANTS HER CHIEF PREY.

Strange, But Even Honest Women Do Not Think It Amis to Beat These Particular Public and Private Industries—Can Any One Explain It?

The readiness and enthusiasm with which fair women will beat the restaurant keepers, soda water dispensaries, railroad companies and all other institutions of civilization for the collection of ten cent pieces or other small change is one of the strangest phenomena of these fast striding days.

I was discussing a lunch the other day with a very charming girl. The first thing she said after removing her gloves and wiping her shoes so that they would show to the very best advantage to the other women present was—

"Well, my ride down town didn't cost me a cent. That stung! A conductor never came around for my fare."

Here she held up the five cent piece exultantly and laughed in an almost fiendish glee.

At the moment a pretty blonde girl passed our table and saluted my companion. The sight of the coin upheld seemed to inspire pleasant thoughts. She stopped and began to giggle. Then they giggled together and winked at each other.

"That reminds me of something funny, Susie," laughed the blonde girl, whose costume must have cost her husband quite a penny. "I have ridden in five horse cars to-day and it hasn't cost me a cent."

My companion instantly grew serious and knitted her pretty brows.

"How did you manage it?" she inquired sagely.

"Easily enough," retorted the blonde beauty. "In two cases the impudent conductor never asked me for my fare."

"Of course I didn't call him and beg to be taxed. Three of the cars I rode on were crowded, and when I boarded them others did so at the same time. The conductor was very busy then. He didn't know who or how many got on."

"Finally he came around with his eternal cry of 'Fare, please.' I looked straight ahead of me, for I wanted to see what he would do. He passed and re-passed collecting fares from idiotic women, who were fumbling in their purses. Each time he looked suspiciously at me. At last he said, snappishly, 'Have I got your fare, ma'am?' I looked over his head as haughtily as I could. He then said, 'Did I get your fare, lady?' he asked. 'How many fares do you want?' I replied sternly. 'At that the poor man faded away to the back platform, thoroughly crushed. Several good looking fellows glared as if they had a mind to throw him out of the window.'

The girl laughed long over this experience, but when the blonde charmer was such I remarked savagely that I thought such tactics dishonest.

"Nonsense," observed my lady, laconically, and refused any further discussion.

In due time the waiter brought me my check.

"Let me see it," said my beautiful philanthropist. Of course she got it. She studied it for a moment, and then an amused expression crept across the tempting mouth, and finally she burst into a peal of laughter.

"See," she said eagerly, bending across the table. "I have just discovered that I have paid for my dinner. Now, don't you see, it is a simple matter and has been done for me. It is none of your business, anyway."

But I took it as a first rate opportunity for a lesson in morals. I called the waiter and showed him where he had erred, and you may believe he was profoundly grateful.

As I collected my change and rose to go I noticed an ominous frown settling over her lovely brow, and I am sure the word "fool" issued between her set teeth.

"She did not speak to me for ten blocks, and when she did at last I began to fear I had lost her forever."

A Door-opening soap. Scarcely anything is lacking in the mental furniture of the average man, and he only makes him the equal of a baby 2 years old, except thinking in words; and who can argue that he is destitute of this faculty, although not possessing articulate speech.

The other evening, while I was giving my plants a drink, he came to me several times, asking to have the gate opened. "Not caring to lay down the law, I paid him attention to his teasing, and he determined to compass his purpose in another way. To the kitchen he went, and repressing it, found it not latched, but requiring some force to throw it open. Then he backed out the full width of the window, and, raising three times the weight so violently against the door as to drive it open. Very soon he reappeared with his mistress, to whom he had made his supplication, and she, without knowing of his failure with me, opened the gate and gave the little fellow his coveted freedom.

It should be explained, in regard to the story shown in opening a heavy or sliding door, that Toole acquired his experience with a fly door closed by the reaction of a spring. He found by experiments that if with his fore paw he pressed this door open just far enough to emit his body, it would spring to shut and pinch his tail; and by retracting his tail, and holding the length of a small entry he could impart momentum enough to open the door wide and thus clear his tail, at the same time, pushing out a dependent continuation. The result was that he could open the door so as to drive it open. I am inclined to think, is a little smarter than is usual in a 2-year old child.

The Use of Glass Bricks. Experiments with glass bricks for building purposes were begun in 1891 by M. Fannin, an architect of Lyons. These bricks are hollow, being blown like ordinary bottles, and are given forms—such as cubes, hexagons, etc., that permit of ready laying. A bituminous cement, with a layer of asphalt, is used. The bricks serve as double windows, giving protection against both cold and heat, and insulating against humidity and noise, and they lend themselves readily to the decoration of buildings either by their form or their color. Many applications are presented. The bricks are better than marble for most markets, and are especially adapted for hospitals, bath halls, hot houses, refrigerating establishments, and buildings where absence of windows would be an advantage. A hot-house of glass bricks costs about the same as an ordinary one, saves fuel, and resists hail.

A Warning. The ancient Persians and Egyptians, the Phoenicians and the Jews, the Romans and the Greeks, the philosophers, Jews and the Jews of the West, the Christians and the Christians, and the pagans and pagans were equally destructive of pagan and Jewish literature.

ALL THREE CURED. Neil McKelvie, with his wife and mother-in-law, afflicted with the terrible Kidney Pills—These Pills better Than Ordinary Cathartics.

Toronto, Feb. 19.—Neil McKelvie, a popular laborer of this city, has been a sufferer from chronic constipation for years. He used Doan's Kidney Pills and not only obtained immediate relief, but a permanent cure. His wife and mother-in-law were similarly afflicted, and used these pills with the same good result. Ordinary cathartics give only temporary relief and leave the patient worse than before using them. While Doan's Kidney Pills are not cathartics, their peculiar action on the liver and kidneys is such that the causes of constipation are permanently removed. These pills are manufactured by Dr. L. A. Smith & Co., Toronto, and are sold by all dealers, or will be mailed on receipt of price; fifty cents per box, or six boxes for $2.50.

IN A GOLDEN BEARSE

A Funeral which is Said to Have Cost One Hundred Thousand Dollars.

The steamer Oceanic, from Yokohama, which arrived at San Francisco a few days ago, brought advice concerning the burial of the late Otani Koshi, ex-chieftain of the Hong Wa temple at Kyoto. Ten thousand people composed the funeral cortege, which was reviewed by 150,000 more. Among those present were members of the imperial family, peers, representatives of various Buddhist temples and leading officials of the locality. The procession consisted of about 2,100 priests with nearly 300 acolytes and 2,000 attendants. On account of the great crowds three girders of a temporary bridge at Gojo fell and over twenty persons were thrown into the river, but no one was seriously injured.

On the bridge at the crossing of Kanogawa the crush was so terrific that many persons in order to escape death, leaped into the silted water and broke their legs. The remains of the priest were incinerated, being carried to the cemetery in a golden hearse. The cost of the funeral was about $100,000.

Too Late for the Train. It is impossible to "catch a train" when you are a minute too late, while on the other hand "catching a cold" is almost impossible to avoid.
